COOLIDGE ACTS TO PUT HIS FARM PLAN IN EFFECT

$100,000,000 Private Loan Proposed.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Paul Smith's, N. Y., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—A move of extraordinary significance is being made by the Coolidge administration, it transpired today, to put into effect, privately and unofficially, the farm relief program indorsed by the President in the last session of congress.

If this project, which is said to have been conceived by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, proves successful, powerful banking groups, insurance companies, and mortgage loan concerns will form a pool of $100,000,000 or more to be loaned to agricultural coöperative marketing organizations for financing the marketing of farm products at increased prices.

Confers With Farm Leader.

Some of the preliminary negotiations involved were disclosed today by Charles S. Barrett, head of the National Farmers' union, who came here to confer with the President at the latter's invitation on the present aspect of the agricultural problem. After a two hour conference with Mr. Coolidge at the executive office here, Mr. Barrett accompanied the President to White Pine camp as a week-end guest.

Mr. Barrett revealed that on his way to the Adirondacks he stopped in New York and talked with Wall street bankers about the plan to get the financiers and the farmers into a conference in the near future with a view to interesting the bankers in a solution of the agricultural problem. He declined to go into details and after his conference with the President said he was not at liberty to disclose the nature of their discussion.

Hoover Working on Plan.

It is understood, however, that the plan to be broached to the banking interests and other credit agencies is that which was considered yesterday by President Coolidge and Secretary Hoover. The President made it known that, in a general way, the proposition is to organize the banks, insurance companies and mortgage loan concerns into an instrumentality for extending credits to agriculture on a large scale. Mr. Hoover is now working on the plan, which in the event of its approval by the interests concerned, is expected to materialize shortly in a conference of financiers, representatives of the farmers and government officials.

The Fess bill, which was favored by President Coolidge, but which was beaten in the senate by the corn belt Republicans and southern Democrats, proposed an appropriation of $100,000,000 from the national treasury to be loaned to farmers' coöperative organizations for financing a program of surplus control.

What Fess Bill Proposed.

Under its terms, the farm marketing board would promote agreements limiting production, would allocate loans from the government fund to enable the coöperatives to purchase and hold farm products for a price plan, prevent the dumping of products on the market, and otherwise operate to prevent the surplus from establishing the price.

The President was willing to accept this plan, but was unalterably opposed to the corn belt plan of surplus control embodied in the McNary-Haugen bill, which he pronounced price fixing and economically unsound.

After conferring here with the President a few weeks ago, Senator Fess [Rep., O.] indicated that there has been no abatement of opposition on the part of the administration following in congress to the McNary-Haugen bill. He said there would be renewal of the effort to put through the Fess bill when congress reassembles. The proposition which the administration is now considering is that it is possible to accomplish privately and unofficially all that would be accomplished had the Fess bill become a

Only Adequate Financing Needed.

There are numerous farmers' coöperative organizations already operating, and the only farm relief legislation passed at the last session of congress creates a coöperative marketing division in the department of agriculture for the express purpose of promoting the formation of more and stronger coöperatives.

All that these coöperatives need is adequate financing to realize the objects of the Fess bill. If the bankers, insurance companies, and mortgage concerns were willing to provide the fund, the financiers and farm coöperatives, it is suggested, might, with-

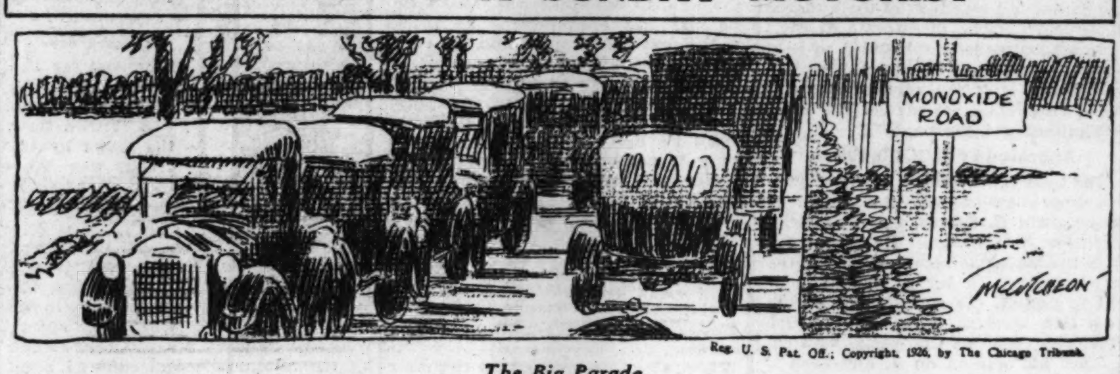
THE LOG OF A SUNDAY MOTORIST



Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1926, by The Chicago Tribune.

The Big Parade.

9 a. m.—Weather good. Barometer steady. Soon after breakfast brought the flivver to an anchor at sidewalk. Took on cargo, consisting of one basket of grub, a thermos bottle of hot coffee, some tobacco, and a Sunday paper for distribution over the landscape later on.

9:30 a. m.—Weather improving. Much delay in getting passengers on board, especially one third class passenger who wanted to take dog on cruise. Petition denied, resulting in one broken heart—otherwise no damage. Many other voyagers have same idea about using up this fine day for motoring. Saw a car with license number over 1,100,000. Will meet all the others later in the day.

He Wanted to Take His Dog.

10 a. m.—Weather still improving. Making slow headway with outbound current. Delicate work piloting. A little love tap on the accelerator bounces my craft against the stern of the car ahead. A sudden stop gives you a jolt from the car behind. Also comments of a personal nature from driver of said cars.

11 a. m.—Log shows twelve knots in last hour. Nearly everybody outward bound. Still in suburbs, but will tack soon and make westing out to the great open spaces where there is plenty of sea room. May increase velocity to twenty knots. All passengers in good spirits. Broken heart repaired.

Stymied by a Truck.

12 noon.—Sun over the foreyard. Stopped to take observation. Found a pleasant spot in forest preserve. Brought flivver to anchor under spreading trees. Many other craft anchored alongside. From a nearby Hot Doggery secured a festoon of wienies, had lunch, a smoke, and a nap. Read and distributed newspaper.

2 p. m.—Under way again. Current something fierce. Got stymied by a slow going truck and tried for twenty minutes to forge past. No chance. Cement road too narrow. Whenever I tried a spurt around his port side, more cars bore down on me and I had to fall back behind the truck again. Began to think the back side of that truck would be the only scenery we'd see the rest of the day.

3 p. m.—Hooray! Truck turned in at a road house and we got past. These narrow concrete roads may be all right for week days, but for Sunday cruising, NO! They've got a two car beam for a four car cargo.

4 p. m.—We are now far out in the country, but the stream of traffic is just as thick. They ought to change the name of this road from concrete to congested. Slowly we edge ahead, with the slowest car acting as pacemaker. Once in line, it's hard to get out without getting bumped or cussed, or both. I haven't been able to take my eyes from the uninspiring rear of the car ahead in the last hour. My chief mate said the scenery was lovely. I tried to grab a quick glance at it and somebody in the car behind yelled in my ear, "Hey, you scenery lovin' boob, keep your eyes on the road!" After that I had to have the chief mate describe anything nice along the way.

The Chief Mate Described the Scenery.

5 p. m.—Warped the flivver out of the main stream and came to an anchor. Nearly exhausted. Sunday cruising is certainly hard work on these narrow concrete roads. Of course, I could take a chance and kill a few folks, but that is less enjoyable than going slow. Terribly depressed by the thought that I have to work my way back through all that endless chain of autos. Third class passengers tired and cross. One is crying for his dog. Bought him a hot one and crisis is passed.

6 p. m.—Homeward bound. Everybody else also. A narrow escape every five minutes. When I get home I'm going to devote all my future political activities to voting for anybody who advocates forty foot roads. When we get roads that wide there will be some fun for us boobs who can motor only on Sundays.

FEAR ANOTHER SHIP SUNK IN STORM; 47 LOST

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Forty-seven fishermen were missing tonight—a week after the storm which now is believed to have struck the Nova Scotia fishing industry the most disastrous blow in loss of lives and ships in recent history.

While government searchers today abandoned hope for the twenty-five members of the crew of the Lunenberg schooner, Sylvia Mosher, grave fears were expressed for the first time for the La Havre schooner, Sadie Knickle, and her crew of twenty-two. The Sadie Knickle, long overdue, was last seen near the Sylvia Mosher off Sable island before the storm. It was feared both crews had perished in the hurricane that wrecked the Sylvia Mosher.

"There is practically no hope that any of the crew are alive," said Capt. Sutherland of the government steamer Lady Laurier, which returned today after an unsuccessful search for survivors of the Sylvia Mosher wreck.

The Lady Laurier searched through seas strewn with wreckage. It picked up battered dories from the Sylvia Mosher and the Mary Ruth, a craft that barely escaped the Sable island sand after all her gear and boats had been swept away.

QUARRELS WITH HUSBAND; LEAPS IN RIVER; SAVED

Brooding over a quarrel with her husband and because of continued illness, Mrs. Norma Bruner, 28 years old, 639 North Dearborn street, attempted to end her life late last night when she jumped into the river from the Dearborn street bridge.

A witness rushed to the fire department house at 213 North Dearborn street and summoned Battalion Chief Joseph Mackey and Policeman Charles Kick of the traffic division, who rescued the woman. She was taken to the Central police station.

When questioned by Lieut. James Sculley Mrs. Bruner told about the quarrel with her husband. She was held in the women's annex of the South Clark street station.

Beauty Spot Safety Isle for Wacker Drive

Plans for a landscaped safety island, 218 feet long, to be placed at the widened juncture of Wacker drive and Wabash avenue were made public yesterday by John J. Sloan, president of the board of local improvements.

The concrete island, constructed in an oval design 90 feet wide at its east end and tapering down to 25 feet, is to be a substitute for the proposed memorial fire station project, abandoned last March on the ground that it would block traffic and ruin the vista of the drive.

Plans Special Lighting.

The safety island, however, according to Mr. Sloan, will be one of the attractive features of the thoroughfare. Its decorated light standards, 22 feet in height, will not shut off the view in either direction, he says, while there is to be 93 feet of pavement on either side for the passage of cars.

In the center of the large end of the oval will be a circular plot, to be planted temporarily with grass and flowers. Later, perhaps in two years, it will be occupied by a statue or fountain provided by the Ferguson fund.

Surrounding the grass plot will rise four ornamental lamp posts, each bearing five electric lamps. Concrete seats will be built at the base of each. Low steps will lead up from these to the narrow end of the island to be flanked with two pillars, bearing bronze name plates for the names of public officials, year of the drive's completion and other data.

Sidewalk Outside of Island.

A granite and Bedford stone railing will encircle the entire island and outside of that there is to be a sidewalk twenty feet wide. This sidewalk may be removed in case heavy traffic calls for more street space, Mr. Sloan explained.

It is planned to have the island finished shortly after the completion of the Wabash avenue-Dearborn street segment of the drive, the last strip, which is under construction. Dedication of its tablets probably will be the climax of the formal opening ceremonies.

Progress on the drive is still more than two weeks ahead of schedule, Mr. Sloan said. The opening ceremony probably will take place some time in October, or at the latest Nov. 1.

Wounded Youth Seeks Aid as Police Hunt Robber

Francis Teas, 25 years old, 2125 Larrabee street, walked into the Montrose avenue hospital early this morning and asked to have a bullet wound in his right side treated. He asserted that robbers had attacked him. A little earlier, however, Lieut. John Ryan had fired at a man whom he found stripping an automobile of its accessories at Magnolia avenue and Ainslie street. The police are investigating to determine whether Teas was struck by one of Ryan's bullets.

SHAME SUICIDE BALKED; POLICE HUNT RAPISTS

Injuries Are Fatal to Miss Pratcher.

BULLETIN.

Two more cases of attacks on young girls were reported early today as police began a city-wide roundup of rapists in an attempt to halt the wave of assaults.

Hudson avenue police started searching for a gray haired man about 50 years old after a 12 year old girl on the near north side reported having been kidnaped on the street and taken for an auto ride to outlying parts of the city. According to the girl she was attacked.

In the second case a 15 year old girl was picked up in the 3900 block on Elston avenue and taken 45 miles into the county, where she was attacked. She was taken to a Chicago hospital in a serious condition. George Dized, 3143 Greenview avenue, and Willam Bradley, 616 Barry avenue, were arrested.

Mildred Pratcher, 21 years old, who was tossed from an automobile Thursday night when she resisted an attempt of two young morons to attack her, died last night at the Englewood hospital. Her skull had been fractured in her fall from the car.

At her bedside when she died was Helen McInerney, 20 years old, of 516 West 41st street. Miss McInerney, also a victim of an attempted attack by the men, rushed from the hospital and through a neighbor relayed a call to her mother saying that she intended to commit suicide because of the disgrace.

Suicide Attempt Balked.

The police were notified and a watch was placed on the lake shore. A little more than an hour later the girl was found near a hospital on the south side and her attempt at self-destruction was balked.

Only a few hours earlier Chief of Police Collins, aroused by a series of recent attacks on women, commanded the entire police force to wage a relentless war on rapists.

Police Hunt Attackers.

The two men who tossed her from the automobile, known only as Frank and Bill, are being sought.

As a further warning to attackers, Judge Emanuel Eller gave James Q. Allen, 18 year old negro, a forty year sentence in the penitentiary for attacking Mrs. Jeanette Beckheim, 13930 South Wabash avenue. The judge overruled a motion for a new trial.

Meanwhile a youth had confessed to Chief Leroy Davidson of the county highway police that he was one of three who had attacked two Chicago girls in the forest preserve near the Des Plaines river ten days ago.

He is Albert Pietak, 25 years old, of 117 South 26th avenue, Bellwood. He was identified by the girls after a gray suit, worn by one of the attacking trio, was found in his room. He denied at first any connection with the crime, but broke down under questioning.

Names Two as Companions.

He named his companions. They are Joseph Wyallios, 155 21st avenue, and Charles Carr, 914 22d avenue, Melrose Park. They have been sought persistently by the Chicago police and charges have been made that Chief of Police Pein of Melrose Park declined to aid in the search for them. Pietak asserted that a third man named in the charges was guiltless. He is Michael Derrico, 113 21st place, Melrose Park.

The three young men were driving through Melrose Park in his automobile, Pietak said, when they were hailed by the girls and their escorts, who were about to board a street car. One of the girls motioned to them, he said, and he turned the car around and drove back to talk to them.

Says Escort Encouraged Them.

One of the girls' escorts came over, he continued, and told them if they were looking for "a good time" to pick up the girls. He had been out with them, Pietak said the youth told him, and said they "were all right."

The girls and their three escorts then got into the car and they drove west. No one raised an objection when he turned off the main highway

Catholics Win Mexico Free Speech Fight

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Mexico City, Aug. 14.—The Catholic Church in Mexico has virtually won its fight for free speech in opposition to President Calles' decree of July 2.

And as the Catholic victory on this point becomes more assured, the country is growing calmer, dispelling the fears of revolution against the government for its enforcement of restrictive laws against the church.

Rather strangely, the press of the United States has been largely responsible for the church's partial victory.

U. S. Press Aids Both Sides.

The American press has done what the Mexican press did not or could not do. It has furnished a free field to all comers with the result that Mexicans have expressed themselves abroad much more fully and accurately than they could at home. It has forced a certain amount of liberality on both sides in the heat of one of the bitterest struggles in Mexican history. As a result both sides have declared against an attempt to win the struggle through revolutionary activities.

The metropolitan papers, which took pretty much to cover during the heat of the church struggle and fought shy of religious news either from the government or episcopate, have again crawled out of retirement and begun publishing extensive reports of the struggle. This probably is due to the fact that the church seems to have won the battle for the right of public expression over the decree of July 2, which practically prohibited such expression.

Refuse to Prosecute.

The refusal of the government to prosecute the bishops for their pastoral letter, announcing the withdrawal of the priests from the churches, has given the papers courage. They also have been greatly encouraged by the announcement of the government yesterday, that it would not prosecute Archbishop Mora y del Rio of Mexico for his statements to an American newspaper correspondent, which, the minister of the interior charged, violated the constitutional clause forbidding priests to criticize the government.

Although the church is not publishing the daily religious organ, it is continuing to broadcast circulars and dodgers by the millions, unmolested, in direct contravention to the decree of July 2.

Third Sunday Without Priests.

Mexico City, Aug. 14.—(AP)—With the religious situation still deadlocked Mexican Catholics are preparing for their third Sunday without priests officiating in the churches. It will be an important day in the Catholic calendar—feast of the Assumption.

The government announces that fourteen priests have accepted the religious regulations. In each case the bishops have excommunicated the priests, although the government declares that the churches have been returned to their charge.

Sheffield Sails for U. S.

Vera Cruz, Aug. 14.—(AP)—The American ambassador, James R. Sheffield, arrived from Mexico City this afternoon and boarded the steamer Monterey, which will sail for New York tonight. The ambassador would say no more than that he was bound for Washington and that he intended to return to Mexico in November.

LEAVES TO AID NUNS.

Father Will Griffin of the Church Extension society has been sent by Cardinal Mundelein to the Mexican border to assist Mexican nuns who have been forced to leave or who have fled from Mexico.

DEFENDS CITY ON CHARGE OF LAKE DIVERSION

Visions Conference to Put It Over.

Two vast projects of prime importance to Chicago received the unqualified support of the national administration as voiced by Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, yesterday.

1. At Hammond, Ind., last night, the secretary declared that Chicago is not responsible for lake water diversion and that engineers, not lawyers, should solve the problem.

2. Mr. Hoover, in an interview in Chicago, urged the city to be prompt in building commercial airports, in view of the city's manifest destiny as the hub of air transport.

Chicago found a robust defender in the Coolidge cabinet as represented by Herbert Hoover yesterday when Mr. Hoover plainly declared that the blame for lake level diversion cannot be laid at Chicago's door.

The secretary came here from a conference with President Coolidge at White Pine camp. He is on his way to the northwest for a series of conferences on problems of his department, and later a vacation outing in the mountains.

Chicago might be blamed for about one-sixth of the twenty-eight inch drop in lake levels because of diversion through the drainage canal, but it cannot be accused of causing climatic conditions that have brought about 20 inches of the fall or be held responsible for the three to four inch lowering as a result of Lake Huron's enlarged outlets, he said.

Mr. Hoover spoke last night at Hammond, Ind., before the chamber of commerce and the Calumet Seaways association on the general topic of inland waterway development, declaring it to be the nation's greatest opportunity for positive progress.

Remarks Viewed as Important.

But while his speech was appreciated for the completeness with which he discussed inland water routes and what they mean to the nation and particularly the great middle west, his observations on the Chicago diversion question, long fought in congress and the courts, was viewed as exceptionally important.

"We," said Secretary Hoover, speaking from the national and governmental standpoint, "should be as much concerned with the five-sixths of the drop in lake levels as we are with the one-sixth which it is proposed to remedy in the courts.

"I ask all the lake region to consider that before the controversies go further we had better spend our money on cement and steel rather than on lawyers.

Falling for Seven Years.

"During the last seven years the levels of our lakes have been steadily falling. A drop of two to three feet in water levels has greatly impaired the traffic, for the depth in our lake harbors and connecting canals has been decreased by that amount.

"It is computed that the loss in transportation on the lakes during the last season alone amounted to upwards of $19,000,000 because of shrunken depths.

"The first necessity in any discussion is to get the facts. Our engineers are engaged in a careful study of the whole lake levels question, the causes of fluctuations and their remedy. In a general way the information so far developed shows that the levels of Lakes Michigan and Huron are down about 28 inches below an historical datum.

Climatic Cycle Major Cause.

"Of this amount five inches is said by the engineers to be due to the Chicago diversion, between three and four inches due to the over-enlargement of the outlets of Lake Huron, and the balance due to the climatic cycle. Lake Erie has suffered less severely and at this moment seems to be down much less than Huron and Michigan, probably due to the emptying of the lakes above through the enlarged outlet at the St. Clair river.

"The question is therefore one of great complexity. Chicago cannot be held responsible for the climatic cycle or the increased flow through the St. Clair river from Huron to Erie.

"We are well advised at Washington of this fall in lake levels. Protests from our own lake cities and lake states and from Canada, all directed at Chicago; litigation in our courts, bitter denunciation in the press and by public bodies—all these are showered upon us daily.

"It is plain that Chicago must have some water from the lakes. Quarrels concerning water quickly get from the realm of engineering into the realm of emotion. The real question is to hold more water in the lakes. Lawyers and courts cannot hold it there—but the engineers can.

"Our United States engineers tell us—and we have the best engineer corps in the world—that they can restore the level of the lakes by curtailing the outflow at Niagara until the basins fill up. They tell us that proportionately to the gigantic outflow it is a small job.

"I am in hopes that we may be able to enter upon friendly discussion with our Canadian friends on these many problems of the lakes.

"I believe that on examination by reasonable men bent on solution it will be found that there is complete mutuality of interest between the two countries in these matters, and that we shall be able to propose solutions of cement and steel which will protect all the cities and interest on the lakes, whether in Canada or the United States, including Chicago."

Analyzes Waterway Plans.

Mr. Hoover prefaced his discussion of the lake level question with a thorough analysis of the potentialities of the proposed 9,000 mile consolidated Mississippi waterway system traversing twenty states and the Great Lakes system. The former system, he said, now lies in many disconnected segments.

"Our engineers advise me that, given the appropriations, we can within five years complete a depth of nine feet connecting Chicago and Pittsburgh with New Orleans, that we could coincidentally complete a depth of six feet over the rest of the system, much of it to be some day deepened to nine feet. They advise me that at these depths the broken links today aggregate less than 2,000 of the whole 9,000 miles. Two-thirds of the job has been done, but in disconnected segments.

Importance of Lakes System.

"The great lakes system is an equally important part of this whole problem, for it presents the possibility for cheapened transportation for import and export of grain, raw materials and other goods to Europe and the north Atlantic for twelve or fifteen states, also in the heart of the midwest.

"The lakes today are the greatest inland transportation system in the world. But at present traffic to the sea has to pass through bottle necks of 11 or 12 foot canals. We know from an engineering point of view that it is entirely feasible to make every lake port an ocean port by deepening these canals to 25 or 30 foot shipways. And a 25 foot waterway will admit seven out of eight of all oceangoing vessels that come to our harbors.

"Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, and all their hinterland of states would at once come many cents per ton nearer to the seaboard and world markets. This system for oceangoing ships would comprise more than 3,000 miles of routes and give the midwest its needed outlet to the Atlantic.

Joint Inquiry Nearly Done.

"But great as this accomplishment will be, the unlocking of the great lakes system to the sea is of first importance. At my suggestion two years ago we entered on an agreement with the Canadian government for a joint and conclusive engineering investigation of the St. Lawrence route. Our engineers also are making a comprehensive engineering review of the shipway route across New York state. These investigations will be completed within a few months.

"I am advised by our engineers that they can complete the channels of the Mississippi system to working depths at present planned for less than $125,000,000. It is yet too early to forecast the cost of the shipway from the lakes to the sea.

"For a country with an annual income two thousand times this sum every five years and with the issues at stake, certainly the improvement of the Mississippi and its tributaries is not much of a gamble. Nor would I exclude the waterway from the lakes in this expression. If the projects succeed they will return economic benefits far in excess of the cost every year.

More Facilities Needed.

"And even did they not save a cent on freight rates—which they will—it would still be worth doing, for we must provide more transportation facilities for the future of our country as a whole. Already our great railway gateways and terminals are showing signs of congestion.

"Their traffic in 25 years has grown from 114 billion ton miles to 338 billion ton miles, nearly triple. At a much less rate of increase we must within another quarter of a century provide for expansion in facilities to handle at least double what we are moving today.

"Our present railways will obviously be inadequate for that task. The expansion of railway terminals to accommodate the growth of the next quarter of a century will be accomplished at enormously increasing cost because of the increase of land values in our cities, and thus the cost of the added terminals.

Waterways Help Solve Problem.

"And the waterways, because they have already continuous terminals spread along the whole water fronts of our towns, go far to solve the problem of increased terminals and crowded streets.

"Thus, if we would provide for the 40,000,000 of increased population that this quarter of a century will bring us we must either build more trunk line railways in the states which can be served by those waterway systems or we must improve our waterways to take part of the burden.

"I believe any study of the comparative capital outlay will show that to duplicate the capacity of this completed Mississippi and great lakes system by rails would cost three times as much as to complete the waterways."

"SPEED UP AIRPORTS"

America will not follow the European plan of subsidies in the development of commercial aviation, Secretary Hoover declared.

And for Chicago, destined to be the aviation hub of the nation, Mr. Hoover had a message that this city must provide adequate air port facilities promptly. The government and private enterprises will do the rest in the speedy development of air transportation.

In interviews he spoke of the nation's air program which he discussed with the President Saturday.

Air Ports Up to Cities.

"In Europe, commercial aviation has been developed on subsidies ranging from 50 to 80 per cent," Secretary Hoover said. "We are not going to give any subsidies in the United States. I believe commercial aviation can be developed here on a purely private basis and be self-supporting. The government will furnish the airways.

"The government is taking the same attitude in aviation that it takes in navigation. It will provide service to the airways the same as it does for the shipways, in the way of lighting, marking and similar services. It is up to the municipalities to furnish the air ports.

"More and more emphasis must be placed on air ports close in to the center of things. If passenger service by air is to be successful the air ports cannot be twenty-five miles out of town."

Basis for National Defense.

In the background of commercial aviation is the project for providing the government with an auxiliary defense system. By promoting aviation in the manner planned the government is actually accomplishing a saving in a rational defense preparation, Mr. Hover said.

New airways will be established as rapidly as traffic warrants, Secretary Hoover declared, for the government policy is one of full speed ahead in the development of commercial aviation.

HAMMOND DINES HOOVER

Seven hundred business men from twenty cities represented in the Calumet Seaways association attended the banquet in Secretary Hoover's honor at the Hammond Masonic temple. It was the first visit of a cabinet member to Hammond.

Gov. Ed Jackson of Indiana was among the distinguished Hoosiers present and welcomed Secretary Hoover on behalf of the state.

"Here at the foot of Lake Michigan the two great waterway systems and the railroads meet," said Henry S. Davidson, president of the Seaways association, who preceded the secretary on the program. "We want the ocean here and we want the St. Lawrence for our highway. One single industry here in Hammond will save $1,000,000 a year in freight rates."

Other cities of the Seaway association represented at the banquet included Gary, East Chicago, Whiting, Michigan City, Calumet City, Crown Point, Indianapolis, Kokomo, Laporte, and Valparaiso, in Indiana; Chicago, Dolton, Riverdale, Harvey, Highland, and Hegewich, in Illinois, and Lansing, Mich.

BOY SUFFOCATED IN SAND.

Buried by the collapse of one side of the gravel pit in which he was playing at 12100 South Dearborn street, Julius Pobackos, 9 years old, 11928 Union avenue, died before he could be extricated yesterday.

SPRAGUE ORDERS WORK RUSHED ON RIVER PROJECT

Asks Railroads to O. K. Straightening Soon.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

"Actual digging of a new channel to straighten the river must be started in November," Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, declared to his subordinate engineers.

A few minutes before the commissioner dispatched letters to the presidents of the Pennsylvania, North Western, Burlington, Western Indiana, Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, and the Rock Island railroads asking them to make the river straightening a special order of business at the September meetings of their boards of directors. The directorate of each of these railroads is scheduled to hold a session on the first Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday of next month. None of these roads has yet signed the river straightening agreement.

Approved by U. S. Engineer.

The third development in this $9,000,000 improvement was the action of Maj. Edwin H. Schulz, federal district engineer in Chicago. He forwarded with his favorable recommendation the city's application for a modified permit to unkink the river between Polk and 18th streets. This goes to Col. Spencer Crosby at Cleveland, who expresses his opinion on it, and then it goes to Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of the engineers at Washington.

William H. Mulvihill, state superintendent of waterways, has filed his approval with Maj. Schulz.

The sanitary district, however, has not yet given its consent to the plan. The point on which it is hesitating is the desire to avoid the cost of rebuilding the Taylor street bridge. This was originally constructed by the district in 1901. Now a new bridge will be necessary and the district desires that the city stand the cost. There is also some question regarding the abutments in the river of the 18th street bridge.

Sprague Summons Engineers.

Commissioner Sprague is proceeding upon the belief that everything will be ironed out. He called a conference in his office for tomorrow of City Engineer John Ericson, Thomas Philfeldt, bridge engineer; Clarence S. Rowe, and Donald N. Becker, construction engineers; Hugh E. Young, engineer of the Chicago plan commission, and E. J. Noonan, engineer of the railway terminal commission.

The commissioner wants plans and specifications prepared at once for digging the new channel, building of docks, the moving of old bridges and the construction of new ones—in fact, he wants working plans for all things necessary to complete the improvement. He wants an estimate of the time required to prepare the plans and drawings and the advertisements to get in bids. The commissioner is almost certain to issue some orders on this subject tomorrow. Action at once is regarded as imperative.

Permit May Expire.

The original permit for the river straightening was issued, as is customary, by the war department, but in connection therewith was an act of congress. This permit expires Dec. 31 and because of the congressional action its extension is doubtful unless there has been a substantial start on actual construction. That is the reason for the commissioner's haste.

The estimated cost of the river straightening is $9,194,932, of which the city will pay $1,748,736 and the railroads the remaining $7,446,196. This major part will be contributed as follows: $2,981,170 by the Baltimore and Ohio, $2,819,229 by the New York Central and the Rock Island lines jointly; $796,599 by the Rock Island individually, $748,499 by the Pennsylvania and $100,699 by the Western Indiana.

For the first year's construction each contributor will advance his proportion of $500,000, then $1,000,000 the second year, and the remainder the third year. The city has appropriated its share for the first year's work and the commissioner of public works desires to get into a position as soon as possible to ask the railroads to hand over their share. According to the engineering advice he has received, the commissioner is convinced that the job can be completed within the allotted three years.

Can't Stop It Then.

Perhaps he has another thought in the back of his head: If he gets the job well started it cannot be stopped even if there is a change in the city administration at the next mayoralty election.

Then, also, the sooner that the river straightening is started, the sooner will disappear any excuse of the south side railroads for delay in presenting their plans for a railway terminal. The roads know, with the consummation of the agreement, just how much land to a square foot they will have upon which to plan a new terminal.

WOUNDED SHERIFF TOSSES GUN TO PAL TO CAPTURE KILLER

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Joe Morris, 34, a farm hand, today shot and killed his brother-in-law, Arthur T. Page, 53, farmer, near here. Wayne Horning, under sheriff, was shot in the right arm as he and Morris fought a revolver duel. Horning, sheltered by a large stump, then threw his pistol to Ed Rooney, assistant county attorney, who severely wounded Morris.

BOY DIES, THREE HURT WHEN AUTO RUNS INTO TRUCK

Two Other Deaths Raise Year's Toll to 509.

BARBARA WHEELAND.

PATRICK KILLEEN.

A baby was fatally injured and his father and two other men were hurt last night when an automobile crashed into the rear of a truck standing at 84th street and Ashland avenue. The death and two others during the day increased the county motor fatality toll for the year to 509.

The boy, who was thrown from the truck by the crash, was Wesley Pitts, 12 years old, colored, 6200 South Ada street. His father, Wesley Pitts Sr., colored, had stopped the truck to inspect a tire when the accident occurred. The elder Pitts and John Bershel, 6402 South May street, who was standing nearby, were struck by the automobile and suffered skull fractures. George Fason, 5553 Maryland avenue, driver of the car, was only slightly injured. He was held by police.

Clifford Ross, 6 years old, 7659 South May street, died in Auburn Park hospital of injuries received when he was struck by a truck while runing across May street near his home. Charles Voelker, 2024 Ruble street, driver of the truck, was held.

Patrick Killeen, 45 years old, 150 West 59th street, died of injuries received when he was struck by a motor truck at 71st street and Racine avenue. The truck driver was William Bain, 3514 Lowe avenue.

Anthony Janatte, 23 years old, 10813 Bentley avenue, suffered a fractured skull when he fell from the running board of an automobile at Torrence avenue and 109th street. He was taken to South Chicago hospital.

Pedestrian Hurt; May Die.

O. B. Steltler, 42 years old, 1707 South Parkside avenue, was probably fatally hurt when he was struck by an automobile driven by Emil Kloth, 1635 North Major avenue, at North and Central avenues. Kloth was arrested.

News of the death in an automobile mishap of 4 year old Barbara Wheeland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wheeland, 847 Montrose avenue, reached Chicago friends of the family last night from Denver, where the accident occurred. Mr. Wheeland was driving his family over a country road near a ranch where they had been visiting when the car struck a deep rut. The child, riding in the rear seat, was hurled out into the road, receiving injuries that caused her death.

SEIZE SUSPECT FOR $2,000 DEATH THREAT LETTER

Police of the Sheffield avenue station last midnight were questioning Richard Peters, 4948 North Oakley avenue, following the receipt of an extortion letter demanding $2,000 by John Gayer, 1246 Nelson street, a building contractor.

Gayer found the letter, stamped but not mailed, in his mail box early in the evening. The $2,000 was demanded on threat that it would mean his life if he did not pay it to a messenger to call later in the evening. Gayer waited until Peters arrived to get the money, then called Capt. William Stapleton and Sergt. Edward Baynes, holding Peters a prisoner in the meantime.

Peters told Capt. Stapleton he had received instructions to call at Gayer's home for a package from three young men whom he did not know, but who gave him $2 for the errand.

TRY DAUGHERTY IN SEPTEMBER IN ALIEN CASE

Dismissal of One Indictment Filed.

New York, Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Emory R. Buckner, United States attorney, filed today in the United States District court a dismissal of the indictment brought Oct. 25, 1925, which charged a $7,000,000 fraud against the government in the disposition of the assets of the alien owned American Metal company. He, in effect, exonerated of wrongdoing the foreign corporations and their official named in the indictment.

However, he asserted that through the transaction the government had been "defrauded out of the unbiased and unprejudiced services" of Col. Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian at the time, and Harry M. Daugherty, then attorney general, "because of the manner in which the claim was allowed, and because of the compensation they received from the late John T. King (former Republican national committeeman from Connecticut), for allowing it."

He announced that trial of a second indictment, brought against Col. Miller and Mr. Daugherty on May 7 last along these lines, had been peremptorily set for Sept. 7.

The American Metal company was taken over by A. Mitchell Palmer as alien property custodian, shortly after this country entered the war, on the ground that it was enemy owned. The 1925 indictment grew out of Col. Miller's later allowance of a claim submitted by the foreign capitalists through which they gained possession of $7,000,000 in cash and Liberty bonds.

70,000 APPLAUD ROUGH RIDING AT RODEO'S OPENING

Old West Lives Again on Soldiers' Field.

Thud of galloping hoofs, squeak and crunch of straining leather, and the shrill yip-yips of hard riding cowboys and cowgirls yesterday transformed Soldiers' field into a far west ranch corral with all the thrills of the finish of an old time cattle roundup.

It was the old west again—revived in colorful detail on the opening day of the second annual world's championship rodeo, brought here by the Chicago Association of Commerce. And the crowds, estimated at 70,000, cheered their approval through the four hours of the spectacular afternoon and evening performances.

For eight more days, Chicagoans may see in the Grant park arena as true a picture of cowpunchers in the strict application of their craft as the country's best known broncho busters, steer wrestlers, ropers, and trick riders can produce. More than 125 range riders are here competing for a total of $35,000 in prize money and the accompanying world's titles.

Fifty Indians in Parade.

Starting off to band music promptly at 2 o'clock, the grand entry parade, with 250 in line, swung once around the track in all their western finery. Among the cowboys and cowgirls could be distinguished the richly beaded and feathered figures of a tribe of fifty Flathead Indians from Montana. They were led by their 103 year old chief, Many Bears, whose trip to the rodeo constitutes his first visit off the reservation in fifty years.

With the parade ended, the wranglers fell to the business of riding bronchos bareback, with nothing for a grip but the knotted end of a rope, which serves in place of the forbidden halter. While pals held his protesting mount in the small stall or chute the bespurred puncher lowered himself to the horse's back, grabbed the rope, and signaled for the gate to be opened. Then horse and rider came bouncing out from the chute, the broncho's back arched like an angry cat's and the puncher waving his hat and conscientiously rolling his blunted spurs forward and back along his mount's sides to give added impetus.

Some Stick; Some Do Not.

If he maintains an upright position for thirty seconds without being flung head or feet foremost from the animal's back, he stays in the contest, and is judged for fine points of bareback riding by the three experts. Some stayed, and many did not.

This sport gave way to fancy roping. Eight cowboys, swinging their lariats in huge circles, attempted to hurl the loops over one or two of the horsemen, who charged from one end of the field to the other. One contestant, Tommy Kirnan of Mill Creek, Okla., snaked his rope over three racing riders.

The professionals were joined in part of this performance by the six Chicago school boys who bested 6,000 rivals for the junior roping titles in a pre-rodeo contest. Their victories entitle them to two weeks' vacations on western ranches at the close of the show.

Cowgirls Ride to a Tie.

The ropers were succeeded by two cowgirls in a saddled broncho riding contest. Both the entrants, Ruth Roach and Bonnie McCarroll, held their seats for the required time as their mounts reared and bucked before the cheering stands. Calf roping and hogtying followed, the best time for the day being made by Bob Crosby of New Mexico, who felled his calf in 22 2-5 seconds.

During an intermission the Flathead Indians performed some of their tribal dances to their own tom-tom music, coming down to the center of the field from the tepee village they have set up on the northern slope of the field. Different dances will be presented at each performance.

Then came the cowboy's saddled broncho riding contest, and with it one of the two casualties of the afternoon. C. M. Montgomery, a Canadian rider, was pitched head foremost off his horse and trampled, suffering a broken right arm. He was given immediate first aid in the field hospital maintained in the east stands and later was taken to St. Luke's hospital.

Relay Race Bitterly Contested.

No event on the program was more bitterly contested than the cowgirls' relay race of four laps around the track. The chief rivalry in this event is between Tad Lucas of Douglas, Wyo., and Mabel Strickland, of Hollywood, Cal., who have striven for the riding title for several years, first one and then the other snatching the honors. Miss Strickland placed first in yesterday afternoon's race.

The old feat of steer wrestling, as thrilling a stunt as the rodeo offers, followed the relay race. Mexican cattle with long horns were the human wrestlers' opponents. Everett Bowman of Safford, Ariz., felled his steer in 23 1-5 seconds, the best time for the day.

Steer riding brought the second accident of the day. Bob Askins of Isma, Mont., who last year won the title of world's champion cowboy, fell from the back of the long horned Brahman he was riding and in the mêlée that followed his left hand was torn by the animal's hoof.

Steers Charge; Men Flee.

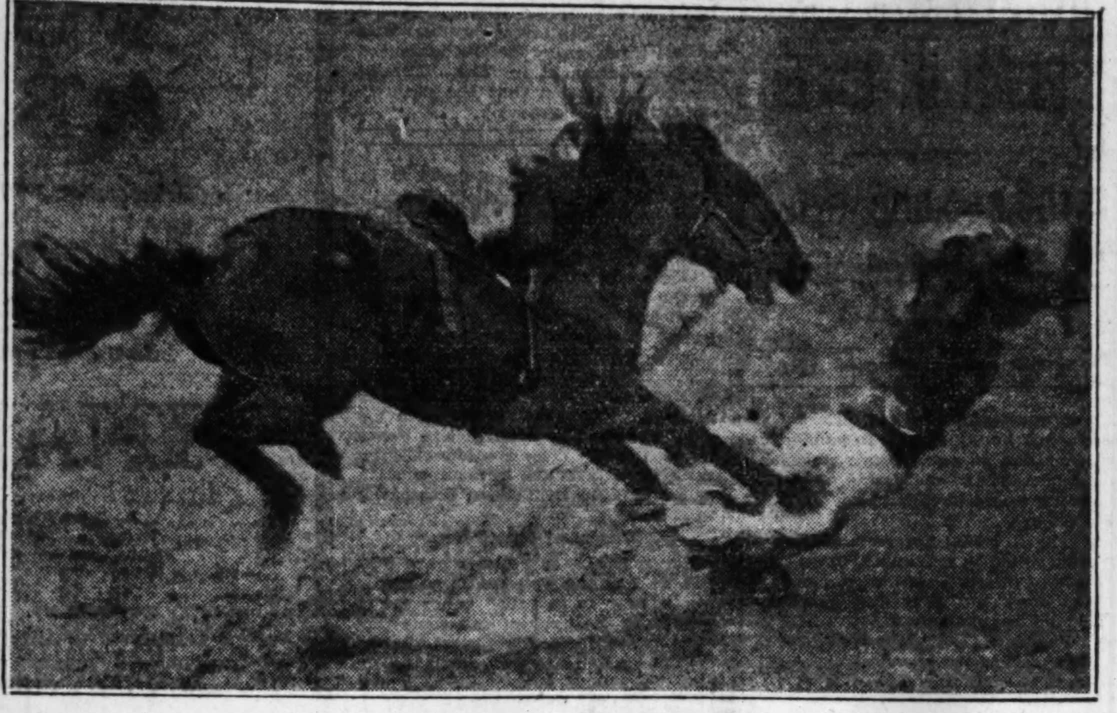
Twice during this event, riderless cattle charged the cowboys and photographers spread about the field, and a grand scramble ensued. But no one was hurt. The Brahman steers, an offshoot of the sacred cattle of India, have brass knobs on their horns to prevent their goring horses or men.

In evidence during each event was the tall mounted figure of Tex Austin, New Mexico rancher, who is director and manager of the rodeo. He saw to it that the program did not drag.

Irish Republican Leader Talks at Riverview Today

Art O'Connor, head of the Irish Republican party and claimant to the title of president of the Irish republic, will address a picnic at Riverview park today. He asserted yesterday that the Irish Free State had failed to bring freedom, either commercially or politically, to Ireland, adding that England had been unjust in keeping six Ulster counties under her own rule.

CROWD CHEERS COWBOYS AND SEES SPILLS AS RODEO OPENS



C. M. Montgomery, Canadian cowboy, received a broken arm and many bruises when he was thrown from his horse in the saddled broncho riding contest and trampled on. The camera caught him in midair. Montgomery was taken to St. Luke's hospital after the spill. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Ropes flew in many directions when Chester Byers did his stuff at the rodeo. He has been the fancy roping champion of the country for eight years and is out to retain his honors.

The spectators witnessed another spill during the steer riding contest, but Charles Johnson (above) managed to cling to the animal he was riding. He is having a hard time of it, however.

WE DON'T WANT TO BE POISONERS, ANDREWS SAYS

Is Necessary to Use Chemicals, Claim.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Brig. Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, the prohibition czar, returned here today from his trip abroad and immediately branded stories of hundreds of persons being poisoned and blinded by drinking redistilled denatured alcohol concoctions as "wet propaganda."

He readily admitted that the formulas for denaturing alcohol contained poisons, but declared that the addition of these ingredients was "necessary to make the alcohol unfit for drinking."

He denied that the quantity of wood alcohol and such chemicals as sulphurous ether used in the denaturing process was great enough to cause death and added:

"Our constant aim is to get some ingredients to put in this alcohol which by their odor and taste will warn drinkers that the alcohol is not genuine, but which at the same time will not prove poisonous to the drinkers."

[The Tribune yesterday printed four of the formulas of the U. S. prohibition department for making industrial alcohol unfit to drink. The ingredients include wood alcohol, regarded as a deadly poison, sulphuric ether, kerosene, gasoline, aniline oil, and T. N. T.]

Will Not Resign.

Gen. Andrews also took occasion to deny reports that he has any intention of resigning as had been reported before he left for Europe to confer on the smuggling situation.

Evidence that the dry czar has been prevailed upon by the administration to remain at his post, at least until after the fall elections, was given by the general when he expressed confidence that the coming session of congress will see the enactment of "helpful legislation" which should enable him to "secure the whip hand over the liquor traffic within a year."

Enthusiastic over the successful negotiations of a "gentleman's agreement" with British government officials to stamp out rum running from British ports to the United States, Gen. Andrews oulined the prohibition unit's program for the coming year as one of "concentration on the sources of the liquor traffic and development of local law enforcement against distributors."

Agreement Not Treaty.

Beyond the announcement that organization of the new division of foreign control to be created in accordance with the British agreement he negotiated, will be undertaken on Monday, Gen. Andrews was not inclined to discuss details of the agreement.

In organizing the new division he will rely to a great extent, Gen. Andrews said, on the advice of Harry T. Anslinger, American consul at Nassau in the Bahama islands.

"The agreement is not a treaty in any sense of the word," declared the general, pointing out that it will not have to be submitted to the senate for consideration and approval. "It is merely a working agreement between executives and I do not want to go into any detail of what we are going to do or how it will be done until the scheme is actually in operation.

"The very uncertainty of what we are planning to do will undoubtedly have its effect on the rum runners, and to that extent prove beneficial."

To Add More Jobholders.

Gen. Andrews contemplates the addition of another rank of prohibition enforcers to the existing staff to be known as zone supervisors, who will exercise supervisory authority over prohibition and narcotic law enforcement, as well as coast guard activities in their respective zones.

Three zones have been tentatively decided on, the west coast zone under J. L. Oftedal, chief of the special intelligence bureau of the unit, with headquarters at San Francisco; a southeastern states zone embracing the states from Florida to the Potomac river under M. O. Dunning, the collector of customs at Savannah, Ga., and an eastern states zone, including the states north of the Potomac river and through the so-called "wetter districts" of New England. No supervisor has been chosen for this district as yet.

Argentine Cyclists in Mexico En Route to N. Y.

Mexico City, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Vera Cruz reports the arrival there of two Argentine motorcyclists, Alejandro Bram and Gottlieb Schick, who are cycling from Patagonia to New York. The men have been fifteen months on the road across South America, Central America and Mexico. They plan to continue by way of Mexico City, Laredo and St. Louis, reaching New York in about two months.

RUM SOAKED FOOD ALL RIGHT; I MUST EAT, SAYS ANDREWS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, chief of the prohibition forces, disclosed today that he had perhaps gotten a little taste of liquor on his trip to London in the form of solids.

"I think the captain of our vessel on the return trip permitted some pancakes soaked in rum to be served me," Gen. Andrews said, "and I also tasted some iced sherbert which apparently had champagne in it. But I told the captain it was all right for I had to eat."

DETECTIVE HUNTS FIRE AND FINDS A BUSY BREWERY

Somewhere in Chicago men thirsted in vain for their beer last night, all because of a janitor at 1526 South Wabash avenue.

The janitor late in the afternoon stuffed the furnace full of rubbish, causing a smudge and giving Sergt. William Barron of the South Clark street station the idea there might be a fire.

Instead of a fire the detective found a fully equipped minature brewery and 1,000 gallons of Wort, the product from which beer is brewed while you wait. He found also needling apparatus, alcohol for needling, and other equipment.

And he found Joseph Fusso, 7310 Prairie avenue, said to be a co-laborer of Al Caponi, otherwise known as "Scarface Al" Brown; and Charles Bassett, 6127 Broadway, who drove up for a load.

EATS SANDWICH OF RAT POISON; RUNS, FALLS DEAD

Peter Homan, 1436 West 13th place, ended his life yesterday with rat poison which he neatly spread over two slices of bread and ate the sandwich. Homan offered a bite to Mike Ganos, 12 year old son of the head of the household on 13th place where Homan was a boarder. The child refused and ran to his father. When Ganos appeared, Homan darted out of the door to the street and fell dead about a half block away. A quarrel with his wife by a second marriage is believed to have caused Homan to take the poison.

Spain Stops Exportation of Ancient Art Treasures

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Aug. 14.—The removal of the stones of the ancient Catholic church at San Baudilio, province of Segovia Rapin, to be used in rebuilding the church on American soil, has moved the government to take measures to prevent the exportation of Spain's art treasures. The actual provisions of the measures are not made public, but a complete catalogue of monuments, paintings, decorations, and even jewels, arms and ancient costumes is planned. Such articles may be sold only by official permission.

DIES OF CANNED HEAT.

E. Hamberg, 45 years old, employé of the Poehlman Bros. greenhouses in Morton Grove, who was found dead in his quarters there yesterday morning, succumbed from drinking canned heat, according to witnesses interrogated by the county highway police.

FORT DEARBORN HEROES WILL BE HONORED TODAY

Heroes of the Fort Dearborn massacre will be honored at services to be held this afternoon under the auspices of the Daughters of 1812 at the Fort Dearborn monument, East 18th street and the Illinois Central right of way.

Members of the Chicago Historical society will tell the story of the massacre and relate the heroism of Ensign George Rohan and Sergt. Otho Hayes, two leaders in command at the fall of the Chicago garrison in 1812.

History records that Ensign Ronan died directing his men, while lying mortally wounded. Sergt. Hayes, the society asserts, was killed in a spectacular hand-to-hand fight with an Indian chief who died with the sergeant.

NAPERVILLE VOTES DOWN PARK.

In a special election held yesterday residents of Naperville, Ill., voted 922 to 328 against a proposal that a park system be started by the purchase of several thousand acres of land along the Du Page river. Opposition was based on the high cost of the improvement.

CHARGES PEORIA OFFICIALS RIDE IN STOLEN CARS

Chicago Cop Says He Traced Autos.

Sergt. Frank A. McDonald of the automobile detail of the detective bureau returned yesterday from Peoria, Ill., with a report that he found automobiles that had been stolen in Chicago in the possession of the chief of police, an assistant state's attorney and a patrolman.

He added that when he arrived in Peoria he asked the chief, J. Shirley West, to assist in a search for stolen cars and that the officer declined. McDonald's investigations were carried on with the aid of Sergt. James McGuire of the state highway police.

Eleven Autos Traced.

Eleven automobiles in all were traced to persons living in the vicinity of Peoria, according to McDonald. They were sold there by Floyd Overby, a garage owner at 5904 South Ashland avenue. Chief West said the car had been left in his care by Overby. It had been stolen from the Bohm Auto Sales company, 3023 West Madison street, and McDonald declared all the identifying numbers, except one on the rear axle, had been changed. Chief West had obtained a license under his own name from Springfield, McDonald said.

When the local detective went to the assistant state's attorney, Jess Weast, the latter refused to allow him to inspect the numbers on the car he drove. Instead he gave him a slip bearing the numbers and these, McDonald said, corresponded to the identification mark on a car stolen from Alex St. Clair, 607 West 69th street.

Policeman Gives Up Car.

Richard Claudin, Peoria policeman, gave up the sedan he was driving when McDonald showed him evidence that it had been stolen from M. G. Hillman, of 917 North Leavitt street.

Overby, alleged member of a theft ring, was arrested several weeks ago in connection with thefts of cars and is now at liberty on bonds. Chief of Police West asserted that he had purchased his car in good faith from the garageman, but declined to surrender it. Sergt. McDonald intends to lay the entire matter before State's Attorney Pratt at Peoria when the latter returns from a vacation.

COUZENS OFFERS FARM RENT FREE TO ANY ONE WHO CAN MAKE IT PAY

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—The elaborate farm of Senator James Couzens in the fashionable Bloomfield Hills section has been offered by him, rent free, to any man who can operate it and make it pay a profit. The senator even offers to pay the taxes on the 900 acres, but the person who takes over the land must be able to convince the senator that he can make money on the place.

The senator would retain for his personal use his summer home which is located on the farm, and a small acreage. This would leave about 600 acres of productive land for any kind of farming. Mr. Couzens has been unable to make the farm show a profit, but states that this must not be taken to mean that he is discouraged about the condition of agriculture. Several hundred thousand dollars have been invested in the farm, which includes farm buildings and a stable built at a cost of $125,000.

$350,000 FLORIDA REALTY GIVEN TO ELGIN ACADEMY

Trustees of the Elgin academy and junior college yesterday announced receipt of a gift of $350,000 in Chicago and Daytona Beach, Fla., real estate from Judge and Mrs. Nathaniel C. Sears of Lake Geneva, Wis., the money to be used in a $1,000,000 building program at the institution.

The gift increases Judge and Mrs. Sears' total donation to the Elgin academy to approximately $750,000 for the last 15 years. Their gifts to the school include an athletic field, a gymnasium, and $125,000 art gallery.

Mexican Mayor Deposed by His Assistant's Police

Mexico City, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Mayor Rojas of Guadalupe, Hidalgo, near Mexico City, and site of the famous Guadalupe shrine, has been forcibly deposed by the municipal vice president, Jesus Vidales. The charge against him is that he failed to make proper returns to the federal government on municipal tax collections. The arrest of Mayor Rojas was carried out by the municipal vice president, who went to the city hall accompanied by a squad of mounted police.

Macedonians, Seeking Own State, Keep Balkans at Boil

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BUCHAREST Roumania Aug. 14.—Ask a Bulgarian why his government cannot suppress the Macedonian revolutionary societies, as demanded by Jugo-Slavia, Roumania, and Greece, and he will reply: "So's your Ku Klux Klan."

Half a million Macedonians in Bulgaria and another half million scattered around the world are all organized in fraternal associations the object of which is to conserve the Macedonian nationality, language, and manners and eventually gain territorial autonomy to make themselves a small nation protected by the big powers or Balkan conventions. The Macedonian turbulence may be expected to continue as a source of Balkan conflagration until they get it.

Propaganda Is World Wide.

These impressions were gathered in an interview with Vladimir Bouliev, secretary of the national Macedonian committee at Sofia, which although professing to have no connection with the revolutionary organizations, actually is in union with 156 Macedonian fraternal societies and is the center of direction of a world-wide propaganda campaign for Macedonian aims. This agitation is spread abroad by Macedonian student societies in every world capital.

In America 54,000 Macedonians contribute to this work through the central committee of the Macedonian political organization of the United States and Canada, located at 561 W. Washington street, Indianapolis. The money collected in America is received regularly in Sofia. Much of it is distributed for charitable purposes, relieving distress of thousands of Macedonian refugees driven from their old homes in Greece and Roumania.

Seek National Identity.

"Macedonia should be a nation corresponding in the Balkans to what Switzerland is in Europe," M. Bouliev said. "The ethical Macedonian territories now are split up between Bulgaria, Jugo-Slavia, and Greece. Autonomy is the only settlement and with it must go an outlet to the sea at Saloniki. Macedonians are treated best in Bulgaria, but the Macedonian aim everywhere is to gain a national identity."

Students of the Macedonian question say the Macedonian frontier raids are conducted by young hotheads on the basis of personal grudges, but the revolutionary organizations encourage the excursions for the purpose of continually bringing the Macedonian question before world opinion. Although the raids are not officially countenanced by the fraternal societies, Macedonians everywhere worship the raiders as patriots and heroes, and protect them.

POLICE PLAN WAR ON GANGS TO END STREET SHOOTING

Former Chicago Gunman Is Slain in Detroit.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Rudie Johnson, false pretenses, sentenced to the Bridewell for one year; Joseph Bushell, larceny, sentenced to Bridewell for one year; Earl Hasly, larceny, sentenced to Pontiac reformatory for one year; Frank Gray, larceny, sentenced to Bridewell for one year; Granville Henderson, larceny, sentenced to Bridewell for one year, by Judge Thomas Lynch.

Albert Sanot, embezzlement, sentenced to the penitentiary for one to ten years by Judge Marcus Kavanaugh.

James Q. Allen, rape, sentenced to the penitentiary for 40 years by Judge Emanuel Eller.

The feud activities of gangland shifted momentarily yesterday to Detroit, leaving one man, believed a former Chicago gunman, dead in its wake while Chicago police perfected plans for a drive against booze and dope peddlers next week.

An intensive campaign, the details of which are as yet lacking, will be launched, Acting Chief of Detectives John Stege declares, in an effort to keep the warring elements in the underworld ranks on the move.

Street Fighting Must Stop.

A repetition of the free-for-all gunfight in broad daylight in Michigan avenue, resulting in the shooting of an innocent bystander, must be prevented, officials say.

"Styles have changed," commented Captain Stege. "It used to be a shot in the dark upon some remote prairie, with a dead man or two found the next morning. But Michigan avenue at noon, and sixteen shooting at once—that's going a little strong."

Four Cicero gunmen, remnants of the old Caponi crowd, closed in upon and routed with pistol fire twelve members of the Hymie Weiss-Drucci-Potatoes Kaufman faction of the north side, is the police version of the Michigan avenue clash. Drucci, fleeing with empty gun when police arrived, was the one taken into custody.

Bureau Squads Increased.

As the first move in his new gang drive Stege yesterday increased the number of his bureau squads from three to six operating in the Chicago Lawn district, scene of the recent slaying of John [Mitters] Foley, beer runner.

Stege expects the increased force to keep the enemy gangs of the south separated, if possible, and in addition to be ever alert for trace of Joe Saltis and his fugitive benchmen who have been indicted for killing Foley.

The man killed in Detroit was known there as George Louis, but investigation has convinced police that he was Louis Rosenthal, formerly of 2308 West Madison street, possessor of a Chicago police record dating back to 1918. The dead man was found to have a scar beneath the chin such as Rosenthal bore, it was declared.

Inquest into the Foley murder was continued by Deputy Coroner John J. Dedrick yesterday to Aug. 28, the deputy declining to close the case until full testimony is taken.

Saltis and his principal cohorts have "taken it on the lam," leaving the lesser lights of their "alky" family to shift for themselves, it was widely reported yesterday.

Expects More Killings.

Stege was not too optimistic in discussing his proposed new campaign against gunmen.

"More killings will occur, without doubt, despite anything we can do," he said. "But bear in mind that during the past few months the hoodlums have avoided us as much as possible. Police officers killed 26 gangsters in 1924, 60 in 1925, and 28 in the first three months of this year. This has given them food for thought."

BOY DIES OF BROKEN LEG.

A fractured leg, sustained when he fell from a tree in front of his home at 8846 South Throop street, caused the death of Charles E. Wilson, 10 years old, at the South Shore hospital today (Saturday). The accident occurred on July 17.

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICES TODAY

Memorial services for departed associates will be held by the Knights of Pythias at 11 o'clock this morning at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The Rev. Frederick T. Attwood of Minneapolis, supreme prelate of the order, will conduct the services and an address will be made of Norval R. Dougherty, supreme representative from Pennsylvania.

Visiting delegates and the women of the Pythian temple will be entertained at the Elks' memorial on Diversey parkway and Sheridan road at 3 o'clock. Business sessions will be resumed tomorrow, and Tuesday the 34th biennial convention will close, after which delegates will go to Milwaukee for the reception Tuesday evening in honor of Richard S. Witte, new supreme chancellor.

Extensive committee reports marked yesterday's sessions. No action was taken on the choosing of permanent headquarters nor on relief measures for the leper colony at the Philippines.

Seven Illinois Women Join Holy Cross Order

The Illinois women are: Marie Madigan, Anna Hartlestadt, Camilla Baheny, Hallene Schnedman, Gladys Murray, Chicago; Irene Hurley, Woodstock; Gladna Flannery, Harvard; Bernice Hurley, Woodstock.

COOLIDGE MOVES TO PUT HIS FARM PLAN IN EFFECT

$100,000,000 Private Loan Is Projected.

out much difficulty, organize the central marketing agency to handle these loans and supervise the regulation of production and marketing of products which would have been set up by the Fess bill.

The financial interests raising the fund would be reimbursed at an agreed rate of interest, as it was provided by the Fess bill that the government should be reimbursed.

President Coolidge is convinced that this plan is the soundest measure for farm relief that has been proposed up to date. He believes that if it were given a fair trial the problem of the farmers would be solved. For that reason unusual significance attaches to the moves being made by the administration to put the scheme into effect at this time.

Satisfied It Has Power.

It is understood that the administration is satisfied that it has unquestioned power under existing law to promote and supervise a credit agency of the character suggested. The operations of farm coöperatives to restrict production and combine to enhance prices of their products are already exempt from prosecution for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, having been so exempted by legislation several years ago.

If the administration should be able to put this plan into effect before the November election or even to get it well under way, the Republican leaders undoubtedly would expect it to redound to the benefit of the G. O. P., and of the President particularly.

The administration and the Republicans generally were hard hit in the corn belt by failure of the McNary-Haugen bill, for which the opposition of the President and the eastern Republicans was held responsible. It looked at one time as if the corn belt disaffection might cost the Republicans the control of the senate elected in November. Coolidge's political fortunes have been considered at a low ebb in the middle west, where Frank Lowden and Vice President Dawes seem to be favorites in farm constituencies for the Republican nomination in 1928.

Rumors of New Policy.

For several weeks there have been rumors that the President was maturing a new farm relief policy which would see the light of day some time before the fall elections. It was known that he intended to seek advice on the plan from the heads of various farm organizations. Arthur Rule, head of the national organization of vegetable and fruit growers, discussed the credit needs of his group with the President a few days ago. Now comes Mr. Barrett, at the invitation of the President, and it is understood he is to be followed by other important figures in the agricultural industry.

The President finds Mr. Barrett nearly in line with his own views of the solution of the agricultural problem. The latter is against the McNary-Haugen bill, although that measure was indorsed by the Iowa, Kansas, and Nebraska state branches of the farmers' union.

Whether Mr. Coolidge will invite Sam Thompson, head of the American Farm Bureau federation, to White Pine camp to advise on farm relief is not known. The farm bureau federation was the chief backer of the McNary-Haugen bill and was instrumental in defeating the Fess bill.

WITNESSES TO BACK UP HALL MURDER STORY

ay Seek to Revoke Bail of Rector's Widow.

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 14.—[Spe-l]—The dramatic story of the Hall-ls murders related on the witness nd yesterday by Mrs. Jane Gibson be corroborated by three other nesses, prosecuting officials declared ay.

Mrs. Gibson pointed out Henry De Bruyere Carpender and Willie Stev-s as the two men she saw at the ne of the murders. Her testimony s given at the hearing for Carpen- and Stevens, who are charged th the murder of the Rev. Edward heeler Hall and his pretty choir der, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills. Mrs. bson also identified Mrs. Frances evens Hall, the rector's widow, who now at liberty on $15,000 bail on warrants charging murder, as one those present at the scene. Carder is Mrs. Hall's cousin, and Stev- is her brother.

Three Supporting Witnesses.

The three witnesses who, it is de-red, will support Mrs. Gibson's story Willard Straub, now in the Somer- county jail in default of $3,000 bail, d Mr. and Mrs. Morris Isler of High-d Park, N. J. Straub, it is said, s within seventy-five feet of the rders and must have seen Mrs. bson if she was present. as she ims. He was committed to jail as material witness after state police tained an important statement from m in an all night examination.

Straub, it is reported, remained si-t about what he witnessed at the illips farm on the night of Sept. , 1922, in order to shield the name the woman who was with him.

Mr. and Mrs. Isler, it is said, mo-ed past the Phillips farm the night the crime. It is said they can ve important information concern- parts of Mrs. Gibson's narrative.

Assistant Attorney General Simpson, charge of the investigation, an-unced today that salient discrepan-s in the stories of witnesses had been und. He said their stories told four ars ago differed from their accounts w. At the same time, a brother of rpender issued a public statement ggesting that politics had motivated e renewed effort to solve the murder the rector and his choir leader. Sen-or Simpson, who was in New Bruns-ick when the statement was issued, ving gone there after indicating that e would seek revocation of Mrs. Hall's il; said that he might reply to the atement later.

Missing Records in Hand.

The differences in witnesses' narra-ives were disclosed by the missing Hall-Mills records which came back to he hands of the investigators at the omerville hearing yesterday. Marcus Beekman, a brother of the late Prose-utor Azariah Beekman, who handled he original investigation four years go, produced the records after state oopers had traced a telephone call he ade. They charged that he had tried sell the records to a New York news-per only a few hours before they ched him.

According to investigators, the state-nts in question, none of them gned, were those of Mrs. Louise eist Biehl and Ralph V. Gorsline, the tter a vestryman of the church of St. hn the Evangelist, of which the in clergyman was rector. A warrant arging Gorsline with being "an ac-sory after the fact" was issued last ek, but it is held unserved.

It was said that Mrs. Riehl, a former id in the Hall household, would be called Monday when the hearing in e case of Carpender and Stevens is sumed at Somerville. She testified Friday with reluctance.

Judge to Decide on Bail.

As soon as the preliminary hearing Carpender and Stevens is com-leted," said Senator Simpson, "and udge Cleary has made known his cision it will be up to Justice Gum-ere to rule on Mrs. Hall. He will the sole arbiter of her fate."

Before Senator Simpson left the Phil-s farm, which he visited today, he id that he planned to recall all wit-sses who testified yesterday, for rther examination Monday. He said at those "who have sneered at this vestigation and who have called it idiculous' will soon see what we ve been doing in a different light."

DRAGGED FROM HOME, BEATEN BY MASKED MEN

Nels Nelson, a farmer living on Lily lake, near St. Charles, was dragged from his home early yesterday by nine masked men, who accused him of being a bootlegger and beat him severely.

The men gained entrance to the farmhouse on a plea by one of them that his automobile had broken down. The gangsters bound Nelson with ropes after he had been struck on the head with a club.

He remembered the number on the automobile in which he was taken to the woods, however, and this was traced to Ralph Graves, a Batavia blacksmith, who was lodged in jail at Geneva on a charge of assault and battery. Graves denied being in the party that attacked the farmer.

About two weeks ago Dr. R. C. Taylor of Elburn, Ill., reported a similar experience. Twenty men took him to a lonely spot and accused him of selling whisky. He denied this, and the men warned him that if he did sell it he would be whipped.

Stabs in Battle with Burglar Kill Merchant

Joseph Greenberg, 44 years old, a dry goods merchant at 2421 West Madison street, died in the Garfield Park hospital yesterday of stab wounds received when he grappled with a burglar he surprised in the act of ransacking his home above the store, last Wednesday. The burglar fled empty handed, leaving the ice pick with which he did the stabbing and his cap.

FRANCE WILL CUT ARMY ON RHINE TO AID FINANCES

Plans Move to Get More German Gold.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 14.—It practically was confirmed today that the French army of occupation on the Rhine will be decreased by 6,000 men during September, in conformity with the English-French-Belgian agreement and Germany's request.

The economy thus effected will go toward reparations, giving France a larger amount of gold marks for use in stabilizing the franc.

The present French strength in the Rhineland is 60,000.

Berlin Hopes for More.

Berlin expects to obtain further material reductions of the army of occupation during the winter after joining the league of nations next month, THE TRIBUNE is informed.

The German ambassador to Paris, Herr von Hoesch, is conferring with Foreign Minister Aristide Briand along these lines.

Germany also seeks assurance from the great powers that it alone will be granted a permanent council seat during the forthcoming session of the league and Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany has sent word to Paris, London and Rome that he does not intend to send a delegation to Geneva unless he receives formal assurances of admission and a place in the council. The Germans wish to avoid repetition of the embarrassing situation at the March session, when they waited on the league's doorstep for a fortnight and then had the door banged in their faces.

Plan to Curtail Imports.

A restrictions committee, appointed to draft a plan to curtail consumption of imported articles in order to strengthen the franc, met for two hours this morning to examine measures which are likely to aid the fiscal situation.

Neither Chairman Louis Barthou nor committee members would discuss the situation, but THE TRIBUNE is informed that the original project for issuing bread cards has been abandoned definitely. It is expected that the most severe control over gasoline consumption will be enforced, with efforts to curtail joyriding and pleasure trips.

Moody Institute Unifies Day and Night Classes

Opening of both night and day schools under a unified administration was announced yesterday by the Moody Bible institute. Registrations will be made September 7, the full time day classes beginning on September 9 and evening work the following day. In 1925 the registrations for night work totaled 1,140, only 94 less than the daytime enrollment.

POLICE ENJOINED IN NIGHTLY RAIDS ON LINCOLN CAFE

Wife of Owner Died Mysteriously.

Charging that police have raided the Lincoln cafe, 1652 North Clark street, nightly for the last month, Maurice C. Jacobson, proprietor, yesterday obtained an injunction from Circuit Judge Oscar M. Torrison restraining any interference in his conduct of the place.

In reply, Assistant Corporation Counsel James McCarthy declared that he would have to dissolve the injunction. He said he would present proof that the cafe is one of the most disreputable in the city. There will be another hearing next Thursday.

Wife Mysteriously Killed.

A year ago the charred body of Jacobson's wife was taken from the lake after another restaurant he owned on Rush street had been mysteriously burned. Police never solved the mystery of her death. She had been with her husband and some friends in the Lincoln cafe and left to go to the Rush street place, over which she had living quarters.

When her body was taken from the lake there was no water in the lungs and physicians said the woman had been burned to death. Later a gasoline-soaked rag was found in the basement of the restaurant, which was burned, and investigators suspected that the fire was of incendiary origin. Jacobson was questioned but released.

Began Nightly Raids.

Jacobson told Judge Torrison that his restaurant had enjoyed a high reputation in Chicago for thirty years. About a month ago police began searching the place night after night hoping to find liquor, but found none, he said.

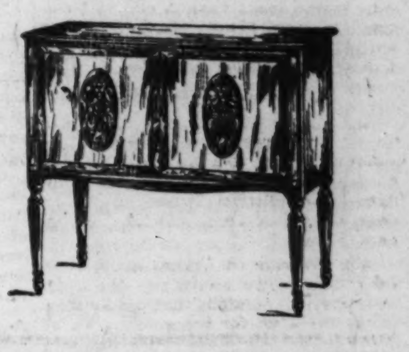
Among the famous furniture designers of the 18th Century, Hepplewhite stood in the first rank. He had a rare gift. His work embodied extreme beauty and delicacy of design without sacrificing strength and durability.

This dining room group preserves all the characteristics of this master craftsman.



All of the structural parts are of solid walnut. All the flat surfaces are of the choicest walnut veneer, and further embellished by panels of marquetry made after color plates by a European artist.

M'DONALD JURY WILL NOT PROBE SANITARY BOARD

Also Declines Investigation of Forest Preserve.

There will be no special grand jury investigation of the sanitary district nor of the forest preserve district, it was decided yesterday. Special State's Attorney Charles A. McDonald and the grand jurors were convinced such an inquiry was beyond their powers, they having been appointed to investigate only vote frauds, the alleged relation of politics to the beer and booze industry and such murders by gangsters as the killing of Assistant State's Attorney William H. McSwiggin.

Prosecutor McDonald had previously stated he would await the report of the audit of the sanitary district's books made for the Association of Commerce before deciding what should be done. William R. Dawes, president of the Association of Commerce, announced yesterday that the audit had been completed and referred to a subcommittee, which will make a public report within a short time.

Examine District's Audit.

Engineers have been studying the audit for some weeks at the request of Mr. Dawes. It was said they reported to him that all contracts let by the sanitary trustees contained a provision that if certain contingencies arose the contractor could charge more—and the contingencies did arise in most instances.

Shelby Singleton of the Citizen's association had requested action regarding the purchases of land for the forest preserve. He said certain favored persons made large profits on the transactions and President Anton J. Cermak of the county board challenged him to prove it, saying the books were open to all.

The decision not to investigate either of those public bodies is said to be final. It is believed that when the present special grand jury is discharged at the end of this month that it will have no successor.

Lindsay to Succeed Lynch.

Chief Justice Thomas J. Lynch, who appointed the special state's attorney and grand jury, will finish his term as chief justice this month and Judge William J. Lindsay will succeed him. Prosecutor McDonald's tenure of office will of course continue until all the indictments brought by the special jury are disposed of.

The plan is said to be that the present body will finish investigation during this month of most of the frauds committed during the April primary. In view of the recent decision that the primary was illegal and therefore void—which would automatically dismiss all the indictments arising from it if the Supreme court confirms the decision—it is not thought that the inquiry will be prolonged.

Prosecutor McDonald and his two assistants, Attorneys James C. O'Brien and Lloyd D. Heth, will be prepared next month to begin prosecutions of the 200 or more indictments which will be then awaiting. There may be delay, they admitted, due to the impending ruling of the Supreme court.

HANGS HERSELF IN GARAGE.

Despondent over a recent illness, Mrs. Anna Schmur, 49 years old, 4422 North Francisco avenue, committed suicide yesterday by hanging herself in her garage.

SAVED IN LAKE

Maxine Kellogg, 13 years old, Girl Scout, who revived Rearden boy after being taken from lake.

DIVES 7 TIMES IN LAKE AND SAVES DROWNING CHILD

While hundreds of bathers watched, E. E. Biglow, 7727 North Ashland boulevard, a reporter on the Evanston Review, swam a quarter mile out into the lake at Calvary cemetery beach yesterday afternoon and rescued William B. Rearden Jr., 9 year old son of William B. Rearden, 7631 Greenview avenue.

The child waded out beyond his depth and was carried out by an undertow before near-by bathers could save him. Biglow, who was swimming, heard the screams of women and children and hurried out. He had to dive seven times before he was able to bring up the child.

On the beach Maxine Kellogg, 13 years old, 7629 Greenview avenue, a Girl Scout, used the Schaeffer method of resuscitation 20 minutes before the boy regained consciousness. Maxine is a pupil at the Gail school in Rogers Park.

Canadian Ranch Calls Wales to Roundup, Report

LONDON, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Although no official announcement has been made as yet, the London press seems to take it for granted that the Prince of Wales will visit his Canadian ranch in Alberta next month. This would be about the same time as the autumn roundup and would afford the British heir glimpses of the excitement of ranch life.

FINDS MAYA CITY 100 YEARS OLDER THAN ANY OTHER

Unrecorded Ruins Lie in South Mexico.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Mexico City, Aug. 14.—An ancient Maya city in southern Mexico, near Guatemala, has just been discovered by the notable Mexican archæologist, Juan Palacios. The city, unrecorded previously, seems to belong to an extremely ancient civilization, antedating Palenque and the founding of civilization on the peninsula of Yucatan.

The city is filled with records of the past which will furnish an abundance of well executed inscriptions, belonging to the early period of Maya inscriptions which have been lacking for proper study of the early age writings.

Ruins Are Extensive.

Señor Palacios, in a telegraphic report, says the hieroglyphics are of a kind hitherto unknown, but are so well executed that they must prove perfectly legible once the key to them is worked out.

Señor Palacios says the ruins are extensive and are of notable construction, indicating the city was the center of a remarkable civilization of which no memory survives.

Pictures of Gods.

A great number of hieroglyphic inscriptions on the stone and low reliefs on plaster with pictures of gods and Indian leaders and priests place the dawn of Mexico back a hundred years, since the city seems to have seen the highest development of an unknown civilization, which must have taken hundreds of years to reach perfection.

COURTESY FIRST, STUDENT IDEAL, McANDREW SAYS

Chicago school children in the nation's service might sum up one of the principal points in Supt. William McAndrew's educational platform. In his report to the board yesterday he says that by grounding pupils in courtesy they may be better able to serve.

"America's service station, a public school," is a slogan made by a student last year in response to Mr. McAndrew's call for placards for school buildings to inform visitors that they were welcome. Others carrying the idea of service were "School is for service, not for self," "Courtesy, you are entitled to it here," "Citizens welcome, tell us what you think," "Visitors always welcome. Suggestions gladly received."

The superintendent reports that visitors have been pleased with the atmosphere of courteous service which they have found in the schools.

MEXICO, LAND OF PLENTY, FORCED TO IMPORT FOOD

Seized Farms in Weeds; Americans Victims.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Staff Correspondent of The Tribune, who recently returned from a month's investigation in Mexico.]

Land hunger, which is the excuse seized upon by European countries for expropriation of large estates, has been the cry of Europe for decades. In Mexico the problem is not land hunger, but land surplus. Millions upon millions of valuable acres which foreign capital would be glad to develop since Mexican capital cannot are wasted in this land of unlimited resources.

The agrarian movement in Mexico was purely a political measure. There were any number of acres on which landless peons could have been settled under a wise colonization scheme. But the peons wanted land already planted to crops and their leaders saw in this method of dispossessing the wealthy a ready means of holding the peon at election time. Simpler than guns and more satisfactory.

Of all the millions of acres which have been expropriated from natives and foreigners, a very small portion is under cultivation today. The result is that Mexico, a land which formerly exported agricultural products, today imports food valued at more than $200,000,000.

Eat American Meat.

In Chihuahua and Durango, formerly among the world's finest cattle countries, there are few herds, and the meat Mexico consumes is, to an increasingly large extent, imported from the United States. The peasants raise enough corn for their own immediate needs. They do not try to sell in the cities; the result is importation of corn and wheat from the United States and the Argentine.

Take the Rosalie Evans farm, for example. Its lands are completely in the hands of villagers who formerly were employed on the estate. There is little or no production, and the villagers are starving. So bad is the situation that the government newspapers Universal and Excelsior both openly criticise the agrarian policy and declare it bankrupt. But the Evans farm, compensation for which should be made to Mrs. Daisy Pettus of San Francisco, is still among the unsettled cases. Where corn once ripened, weeds choke the fields

But whatever the result, the fact remains that more than 500 Americans have been deprived of their property, and the seizures still continue.

Faces Death Threats.

There is a property in the Mazatlan district owned by a coöperative agricultural company. Ten thousand of its choicest acres have been seized, some of the acreage recently, and threats against the life of the manage, who resists illegal seizures, are constantly made. It would not be surprising if he suffered the same fate as Mrs. Evans, who was murdered.

Another company which owned large properties in the state of Nayarit has been left with all its uncleared land and only 15 acres of cleared land. Three grants to villages, all of them more than 2,500 acres, have been made, despite the fact that the company on its own initiative gave the legal 4,400 acres to one village as soon as the Warren-Payne agreement was signed. As fast as land is cleared it is seized. The company has suspended clearing operations. It has obtained no compensation.

Two Native Planters Killed.

Near Tampico the favorite sport is to pad the censuses of villages. One estate was totally seized through this method, although only half of the property could be taken under the Warren-Payne agreement. One hundred persons petitioned for grants who had never lived in the township. The agrarians killed two native planters in this district on Feb. 1, 1926. The owners have not received any compensation.

The hacienda [farm] of an American company was invaded by unauthorized persons after the decree of President Calles that lands could be expropriated only through action of the courts. Protests were unavailing, the local authorities declaring they would make grants to all who requested them, even though the decision of the courts might be otherwise. No attempt to prevent such seizures was made by the government. The seizures were justified by politicians on the ground that they had ridden to power on the agrarian act. More than 2,000 acres taken to date. No compensation.

Property of another large American company was taken despite the fact that it was unsuitable for agricultural purposes.

Property totaling 2,250 acres was seized from an American citizen near Tampico. This property was leased to the Hausteca Oil company, and was not agricultural land. It was seized by agrarians of a nearby village without legal action. It is not being used for agricultural purposes. The villagers have erected shacks which they use as speak-easies [territory dry] and houses of ill fame. Protection against these outrages requested in March. No action taken. No compensation.

Raid American Cattle Ranch.

Agrarians invaded the grazing land of a large cattle ranch owned by an American. Despite orders from President Calles, they cut fences, ran off stock, and raided the property. They are now established on portions of it, involving several thousand acres. Extent undetermined, because no survey has been possible. Deputies and politicians assisted the raiders. No compensation, no redress.

The best lands of an American cattle ranch of more than 20,000 acres were seized by agrarians without legal orders. They turned scrub cattle loose among the fine breeding stock of the ranch and refused to build fences or permit them to be constructed, claiming the grazing land as common land. Great damage to the herds resulted. No compensation for land seized or damages resulting.

The case of John Lee Stark presents a different aspect of the difficulties of the average American in Mexico. This man, who had been in Mexico for years, owned mining properties near Zacatecas. The city of Zacatecas contracted with him to furnish light and power and to construct a water works. Stark invested his entire fortune in this work and his bills were never paid. He had claims totaling more than $100,000 for work done. These he settled out of court for 6,947.08 pesos (a pesos is worth forty-eight cents American money), on the threat that he would get nothing if he prosecuted his suit. The settlement was never paid.

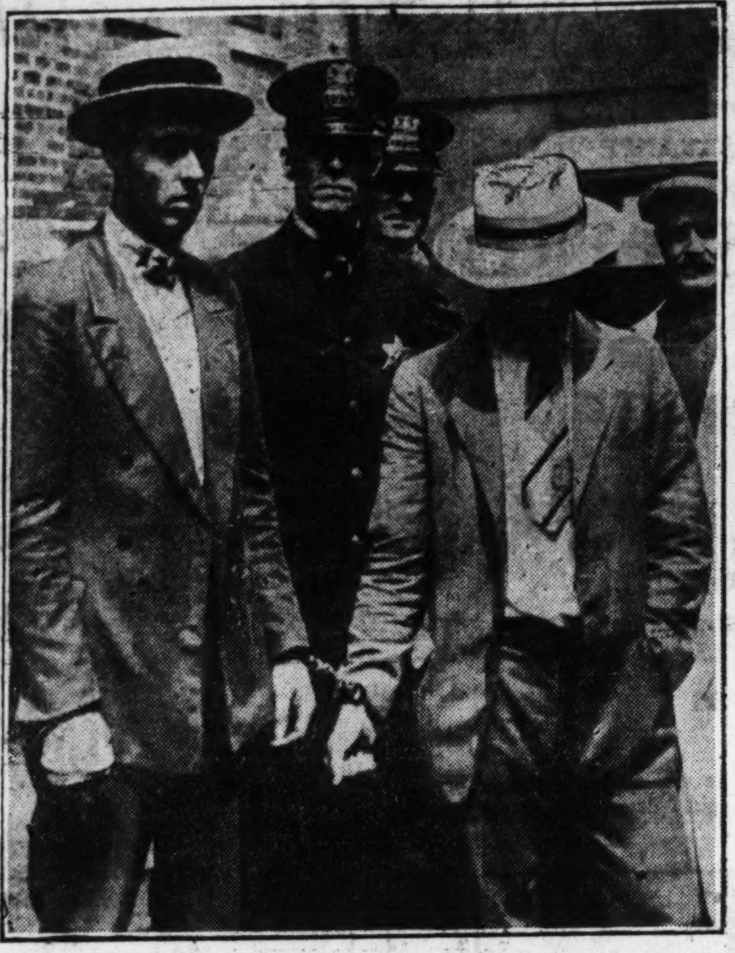
Meanwhile Stark was unable to pay taxes on his mining property, and despite the fact that he was negotiating a sale at $150,000 the property was denounced, he was refused an extension of taxes, and lost everything. His property was confiscated and he returned to the United States a broken man.

Many Notes; No Action.

Such are the daily cases with which the American embassy in Mexico City has to deal. Repeated notes have pointed out that the United States desires a beginning in the fulfillment of the Warren-Payne agreement. The answer, when it is given, ignores the main issue and points out that the agreement was made by the Obregon government. The United States cannot look to President Calles for its fulfillment. It has been verbally repudiated many times.

But it is on this very document, plus violation of acquired rights of American citizens in other lines of endeavor, that the United States bases its diplomatic protests. They have been and still are of no avail because they are not backed up with concrete proposals of action, and the Mexican politician understands nothing but force.

GIRL WHO LEAPED TO ESCAPE ATTACK DIES



Jack Lewis, 6042 South Union avenue (left), and A. L. Binder, 6557 South Morgan street, salesmen named by a high school student as the men who attacked her. They were caught near the scene of the outrage. This girl's case was the eighth of its kind in Chicago and vicinity recently.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mildred Pratcher, 503 West 42d place, who escaped from youths by leaping from auto, is dead.

Helen McInerney, who was with Miss Pratcher in auto and who has vowed to commit suicide.

and drove up the forest preserve road, Pietak said, or when he stopped the car.

"Wyallios then said it looked like we were going to have a good party," Pietak went on. "It was then that the girls wanted to go home. They said they were decent girls and they didn't want to get into trouble.

"Finally the oldest girl said if she had to go through it she would, but if we would leave her alone her mother would pay us."

The girl then asked permission to say her prayers, he said.

Contradicts Girls' Story.

This differs from the version of the girls, who reported that they were seized and gagged after their escorts had been kidnaped.

Meanwhile, according to Pietak, Carr had been in the automobile with another of the girls. Carr then came over to where Pietak and the older girl were and attacked her, Pietak said. The third girl, he said, had left with one of the three escorts and he did not see them again.

Following his confession Pietak was taken to the county jail, where he is being held in bonds of $20,000 on a statutory charge. Police last night were still searching for his two companions.

Question Two in Latest Attack.

The latest alleged attack case which brought the series of last week to a climax Friday night resulted in the questioning yesterday of a man of 36 and a youth of 20 by Assistant State's Attorney Charles Mueller.

The pair, according to the prosecutor, admitted that they dragged a 16 year old Englewood schoolgirl into a store at 932 West 63d street. They insisted she had consented to go with them and denied the girl had been attacked. The girl's version of the affair, Mr. Mueller said, will not be heard until Monday, since she was too weak to testify yesterday.

The two are Jack Lewis of 6042 South Union avenue and A. L. Binder, 6557 South Morgan street. Both are salesmen for the Standard Linoleum company, in whose store the attack is alleged to have taken place.

THE COMING DRIVE FOR CANCELLATION.

It is safe to predict that we are to have a drive for debt cancellation. If we could have a general discussion of cancellation as an economic and financial problem it would be welcome. It might produce an intelligent public opinion in favor of complete and immediate cancellation. It might convince the country that modification of our present settlements would be desirable. It would certainly give public opinion a more informed and substantial foundation than it now has, and it would protect us from confusing and irrelevant considerations.

But the drive for cancellation is preparing with all the munitions left from the propaganda which swept the country from 1914 to our entrance into the war. There was never such a blast in the world before. A considerable proportion of our people have not yet recovered from it. Its revival will find them predisposed, and cancellation or debt adjustment will be engulfed in a whirling wash of sentimentality and war mythology.

Fortunately the nation as a whole has done some observing and some thinking since 1919, and the revelation of European opinion in the last few weeks has helped the great majority of Americans to dispose of the last war illusion. There is perhaps danger that in the reaction against European hostility and against sentimental propaganda we shall not give the problem of debt adjustment as clearheaded consideration as it deserves. Our debtors are making generosity difficult. They and our sentimentalists are putting us in a position in which any concession must be interpreted as a confession of error, and, save for a small minority, the American people are not suffering from a guilty conscience. The drive therefore will not only fail of its object. It is likely to obstruct readjustments that might be justifiable and profitable to all concerned.

Meanwhile it is well for the American people to be clear on one central point. In the midst of abuse and misinterpretation the United States stands out as about the only remaining champion of financial morality in the world. If we give way there will not be enough left of the foundations of international credit to support a penny. The claims which the French and British politicians and their press are making as an offset to their American obligations thrust the whole principle of contract into a maze of irrelevancies, controversies of fact, political expediences, considerations of policy, questions of motive, partisanship, and so on, which no sense of obligation could survive. What government, what nation, in the future could afford to lend with the prospect of finding its right of payment strangled by such a web of unpredictable offsets and incommensurable counterclaims?

THE RAILROADS AND PUBLIC OPINION.

Arthur Evans recently reported from Iowa that while the Iowa public welcomes new public utility enterprise with open arms and uncomplainingly concedes them a 7 or 8 per cent return, the unfriendliness toward railroads still survives and Brookhart is applauded for his specious attacks on the Esch-Cummins act, with its supposed guaranty of 6 per cent.

Mr. Evans explains the difference persuasively by the fact that the electrical utilities make an efficient campaign of publicity to support their demands. The railroads have improved in their handling of public relations, but not enough. Of course, they have a harder task. They must offset mistakes of the past and much ingrained prejudice, skillfully played upon by professional politicians who have become experts in granger psychology.

But there is also a time element in the situation. The electrical utilities are novelties. Once the railroads were, and in that day they were welcomed by communities with even more enthusiasm than a lighting company stirs today. They became thereafter rather arrogant, and though that attitude has been beaten down it was too often replaced by pessimism breeding indifference. The efforts made in recent years to state the case for the railroads have produced encouraging results on the whole, and the public attitude is fairer and more friendly than it has been for more than a generation. But there is a good deal lacking still in railroad policy as to public relations, a lack of tact, a lack of imagination in the avoidance of unnecessary annoyances, a lack of progressiveness not justified by restriction of income and operation conditions.

The persistence of the guaranty theory, which does duty in the armory of La Folletteism in Wisconsin as well as with Brookhart in Iowa, is, we suspect, one of the effects of the failure on the part of the railroads to take the offensive against railroad baiting politicians. It is a curious survival. If it were a guaranty it would allow only a 6 per cent return on the investment actually used in transportation service. Yet loans are generally made in the rural west at 7 or 8 per cent, and, as Mr. Evans reports, electric utilities are freely allowed the same rates.

But the alleged guaranty is not a guaranty. The simplest proof of that is that many railroads do not earn 6 per cent. The rate of return on investment of class 1 steam roads for the five months ending May 31 was 4.30 per cent. For the western district it was only 3.53 per cent. The St. Paul has gone into receivership since the Esch-Cummins act was passed. Some railroads pay no dividends on their stock whatsoever. Despite the general prosperity 21 class 1 roads operated at a loss, of which 13 were western roads. Why should any one complain of a guaranty that doesn't guarantee?

But where is the guaranty? A guaranty—we take the broadest definition in the dictionary—is "an agreement by which one person promises to make another secure in the possession, enjoyment, or the like, of something." Is the railroad act an agreement by the government to make the railroads secure in the possession of a return of 6 per cent on their property? If it is, the railroads have a claim for back revenue which our anti-railroad politicians would be the first and loudest to deny. They assert that the railroad act contains a guaranty, but they are not for making the guaranty good.

The law provides that the interstate commerce commission shall "prescribe just and reasonable rates"—that is, rates that shall yield a "fair return" upon the value of the property held for and used in the service of transportation. It also provides that if a carrier's net operating income is in excess of 6 per cent, half of the excess shall go into a "reserve fund" and the other half into a "contingent fund," the purposes of which need not be given here.

There is no agreement of the government here to secure any return to the railroads, and no one but a political demagogue would pretend to find any guaranty in these provisions. They do contain a limitation on railway income, and it is true also that there exists a guaranty against the imposition of rates which would be confiscatory, but that guaranty is in the constitution of the United States. It protects the man who has put his money into railroad property no more than it protects the man who owns a farm.

For example, let us suppose that in course of time agriculture became so highly organized that it could control the price of food, and that, to protect the public from inordinate prices, a law were enacted giving some government agency power to regulate the rates to be charged by farmers for their produce as the interstate commerce commission regulates the rates charged by the railroads for their production, which is transportation. Then the same questions would arise as have appeared in railway regulation. What ought the farmer to receive as a return upon his enterprise? What is his investment in land, building, and equipment; what is his output, and what prices would give him a "fair return" on his investment, management, and effort? Under pressure of public sentiment the price regulating commission might fix rates which would yield a very low return or even none at all. Thereupon the farmers could go into court and obtain protection under the constitutional prohibition against the taking of property without compensation. But if a law were passed empowering the department of agriculture or of commerce or a special commission to determine the maximum price the farmer could charge for his product and the law prescribed that this price must be high enough to bring him a fair return, would the farmer think he had a guaranty? If he did, he would be sadly disappointed.

The farmer has favored the system of regulation of railroad rates by the government, and that system means necessarily that rules and standards must be adopted to govern the rate adjustment. But they do not constitute a guaranty, and the farmers who applaud men like Brookhart and Blaine when they talk about the six per cent guaranty are merely making themselves the dupes of political quacks.

POLICING THE METROPOLITAN AREA.

The evident mishandling of the Melrose Park outrage emphasizes the need for an extension of the city's police jurisdiction. The city is now rimmed by crime spots as bad as or worse than any in the slums, and the policing of these suburbs is usually inefficient or corrupt. It seems more than probable that there was collusion in the escape of the miscreants in the Melrose Park case, who are known.

The Chicago police have no authority outside the city limits. The state's attorney has no police of his own and ought not to be required to act as a peace officer. The sheriff, the constitutional peace officer of the county, has no adequate police force, and the local police in the districts most in need of supervision are not likely to be any better than the district. Where the district is morally healthy the police are at least clean, if not always too competent. But in the vice spots they offer little or no protection.

Crime is not bound by jurisdictional boundaries. The law and its officers are. But Cook county and, in fact, the metropolitan area for miles outside the city's corporate limits ought to be a police unit. The mobility of crime has immensely added to its radius of action, and we ought to revise our police system to conform to present conditions. The suburban districts generally resist annexation, and Chicago cannot compel them to enter the city. But the state has power to create a proper police control coextensive with the metropolitan area.

We also need something similar to the criminal investigation division of Scotland Yard, a special bureau of detectives, of expert investigators, directed from the central office. Such investigators would not only be specialists in detecting guilt and running down fugitives but they would be free from local influences, prejudices, or prejudgments.

It would seem that the gravity of our criminal problem has become so flagrant as to compel a thoroughgoing overhauling of our police technique and organization.

OBLIGATIONS OF FRIENDSHIP.

[Decatur (Ill.) Herald.]

When Mr. Smith says that he placed himself under no obligations by receiving any contribution to his campaign most persons will readily believe him, in a restricted sense of the word "obligations." Nobody supposes that the public utility magnates operating in Illinois handed over large sums of money in exchange for specific favors received, or to be received, from the state commerce commission.

It does not follow, however, that a commerce commission chairman can accept the gift of a fortune from an owner of public utilities and remain entirely without obligation. No man would like to have his suit tried before a judge as heavily indebted to the other party as Mr. Smith is indebted to Insull and Studebaker—and the office of commerce commissioner is a quasi-judicial one, the litigants being the utilities upon one side and an unorganized public upon the other. If a thoroughly conscientious man in such position were convinced that he could accept the gifts as inspired by friendship and nothing else, it would appear that he must still have recognized the necessity of resigning instantly his judicial position.

MAKING GOOD USE OF SCHOOL VACATION

BY EMERSON O. BRADSHAW.

(Acting Secretary of the Chicago Council of Religious Education, a Department of the Chicago Church Federation.)

This summer in Chicago more than 30,000 pupils have been attending daily vacation Bible schools in 250 churches of various denominations. In the United States, Canada, and in certain foreign fields, like China and Corea, to which the movement has extended there has been a total attendance of 1,250,000 in 10,000 schools.

In Chicago and usually elsewhere the sessions have continued five days in the week for five weeks. We do not know the statistics elsewhere, but here the number of teachers employed totaled 500. They included college students and college graduates, public school teachers and experienced teachers engaged at other times in regular Sunday school work. We maintained a training school for teachers with special reference to the daily vacation Bible school work. Thomas S. Evans, director of the international council having the entire movement in charge, spent a week visiting the Chicago schools and gave them a high rank in methods, ideals, and efficiency.

Our constant aim is to keep the daily vacation Bible schools abreast of the most approved standards in pedagogy. We are not satisfied to have teachers who are simply good intentioned; they must know how to teach. If a boy or girl should fall off the pier into the lake, some one watching the accident might have good intentions, but if he or she didn't know how to swim, neither would be of any use in effecting a rescue.

The daily vacation Bible schools have followed largely the same course as the Sunday school which was founded for ragged children of the city slums and had as a prime object teaching these children of neglect how to read. Now Sunday schools are a part of the machinery of instruction, inspiration, and entertainment in every church of every denomination, no matter how rich the neighborhood nor how well educated and cultured the church constituency.

The daily vacation Bible school is developing in the same direction. It began as a means for caring for idle children whose only playgrounds were the streets and alleys of the poorer sections of our great city on the principle that "Satan still has mischief for idle hands to do." Now schools are being conducted in some of the wealthiest and most cultured neighborhoods and suburbs.

This summer schools were successfully conducted in such churches as the Hyde Park Baptist in close proximity to the University of Chicago and in whose membership are many professors and their families, and in St. James' Methodist Episcopal church, with its $600,000 church plant and its families of wealth, intelligence, and social distinction. We have found that children are much alike in their tastes and needs, and there is the same reason for training the idle rich as the idle poor in patriotism, Bible knowledge, handwork, love of nature, and educative recreation, for which the vacation schools stand.

This summer the kind hearted managers of the Cubs and White Sox ball parks offered free admission to children of the vacation schools, and who that knows child nature would doubt for a moment that a boy of the gold coast would not be as eager as his equal in age from back of the yards to see a professional baseball game and do so as a guest of the management.

From time immemorial the problem of what to do with the great army of boys and girls thrust out on the streets after nine months' drill in the public schools has pressed on anxious fathers and mothers, harassed the corner policeman, and puzzled educators. Moreover, ministers and church folk looked at the empty church buildings with their cool walls and corridors and on the parks with their grass plats, trees, and sylvan lakes, and asked themselves, Are we utilizing all our opportunities and equipment to the best advantage?

The result has been the getting of the children into the churches during the forenoons and out in the parks in the afternoons, combining study, work, and fun with help in character building, worship, and true Americanism. This work has taken on the name of the Daily Vacation Bible School. It has so commended itself to the good judgment of all classes we now hear practically no criticism from either church or non-church circles, from the foreign or the native born, from parents, or, least of all, from the children. Instead of dreading the beginning of the daily vacation Bible school, as many children are pictured dreading the beginning of the regular public school term, thousands of expectant youngsters are teasing to have the vacation schools open. "Gee, it's the only fun I have," said one gamin. And he is not alone in his sentiment.

The daily vacation Bible school idea originated in New York City. After having been successfully operated there it was brought to Chicago in 1907. Four schools were organized here the first year, one in a Baptist, one in a Presbyterian, and two in Methodist Episcopal churches. Today Chicago has outstripped New York in the total enrollment and in the number of churches actively at work. The Aiken institute at Morgan and Monroe streets, which used to be the Second Baptist church, has an enrollment of more than 1,000 and is the largest daily vacation Bible school in existence, with the largest regular attendance of boys and girls.

In the teaching of religion in these schools the story method and the drama are utilized. Even the handwork is no longer looked upon as simply doing something for the sake of the work involved, but certain projects are undertaken which have in them character building values. In one school, for instance, a tabernacle was built after the Bible pattern of the tabernacle in the wilderness. Each part was constructed after a careful study of the Bible description. On commencement day there stood the finished sanctuary. Its worship was explained with appropriate scripture verse committed and repeated.

A Jewish rabbi of the neighborhood was invited to address the children, which he did, explaining the symbolism of the ancient worship. A spirit of reverence was created and a deep impression was made on the boys and girls of respect for the house of God by whatever name it is called. Thus the work was done not simply to keep idle hands busy, although it did that important task, but also to construct a building which taught valuable spiritual lessons.

Instead of using what in schools has usually been called the opening exercises, with little in them except a chance for securing order and giving late comers an opportunity to find their seats, we have devoted a definite period to the cultivation of a real spirit of worship. In the St. James' Methodist Episcopal church, for instance, the informal parts of the program, like calling the roll, announcements, and other similar necessities, were attended to in various classrooms.

Then twenty minutes were devoted exclusively to worship. The children all gathered in the beautiful chapel, where the settings were wholly conducive to the spirit of worship. Hymns of a chaste character were sung, with scriptural responses and prayer. In several churches the pipe organ was used in the devotional period. Probably this pronounced development of the worship idea has been the most marked advance in the spiritual education of our boys and girls. The vacation schools are not only undertaking to teach religious aims of the church, but there is evidence on every hand of a growing respect for the church and a new interest in the ideals for which the church stands.

QUININE AND CHILLS.

To stop a man from having chills is a simple matter. Quinine will do that. Twenty grains a day for three days will be enough in most cases, though thirty grains a day is more certain. There is no great difference between the dizziness and other discomforts caused by the two doses. The larger dose is as safe as the smaller.

It is not a matter of great importance as to the period of giving quinine. Some people take the day's allowance at one dose. Some make it three doses—taking one with each meal. Some take the last dose more than eight hours before a chill is expected. There is a little advantage in taking the quinine allowance at least eight hours before the chill is expected, but it is not great.

There is some advantage in taking quinine in solution, or in freshly made capsules mixed with a little capsicum, but it is not great. If it seems best to give a tasteless form of quinine for any reason, that is all right, provided the daily dose of the alkaloid be increased, say, ten per cent. Tasteless quinine is generally some form of tannate of quinine, and that drug is a little less powerful than other forms of the drug.

After a profuse sweat or a saline purge, quinine will absorb rapidly from the digestive tract. But violent purgation and "stirring of the liver" generally interferes with absorption.

So much for breaking the chills. Curing the disease is a different proposition.

The man who is still malarial, though he is not having chills, is in a worse fix than the man who is having chills. He is capable of infecting others. He is all set for repeated attacks of chills. He is all set for pneumonia, hematuria, or some other frequently fatal complication of malaria. He may be on the way to chronic invalidism. He is incapable and sick without having the excuse for idleness that he had when he was chilling.

The Bass, or standard treatment, for the cure of malaria is ten grains of quinine daily for 8 weeks. The difficulty about that treatment is in persuading people to stick to the job. The average man is a born quitter, and will not do anything for 56 days when he does not see the reason for it. Knowing is not enough; doing is necessary.

The United Fruit company doctors have given up trying to get their employés to take the standard treatment. Instead, they push the use of their Pink Tonic tablets. Each tablet contains 3 grains of quinine, ⅜ grain reduced iron, 1-50 grain of arsenous acid, and ⅛ grain of extract of nux vomica. Two tablets after each meal, or six tablets a day, are taken for six weeks. In their experience people will take this treatment and like it. It would pay certain plantation owners, large mill operators, and railroads to furnish these pills, free of charge, to all employés who have recently had chills.

The United Fruit company officials also treat their employés for worms as an aid in curing them of malaria.

It remains to be seen whether people not working for corporations will take Pink Tonic tablets better than they now take quinine capsules.

OCEAN TRIP FOR PREGNANT WOMAN.

REPLY.

The only objection to it is the increased probability of nausea and vomiting.

START FEEDING ORANGE JUICE.

Mrs. S. writes: You can help me by telling me when I can give my baby orange juice and when and what to feed her. She is breast-fed and is 1 month and 1 week old.

A FALL IN THE DARK.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—About two weeks ago while leaving the home of a friend we were running to see who could get to the car first and I bumped into an iron fence and cut my face, which necessitated having stitches taken in the eyelids.

This happened in the courtway of an apartment building about nine o'clock in the evening. There are about eight lights in this court, but according to this friend of ours they have not been lit for over a week. Could we recover any damages from this landlord for the accident?

E. L.

We cannot advise to advantage without knowing in much greater detail the character and location of the fence, its proximity to the sidewalk and so forth.

In general barbed wire or spiked fences along public sidewalks are prohibited.

TOO MUCH RADIO.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What can be done about a neighbor who sets his radio in his window and then goes across the street to work in his garage, letting the radio play at its loudest for hours, disturbing both sick and well people for a block in each direction?

If it amounts to a legal nuisance you should employ an attorney to have it enjoined. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

AUGUST 15, 1861.

ST. LOUIS.—By order of Maj. Gen. Fremont martial law was proclaimed here, with Maj. Justus McKinstry, U. S. A., as provost marshal. The step was induced by fear of a revolution among the secessionists. It is well known that a secret organization of the secessionists has existed here for some time. Union men are not satisfied with the arrangement because McKinstry has announced his intention of "coöperating with the police commissioners," all of whom are notorious secessionists. In fact, President Brownlee of the police commissioners was arrested, but his successor, Duke, is just as violent a secessionist. In addition to this Maj. McKinstry is not regarded as a sound Union man. He associates with and patronizes secessionists quite too much.

ST. LOUIS.—The killed on the Union side in the battle of Springfield will not exceed 150 and the wounded 500. The body of Gen. Lyon is on its way to this city for burial. It will undoubtedly be a large funeral and worthy of the illustrious dead. Prisoners brought to Springfield state that the confederates lost a great many in killed and wounded. The Louisiana and Arkansas regiments sustained the heaviest losses. Their number of killed was estimated at 500 to 1,000. The confederates on several occasions hoisted Union flags to delude our troops and decoy them into false positions. As a result the federal troops were several times the object of a most murderous fire. Gen. Sigel, who took command after Gen. Lyon was killed, was at Gasconade, 42 miles from Rolla, at last accounts. He will fortify himself there and large reinforcements have been sent to him. Gen. Lyon died a hero. Shortly after the battle began he was shot in the foot and his horse was killed. He retired for surgical treatment. Soon things assumed a threatening aspect for our troops and Gen. Lyon, seeing the danger, dismissed all thought of his wound, mounted a horse, and, waving his hat and handkerchief, called out to the boys to rally and follow him. A ball struck him in the back and killed him instantly.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

AUGUST 15, 1901.

CHICAGO.—Steel workers of South Chicago unanimously refused to reconsider their decision not to join the steelworkers' strike. As a result Michael F. Tighe, assistant secretary to President Shaffer of the Amalgamated association revoked the charters of two lodges, Lakeside No. 9 and Commercial No. 14.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y.—The Blue Mountain stage, loaded with summer resort visitors, was held up in true Dick Turpin style on the steep mountain side near North River, the robbers securing $1,000 in money and jewelry. Two masked men suddenly sprang from the bushes and shot down the lead horses. Four of the five male passengers fled into the brush. One man, who had his wife with him, remained with the three frightened women passengers. He too would have sought shelter in the brush had not his wife seized his coat-tails and delayed his progress. The highwaymen treated the women with utmost courtesy.

CHICAGO.—An investigation which promises to shake the entire detective force will result from the unearthing of a fake expense account turned in by Detective John J. Tracey in connection with the bringing back of Joseph Larkin from Cleveland. Chief of Detectives Luke P. Colleran will have to face charges before the city civil service commission. Larkin was brought back by a detective already in Cleveland and Tracey never made the trip for which he turned in an expense account of $75. It is charged that the name of State's Attorney Deneen was forged to the requisition papers. It is claimed Colleran was fully informed of the trip Tracey never made and that he had cognizance of the fake account.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

AUGUST 15, 1916.

CHICAGO.—At a meeting of the vestry of St. Martin's Episcopal church at the residence of A. J. C. Ledgerwood, 5835 Washington boulevard, the Rev. R. H. Fortesque Gairdner, rector, was exonerated of all blame in connection with his unfortunate meeting in Detroit with Anna Stearns, the "mystery girl." Only "possibly slight indiscretions" were found by the church body. In a statement he issued, the rector admitted having had dinner with the girl, but denied that drinks were served.

PARIS. — The Italian dreadnaught Leonardo da Vinca caught fire and blew up in the harbor of Taranto, Italy, and 300 of its crew were drowned, a Turin dispatch says.

PETROGRAD.—Along the Galician front the Russian sweep continues unchecked. The last formidable Austro-German barrier to Lemberg has been broken and the Teutonic forces are making a general retreat on a 90 mile front in the direction of the Galician capital.

OTHER WAR NEWS. — The Germans regained some of the trenches lost to the British near the Somme river. The British torpedo boat destroyer Lassoo was sunk by a German submarine in the English channel, the Germans claim, but the British assert the sinking was off the Dutch coast. The Turks routed the Russians in Persia with heavy losses. Both Rome and Vienna claim victories east of Goritz, where a sanguinary battle is being waged.

WASHINGTON. — Conferences held by President Wilson with representatives of the four big railroad unions and later with the managers' committee of the roads have revived hope that the general strike on the railroads of the United States may be averted. Further conferences will be held. It is understood the union leaders made it plain to the President that no settlement or arbitration would be considered unless the eight hour day is first granted. The President conveyed this edict to the rail chiefs, and they consented to take it under advisement. If this is granted the brotherhoods are willing to leave the scale of pay for overtime to arbitration.

CHICAGO. — Investigation disclosed that Chicago has a month's supply of food on hand, in the event of a general railroad strike.

HUNDRED YEAR WAR FOR LEGAL REFORM

English Judge Completely Controls Trial.

This is the sixth weekly installment of an article by Prof. E. R. Sunderland of the law school of the University of Michigan on the English system of administering justice. In today's chapter he tells of the duty resting on the English judge to see that justice is done to all parties, and describes the efficient manner in which juries are used.

The most important feature of English trial practice is the dominating position of the judge, and many observers have expressed the view that in this fact lies the real explanation of English success in judicial administration. He carries much greater responsibility than the ordinary American judge for the proper conduct of the trial, on the apparent theory that the state does not stand indifferent as to suitors, but is directly interested in the due administration of justice as a public function.

It would seem self-evident that miscarriages of justice impair the confidence of the people in the administrative capacity of the government, and that the responsibility for such failures cannot be thrown upon the parties and their counsel. If the state forces its citizens into public courts of justice, it should carry at least as much responsibility as private parties engaged in public callings who are required to use a rather high degree of care in furnishing adequate facilities. For the judge to allow any sort of lax and incompetent conduct on the part of the lawyers so long as neither of them raises an objection, and to permit the jury to blunder into a verdict in the absence of obviously necessary evidence, on the basis of clearly incompetent testimony, and without aid of essential instructions on the law, merely because counsel make no effort to prevent it, is not the way to inspire respect for the administration of justice. The English theory of state responsibility lays the duty of active supervision and direction upon the judge.

English Trial Practice Logical.

The logic of the English scheme of trial practice is thoroughly sound. There are three official agencies involved in a trial, the judge, the jury, and the attorneys, and the main problem of trial practice is to make them coöperate most effectively in arriving at the merits of the controversies. Two of them, the judge and the jury, should be non-partisan, because they are required to decide disputed questions between the litigants, while the attorneys, whose task it is to present the rival claims of the contestants, must of necessity be strongly imbued with the zeal of the advocate.

Now the English theory of an efficient trial procedure seems to be predicated upon a distribution of the various proceedings embraced in the trial in such a way that those requiring impartiality shall not be delegated to the attorneys, and that those, on the other hand, which involve partisan interest shall be placed in the hands of the representatives of the contending parties.

Such a classification of the steps in a trial is perfectly easy. Since the selection of the jury is something which should be absolutely divorced from partisan influence, the empanelling should not be done by the attorneys. The opening statement of the claims of the contestants, if it is to be made forcibly, must, on the other hand, be the work of the attorneys, and the same is true of the offering of evidence and arguments relative to its force and effect.

Judge Should Empanel Jury.

But the jury should be instructed on the law with complete impartiality, and in this the attorneys should have no hand, and the same is true of the summing up of the evidence and the supervision of the form of the verdict.

If, therefore, each branch of the tribunal is to do what it is best fitted for, and is to refrain from attempting to do those things which are inconsistent with its nature and character, the jury will be empanelled by the judge or other court officer without any interference by the attorneys, and will be instructed on the law and informed [by way of summing up] upon the facts by the impartial action of the judge, who will decide without any partisan advice or pressure as to what should be said to the jury. And finally, since the verdict is the judicial decision of the jury, and its value and effect may depend upon its form, an impartial direction and control should be exercised over this vital feature of the trial in the interests of both parties, indifferently, which, of course, points to the judge as the proper guide.

This theoretical division of functions in the interests of a fair trial is the absolute rule of practice in the English courts.

Jury Obtained in Five Minutes.

Five minutes before the court opens, the clerk calls twelve jurors into the box—usually ten men and two women—and promptly swears them to try the case. As he finishes this brief and simple ceremony, the judge steps through a door behind the bench, bows to the barristers and to the jury, takes his seat, and the trial is under way.

The empanelling of an English jury is a dignified and impressive performance. They have already been selected for character and intelligence, like the judges themselves, and their names can be obtained by counsel for a shilling, in advance of the trial, if there is any desire to investigate them with a view to a challenge. As a matter of fact, this list is almost never asked for. The clerk, as the representative of the government, not of the parties, draws and swears them, thus giving them a status independent of the contending parties, like that of the judge on the bench. Freed from the hostile inquisition of the rival lawyers, the jurors undoubtedly approach the case in a much more judicial frame of mind than would be possible under American practice, and this clearly manifests itself in a closer coöperation between jury and judge.

No Emotional Appeals to Jury.

English counsel state their cases well, put in their evidence carefully and thoroughly, and argue the facts with simple directness, without any attempt to carry the jury by emotional appeals or by flights of eloquence. This rather cold and businesslike attitude toward the jury is doubtless due to their conviction of the futility of any other course. For the judge has the last word with the jury, and no emotional effects could stand against the clear, cold summing up of an English judge, who has followed every move in the trial with experienced skill, taking diligent notes of all the salient features of the case.

The judge is expected to see to it that the jury get a properly balanced view of the case, and if one side is pressed too hard the judge must correct it. In Hepworth's Case [4 Cr. Apps. 130], complaint was made that the judge made derogatory observations upon the argument of appellant's counsel, but the Court of Criminal Appeals said that no harm had been done, for counsel had made a very eloquent speech and the judge had only tried to administer an antidote.

Judges Comment on Facts.

The value of a summing up is not appreciated in the United States, but in England it is considered the most important function of the judge.

Doubtless that strange and anomalous rule followed by most of our state courts, which forbids comment by the judge on the weight of the evidence, has created so great a risk of error in summing up that our judges hesitate to take the chance, and either omit the summing up entirely or make it quite formal and perfunctory. A few weeks spent in watching jury cases tried in England will convince one that summing up does more to secure a verdict based on the merits of the case than all the rules of evidence which legal ingenuity has devised.

Dicey, in his Law of the Constitution, says:

"Trial by jury is open to much criticism; a distinguished French thinker may be right in holding that the habit of submitting difficult problems of fact to the decision of twelve men of not more than average education and intelligence will in the near future be considered an absurdity as patent as ordeal by battle. Its success in England is wholly due to, and is the most extraordinary sign of popular confidence in the judicial bench. A judge is the colleague and the readily accepted guide of the jurors."

Judge Frames Own Instructions.

Even more novel to an American lawyer is the English practice as to instructing a jury upon the law. Counsel have no more to say about the judge's charge than about his summing up. Instead of being a mere phonographic instrument for reading the instructions which counsel have prepared, the English judge makes his own statement of the law to the jury. The principles involved in the case are pointed out, briefly and simply, in the course of the summing up, wherever they are applicable, rather than in the form of elaborately constructed paragraphs read to the jury one after another in a tiresome and unintelligible series. Counsel are not expected to even intimate to the judge how they would like to have the jury charged.

Finally, the English are much more economical than we are, of the fruits of the trial, and always endeavor to adjust the verdict so that in case of error no new trial will be necessary. They do this wherever possible by means of special questions put to the jury, covering the actual issues litigated.

Special verdicts in the American practice are very unsatisfactory, because they are construed with the most technical severity. In the first place, they must be stated in the form of ultimate facts, and not evidence or legal conclusions, and since no one has ever been able to devise a test to identify ultimate facts, the use of a special verdict always involves a risk. Again, the formal requirements are exacting, for the questions through which the jury are brought to deal with the facts, must be clear, simple, direct, unambiguous, free from suggestive implications, and not too numerous or detailed; and the answers must meet the same tests.

Special Verdicts Avoided.

After fortunately escaping from the Scylla of the pleadings, one hesitates to take a chance with the Charybdis of the special verdict, and the result i tsat this immensely useful procedure is feared and avoided, and the parties timidly succumb to that crude relic of barbaric times, the general civil verdict.

In contrast to the usual American practice, which has made the machinery of special verdicts so intricate that it hardly functions at all, the English have developed an astonishingly simple and effective procedure. The judge himself, noting the material issues which have actually developed in the evidence, frames a few simple questions to cover them. He asks counsel on each side if they are satisfied with them, and any reasonable changes will be made if suggested, and other appropriate questions added if desired.

In a few minutes judge and counsel have agreed in open court upon the questions to be put, and neither side may thereafter complain that the questions are insufficient in substance or form or are inadequate in scope. They are put to the jury, the answers are taken, and judgment is rendered on the answers with or without argument.

New Trials Almost Unknown.

The result of the English system is to make the calamity of a new trial almost unknown. The English Reports for 1924 show only two cases sent back for new trials in the King's bench division during the whole year. In the same period the Supreme court of Michigan, which I assume is typical of the United States, sent back fifty-seven cases for new trials. But the discrepancy is really much greater than this, for in England the trial courts cannot grant new trials, but application must be made by way of appeal, while in Michigan, as in most American states, new trials are ordered with great freedom by trial courts, so that the total number of new trials actually ordered in Michigan during the year 1924 might very likely have been a hundred times as great as in all of England and Wales.

New trials are a total economic loss, and their frequency in the United States is the most convincing proof of the utter inadequacy of our trial procedure. The profession is inclined to take a rather fatalistic attitude, as though rules of practice, especially if hallowed by long observance, were immutable, like the law of gravity, and the public must make the best of them, just as it makes the best of the various forces of nature. But the profession is suffering from the complaisance which affects every monopolistic institution. Instead of expecting commercial, industrial and social relations to adjust themselves to the obsolete equipment with which the judicial establishment does business, the profession should, as it has done in England, scrap a large part of the machinery and provide new devices to correct the defects which have become an intolerable burden upon society.

Prof. Sunderland will conclude his discussion of the law courts in England in The Tribune of next Sunday.

GALESBURG FREE CITY OF BOOKS, SCHOOLS, CORN

Bennett Tells of Its Traditions and Growth.

Now we come into "the Heart of the Corn Belt" in story XX. of The Tribune's Chicagoland jaunt, and there we also find the heart and soul of middle west self-respect and respect for learning.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

"A runaway slave was as safe on the streets of Galesburg as if he were already in a free land."

That is the kind of town Galesburg was—and is.

The words were a commonplace concerning Galesburg seventy-five years ago. But what a regal commonplace! Illustrious cities of antiquity would have been proud to emblazon it on their coats of arms. I do not see why Galesburg does not do that. Dr. Prentiss Drew, Bascom professor of Latin in Knox college, could recast it into the compact and haughty Latin for his fellow citizens, and they then would have a civic slogan to beat all the flamboyancies that salaried go-getters ever slapped on to paper.

"Half Slave and Half Free."

What a withering sarcasm, too, on the state of affairs in our country inheres in those last nine words—"as if he were already in a free land." Yes, there are several volumes of McMaster and Rhodes and Channing packed into that glorious slogan.

In a multitude of sedate, solid, unshowy but intensely vital ways Galesburg of today lives up to the slogan; lives up to it in ways less perilous than the ways of its grandfathers and great-grandfathers who were "conductors on the underground railroad" that expeditiously ran slaves out of the house of bondage and into Canada, but ways not less competent to breed free men.

Galesburg, in short, loves learning, the mother of freedom.

Knox Co-eds Were Pioneers.

For nearly nine decades one out of every ten adults in Galesburg has been able to look back on his—and her—youth and say, "Yes, I was a student at Knox." and Knox is one of the best—and one of the richest—small colleges in the world. Seventy-seven years ago, when co-education was about as popular as running slaves to freedom, Knox was co-educational.

Good, far-visioned Pastor Gale, who founded Knox, and for whom Galesburg was named, struck the new note at a time when striking new educational notes took courage. "Females," said he—they were extremely biological then in identifying the sex now reigning—

> "Females are to act a much more important part in the conversion of the world than has been generally supposed; not as preachers of the gospel, but as help-meets of those who are, and as instructors and guides of the rising generations, not only in the nursery, but in the public school."

Catching Up with Pastor Gale.

Cardinal O'Donnell, primate of all Ireland, was saying precisely that a few weeks ago in Chicago, and it was considered so significant that editors put pieces in the newspapers about it.

The world, you see, has caught up with Presbyterian Pastor Gale of Galesburg.

At Lombard college—Universalist but not crabbedly so—in the other end of town from Knox's campus, they also have welcomed "females" for generations, and their denominationalism, in so far as it functions at all, functions principally along the lines of extracting money from Universalists to educate the wide world.

On Lombard's campus stands the celebrated "Lombard Elm," a gigantic tree—nay, shapely bouquet rather—which measures 138 feet broad from tip to tip of branches and to see which is well worth the 165 mile ride from Chicago, if you are interested in the essential but quiet friends of mankind.

Preacher, Actor, and Elms.

On Lombard's campus, where the theologian, Charles Skinner, father of Otis Skinner, the actor, once reigned as college president, are eight other elms and two maples with a spread of over a hundred feet, but the glory of the place is the 138 footer. For years it ranked as one of the three most notable elms in the United States, the other two being the now vanished Cambridge elm under which General Washington took command of our armies, and the beauty at Brinfield, Mass. Our Chicagoland treasure was planted in 1867, and Lombard college, mindful as it has to be about staying within its none too copious budget, spent $400 on it last year. Now there are 400 feet of cables in it and yards of braces. "A tree," said Joseph Mayo Tilden, who once was teacher at Harvard and has been president of Lombard college these eight years, and who is shrewd enough to know that this elm is a bigger asset to the college and city than a new pump factory would be—that is, as far as making Galesburg a place of pilgrimage for Chicagoland is concerned—"a tree," said he, "will never die if you take care of it." He said Davy, the great tree man of Kent, O., told him that.

He Is a Real Go-Getter.

Joseph Tilden, bank president, is a crackling live wire and, of course, has a "drive" on his hands—a half million drive for Lombard, which is seventy-five years old this year. Of the half million he has already extracted $75,000 from Galesburg. That's how busy he is Business, I fear, like to cost him money out of pocket, for in his ardor he would park his car on the steps of a church after worship if he thought he saw a promising "prospect" coming out. The other day the chief of police—Tilden having been arrested three times for illegal parking—said to him. "President, the next time you come in here, I'll fine you!"

That is how ardent Tilden is. Welcome everywhere, too. Not long ago Father Doubleday invited him to speak at a third degree initiation of the Knights of Columbus. He went, and he was the only non-Catholic in the assemblage crowded into the dining room of the Union hotel, and he spoke on "Americanism and Duty to Country," and was warmly applauded. That is the kind of man Tilden is. (And that, I might add, is also how spaciously tolerant the Rev. Father George Doubleday is.) Other go-getters believe in Tilden, the go-getter, and his friend, Owen Young, the General Electric magnate, and Vice President Dawes' closest Luddy, recently gave Lombard a broadcasting apparatus.

30,000 Its Population.

Galesburg's population is 30,000, with a strong Scandinavian and Lutheran element in it, and it is a rich city. Vast Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad shops are there, with 3,300 employés and an annual pay roll of $5,000,000; and the town is the largest horse and mule market in the world, buyers coming from all over the country; and it has the largest tie treating and wood pressing plant in this country; and its chamber of commerce (see polite Mr. Peterson) had a budget of $26,000 in 1925; and Galesburg's celebrated "cornbelt butter" is shipped by the carload as far east as Massachusetts; and it makes 250,000 "Can't Sag" farm gates a year and 2,000,000 feet of ladders a year, and so on and on, to fill a column if you had it—not forgetting, for the autoist's comfort, an excellent hotel called the Custer.

Rich but Not Forgetful.

But, rich as it is and busy as it is, do you know what names stand in the tallest letters in the heart of Galesburg's downtown district?

These:

"Homer—Vergil—Bacon—Chaucer—Shakespeare—Milton—Darwin—Dante—Aristotle—Hugo—Whittier—Franklin—Irving—Goethe—Macaulay—Thackeray—Ruskin—Bancroft—Lowell—Emerson—Dickens—Carlyle—Longfellow—Scott—Hawthorne—Burns—Tennyson."

Those beacon names are carved deep in the gray stone of Galesburg's public library, which contains nearly 70,000 volumes, and a children's room that is especially adequate, and a collection of books on Illinois that is more and more commanding the attention and gratitude of scholars.

What with the noble library of Knox college, which contains a 35 volume, original edition (1752) of the French "Encyclopedia" of brave Diderot in perfect condition, and the small library of Lombard college, and the public library, I figured it out that Galesburg has about 120,000 books at its people's command!

Best of all, it has the men whom its books and its passion for learning and beauty have made what they are.

Educating vs. Turning Out.

Men like the scholar and wise councilor, William Edward Simonds, dean of Knox, to whom I listened for an exhilarating hour on the theme of the small college that really trains men versus the educational department store that merely turns them out—only the dean didn't put it as bluntly as that. "We are able," said he, "to know our students, and our students know us." And this: "Our problems concern individuals instead of crowds."

Men, too, I met like young R. C. Ingersoll of the Coulter Disc company, who has made his, and his father's, shops and foundries look like an English park by means of generous tree, shrub and flower planting, which rejoices and makes better the lives of their workmen. I heard the workmen say so.

In short, I loved Galesburg and its spirit.

See its scholars and its men of affairs, rest your eyes upon the lovely piece of mellow, red brick Tudor Gothic which is the gem of Knox's campus and which will recall to you the beauty of Hampton court, meditate amid the rich shadows of Knox, where Lincoln and Douglas held one of their titanic debates—do those things and you also will love Galesburg, the city that loves learning.

City Wrangle Over Lease Holds Up Branch Library

The branch library which was to have been constructed in Holden park, Central avenue and Lake street, under a city council ordinance of May 19, has been delayed because A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, yesterday altered the 99 year lease voted by the council to provide that it could be terminated in 1951 after due notice. Colin Fyffe, president of the library board, said that the building was to have been of such a character that it would serve much longer than 1951, and the lease would not be accepted in its present form.

Corporation Counsel Francis X. Busch in an opinion said that the altered contract is unfair and suggested that it be modified. A conference of officials will probably be called to iron out the difficulties.

HUNT DESERT FOR TRAIN HOLDUPS AND MAIL HAUL

Wamsutter, Wyo., Aug. 14.—(AP)—The sand dunes of the desert in southwestern Wyoming late today were being searched by sheriffs and cowboys for two men who early today robbed a Union Pacific train of 23 pouches of registered mail while the train was speeding through Wyoming. The value of the loot had not been determined tonight.

Airmail pilots, flying between Cheyenne and Salt Lake City were asked by postal officials to scan the desert for the fugitives.

With apparently well laid plans, two men boarded the mail car at Rawlins, 41 miles east of here, and at the point of pistols bound and gagged the two postal clerks. Waiting at Wamsutter, a confederate of the robbers changed a railroad signal so that the train was slowed down. The robbers are then believed to have jumped off and taken to flight with their confederate. The clerks remained bound until the train reached Rock Springs, when the robbery was discovered, because of their failure to deliver the mail.

SWISS MUSICIAN IS FIRST CONQUEROR OF ALPINE PEAK

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

GENEVA, Aug. 14.—M. Blanchet of Lausanne, a Swiss musician and personal friend of Ignatz Paderewski, is the first Alpinist to climb a virgin peak of the Aiguilles du Diable, in the Mont Blanc range. It is more than 12,000 feet high and two climbers have lost their lives trying to reach its top.

The Aiguilles du Diable consist of five almost perpendicular points, all over 12,000 feet high, four of which had been climbed.

M. Blanchet, with two guides, left Chamonix and returned there exactly twenty-two hours later, having rested only two hours. M. Paderewski, who lives at Morgestar, near Lausanne, was among the first to send congratulations to M. Blanchet.

LENROOT IN RAGE AS BLAINE SAYS HE DODGED VOTING

Cites Illness with Scorn for Foe's Tactics.

Elkhorn, Wis., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—In a dramatic speech here tonight, Senator Irvin L. Lenroot answered the attack made by Gov. John Blaine on Senator Lenroot for his absence from the senate at the time of the illness of Mrs. Lenroot and during Senator Lenroot's own illness.

In a rage at what he considered the unfairest incident of the campaign, Senator Lenroot said: "If Gov. Blaine can make any political capital out of the fact that I was absent from roll calls and in attendance upon my wife when she was seriously ill a thousand miles away from Washington, he is welcome to it."

Cites Tally of Roll Calls.

The attack of Gov. Blaine came at Brodhead last night.

"The governor charged me with ducking roll calls, and he states that out of 207 roll calls, the congressional record shows that I was absent 159 times, present and answered to my name 48 times, and was paired eleven times," Senator Lenroot said.

"This is a very fair sample of the campaign that Gov. Blaine is carrying on. He takes the congressional record at a time when I was ill for many weeks and unable to attend sessions, although I did get out of a sick bed to vote to pass the soldiers' bonus bill over the veto of the President.

"Then he takes the record at a time when Mrs. Lenroot was very ill and I was in constant attendance upon her. During that winter of 1924 and 1925 he will find that I answered more roll calls than did the late Senator La Follette, who was himself ill.

When State Had No Senator.

"I would not be so contemptible as to criticize the late Senator La Follette, but honored him for it, and if Gov. Blaine can make any political capital for himself out of the fact that I was absent from roll calls when ill myself and when my wife was ill, he is very welcome to it."

The Blaine charges served to recall the long period in Washington in the winter of 1924 and 1925 when Wisconsin had no senator in the senate chamber at Washington, as both Senators La Follette and Lenroot were ill.

Run Over by Truck Driven by Her Father; Killed

Cowden, Ill., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Margaret Irene Prater, four year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hallie Prater, east of Cowden, was killed this afternoon when a gravel truck operated by her father ran over her. She and her little brother accompanied the father to the river. The little girl climbed on the wheel after her father had told her to go up on the bank.

NOTED RUSSIAN, DANTCHENKO, TO JOIN U. S. MOVIES

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

SALZBURG, Aug. 14.—The United Artists corporation signed a contract here today with Vladimir Nemirovitch Dantchenko, co-founder with Constantin Stanislavsky of the Moscow Art theater and sole founder and director of the Moscow Art theater musical studio, which visited America last season.

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of United Artists, tried last spring to induce the great Russian to go to Hollywood. Dantchenko refused the proposal. Four days ago Dantchenko arrived in Salzburg to visit the festival, pay his respects to Max Reinhardt, and express to the latter his admiration for "The Miracle," which he saw in Chicago last spring. Here he was confronted by Morris Gest, American producer, who persuaded him to sign a contract for a year with the United Artists and an option of two more years if Dantchenko can obtain a further release from his home stage. He will take up his duties at Hollywood on Oct. 1.

Dantchenko's imagination created the musical studio's "Carmencita and the Soldier." His vision won Anton Tchekoff to the theater. His masterly realism is almost solely responsible for the production of Gorky's "Lower Depths."

He was a former president of the Insurance union and was one of the oldest members of the Union League club of Chicago. He is survived by his widow and two sons, Paul Blackwelder of St. Louis, Mo., and Eliot Blackwelder of the faculty of Stanford university.

How Far Away Do You Live?

Long ago Hursen wiped out distance, in its relation to funerals. Before that, distance between the home and the "funeral establishment" was important. Today, and every day, Hursen demonstrates that distance away from any one of the 3 Hursen "funeral-homes" in Chicago is the least important factor to consider.

It is only an organization as big as "Hursen's" that can forget the question of distance. No day passes that a "Hursen" funeral is not seen even at as great a distance as 15 miles, either to the North, to the South or to the West. The reason for it is that there are thousands of families in every part of Chicago who will have no one but "Hursen."

There is a good reason, too, for this preference. It is in the unusual elegance of all Hursen funerals. It is in the unusual method, in the unusual generosity of service, in the unequalled automobile equipment in automobiles and Hursen "limousine-hearses" that Hursen funerals excel, no matter whether the funeral be large or small.

There is another important factor. The cost of Hursen funerals is invariably less than the charges made elsewhere. Yet, quality is never sacrificed for price. It is this policy of giving the most for the least that has made "Hursen's" the largest and the greatest funeral establishment in America today. So, call Hursen, of course!

CHINA'S CAPITAL FEELS IRON HEEL OF ALIEN TROOPS

Murders and Robberies Common in Peking.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING, July 18.—[By Mail.]—This is a true story of the hand of Providence, though it took the form of a horse's foot. It is a mere leaf out of one of the many chapters of the story of the occupation of Peking by the Chihli-Shantung allied troops of the Manchurian army of Chang Tso-Lin and of the White Russian brigade under the command of Gen. Merkuloff, survivors all of the White Russian government of Vladivostok—as hard a lot of white soldiers as I ever came in contact with.

These, too, have become Chinese citizens in order that they may become members of the great army of the Manchurian war lord, and chiefly recruited for service against the Red Russians, who by virtue of treaty, occupy the Chinese Eastern railway in northern Manchuria.

New Experience for Peking.

Whole books might be written on the conduct of the Chinese soldiers who have invested and infested Peking, and the suffering is the greater because the capital never before has been the victim of bandits and brutes, only picked troops being permitted in the metropolitan area over centuries of history.

It is as if to impress the diplomats and the delegates of the foreign powers to the customs and judicial conferences with the peculiar fitness of the Chinese for tariff autonomy and the abolition of extraterritoriality. And the impression has been a deep one, as the report of the judicial commissioners will reveal.

A foreigner interested in philanthropic work, who has been in China for thirty-nine years, told me that there were refuged in Peking by charitable and missionary organizations 360,000 persons from the immediate environs of the capital who had been victims of the lust of the Chinese soldiers.

"I believe that in all the area known as the metropolitan district," said this foreigner, "there is not one woman or girl who has not become a victim of these soldiers. Only today I had brought to me news of three girls who had hanged themselves on a single tree because they could not bear the disgrace they had been compelled to suffer—perhaps, as in so many cases, in full view of all the other terrified and helpless villagers."

Instances Plentiful.

Hsiung Shi-Lin, a former premier, who conducts a large orphanage in the western hills; the Methodist, Congregational, Presbyterian, and Church of England missionaries, the nuns of the Catholic convent, and the workers of the Salvation Army can multiply these instances.

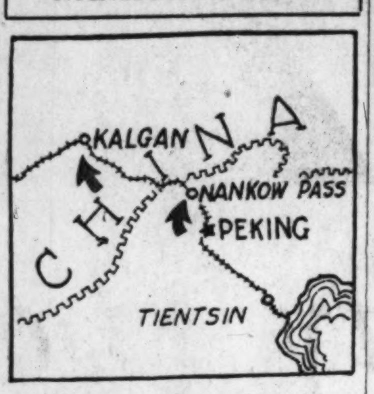
Yet sometimes there is a protest higher than the screams of the pleading mothers and girls, and this story is a case in point. There lived in Hsiao Tien Shui Ching hutung, less than a quarter of a mile from the Grand Hotel de Peking and the great Rockefeller endowed hospital of the Peking Union Medical college, a widow and her sixteen year old daughter.

What with the depreciation of the copper—all China lives on coppers—350 to the silver dollar—and the enforced acceptance of Shantung military notes, worth twenty cents on the dollar, and of Manchurian currency, worth thirty cents on the dollar, these, in common with half a million others who in normal times live on the very verge of starvation, were reduced by the inflated prices for food to desperate necessities, and, in utter ignorance that conditions were even worse outside the walls of Peking, they decided to go to Tungchow, twelve miles distant, where they had relatives and where they hoped living would be cheaper.

Soldier Killed by Own Horse.

What little they possessed they carried and set out afoot through the great east gate and along the road to Tungchow. On the way they met a soldier leading his horse. After robbing the pair of what they had, the soldier announced his intention to have the girl as his victim. As he struggled with her and the mother on her knees pleaded desperately the horse of the soldier—frightened, the unreligious would say—first reared and freed himself of the soldier's hold on the bridle and then kicked. The blow of the hoof struck the soldier squarely in the forehead and he fell dead.

NANKOW TAKEN



[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING, Aug. 14.—Marshal Chang Tso-lin's son, Gen. Chang Sueh-liang, reports the capture of Nankow pass by the fourth Manchurian army. The Kouminchun (National People's army) is retiring to the second line of defense. It is uncertain whether the Kouminchun, the great force organized by Gen. Fing Yu-bsiang and driven from Peking last spring, intends to withdraw to Mongolia. Marshal Wu Pei-fu hitherto refused to leave southward pending the capture of Nankow. If he now leaves, reports indicate a compromise between the Kouminchun and Gen. Chang is possibit.

The opposition against Marshal Wu is increasing. He is accusod of prolonging the war.

Meantime, a Canton expedition headed by Chiang-Kai-shih has reached Shanghai and is preparing to advance northward, threatening Marshal Wu's Yangtze stronghold, while Sun Chuang-fang maintains neutrality in the provinces of Kiangsu, Anhwei, Kiangsi, Fukien, and Chekiang.

SO. SIDE CIVIC GROUPS FORM TRACTION PLAN

City-owned transit lines, a five-cent fare, subways, removal of "L" tracks from the loop and feeder busses are the major planks in a traction program endorsed yesterday by the South Side Allied Civic clubs.

This organization, comprising some twenty smaller groups, according to P. K. Hardin, secretary, will demand a referendum of an ordinance containing these principles at the November election. The plan except wherein it calls for municipal ownership and specifies the fare, is the same as that in the ordinance now before the council.

In a lengthy formal statement, Hardin declared that the traction corporations are "bullying the people into building subways for them."

A meeting of the traction heads and bankers with the council local transportation committee is scheduled for next Tuesday when it is expected that the traction officials will make their positions known. Heretofore they have refused to confer with the aldermanic group.

WESTON, FAMED WALKER, LOST IN NEW YORK, FOUND

New York, Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Edward Payson Weston, 88 years old, famous all his life as a long distance walker, was found at 8 o'clock this morning wandering about near 325 North Strand avenue, Brooklyn, apparently lost. His daughter, Mrs. Anna L. O'Hagan of 625 West Indiana avenue, Philadelphia, notified the police on Tuesday to search for him because she had not heard from him since he left his home there to take a bus for New York four days ago.

Patrolman Arthur Brown led him to the Gates avenue police station, where he was lodged in a rear room while Sergt. Robert W. Smith notified Mrs. O'Hagan. Dr. Gittleman of Beth Mose hospital pronounced the veteran hiker in excellent physical condition.

Weston talked somewhat incoherently, but from what he said the police deduced that he had driven here from Philadelphia with friends and had been wandering the streets since his arrival.

Leaders Duel to Settle Italian Industrial Row

ROME, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Strikes and lockouts being banned in Italy, labor disputes took a new form today when Giuseppe Moschini, labor leader in the province of Mantua, and Gino Olivetti, chief of the Fascist Industrialist federation, fought a duel. The clash ended with slight wounding of Olivetti. The duel was arranged after peace steps similar to those provided for inter-class disputes had failed to smooth over the labor controversy.

CRIME, POLITICS LINKED IN CANTON MURDER INQUIRY

Chicago Lawyer Says He Will Expose Ring.

Canton, O., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Crime and politics are synonymous in Canton.

Denizens of the underworld are hirelings of men who also give orders to the city's political leaders. Bags of gold are the reward of the faithful—quick death is meted out to the doublecrosser.

The slayer of Don R. Mellett, crusading publisher, who sought to expose political connections with Canton's jungle, is known and the identity of the vice barons who paid trigger men to slay Mellett is no secret. But the killers have not been brought to justice because—

Crime and politics and crime are synonymous in Canton.

Civic Explosion Predicted.

These charges were broadcast today by Joseph R. Roach, Chicago criminal lawyer, brought here to investigate vice and liquor conditions.

He is ready to go before the Stark county grand jury and disclose startling information when that body convenes next week. His testimony, he said, will occasion a violent explosion in political circles, a general upheaval that certain parties tried to avert by throwing a wet banket over the Mellet murder investigation.

Roach declared his evidence is bottled and sealed and, even though local authorities do not take the slayers into custody, the names will all be revealed in the federal courts when he presents evidence of an alleged mammoth liquor conspiracy.

He intimated that knowledge of the Mellett murder was common gossip in the underworld for days before the publisher was slain. Mellett was a marked man. He knew too much and was broadcasting his knowledge.

Efforts were made to intimidate Mellett by threatening his life, but failed. It was then the underworld wireless started to function. Couriers were dispatched to various underworld heads and a conference followed.

Police in Rum Conspiracy.

Just as a jury deliberates over the fate of a man charged with murder, those underworld barons met to decide the fate of Don Mellett. But mercy was out of the question. Those gang leaders did not debate over the matter of life or death. Mellett had violated the most sacred rule of the crime colony. He had "squealed," and his life was forfeited.

The above is Roach's version of the underworld activities just preceding the assassination of the interfering publisher. He also said it appears that several members of the Canton police department, involved in the liquor conspiracy uncovered by him, had knowledge of the contemplated murder of Mellett, and may even have been implicated in the murder plot.

Roach says that never in his career has he been brought face to face with such a gigantic conspiracy and such wholesale corruption that exists in this city.

Pat McDermott Shielded.

"When the conspiracy is disclosed," Roach said, "it will be one of the most exceptional revelations I have ever encountered."

Even after the special investigators had been brought to the city to solve the case, Roach declared, gangsters were piloting liquor laden trucks in and out of the city right under the noses of the city police.

While a national hunt was on for Pat McDermott, wanted for questioning in connection with the Mellett case, he came to Cleveland on a truck loaded with booze. Roach further stated that he had evidence that the truck was driven by a Canton detective.

The Chicaog attorney has invited disaster by his revelations, but does not fear the trigger men.

The grand jury will probably hear Roach the first part of next week. But if he is not called he expects to have his case prepared for the federal grand jury by the first of September, and the expected revelations will materialize at that time.

NEW STUTZ

A Custom-Built Car Costing Twenty Thousand or the New Safety Stutz at $2995

Embodying every refinement, every advanced feature you would prescribe in a high-priced made-to-order automobile

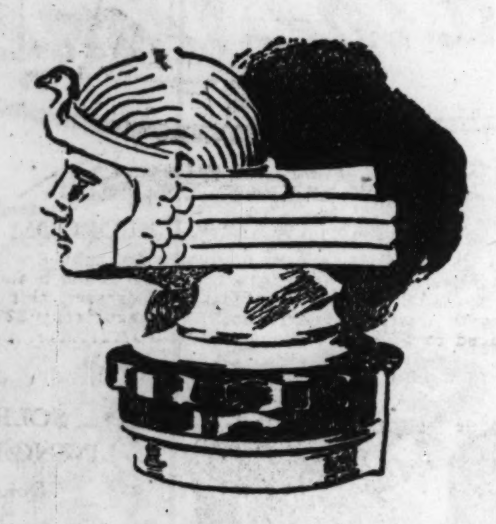
A superlatively expensive automobile sometimes falls short of expressing the owner's true tastes. The conspicuously costly car is frequently a badge of wealth, rather than evidence of discrimination.

Not so with the NEW SAFETY STUTZ, for which there is a steadily growing preference among the social and business leaders of Chicago.* Its low price is accepted as a sincere effort to bring motoring standards "down to earth"—not as a measure of Value.

Cultivated people appreciate the refinement and good taste which, in the NEW SAFETY STUTZ, go hand in hand with individuality and distinction. Men and women of affairs find these qualities entirely in keeping with their station.

Yet the unique character of the NEW SAFETY STUTZ reflects more than simply good breeding and luxuriousness. It bespeaks the honesty of purpose which actuates its makers.

Precedents have been brushed aside—established customs disregarded in bringing forth the NEW SAFETY STUTZ. Manufacturing courage and integrity have triumphed in Faultless Performance. An outstanding service to Motordom has been achieved. High ideals have been fully realized. The NEW SAFETY STUTZ is truly Tomorrow's Car at Today's surprisingly low price—$2995, F. O. B. Indianapolis.



The symbol of Safety

All the Luxuries of a $20,000 Made-to-Order Automobile in the NEW STUTZ at $2995

IF you were ready and willing to expend $20,000 in building your ideal of a motor car, it would embody no more beauty, no more luxury, comfort, convenience and safety than you can enjoy in the NEW SAFETY STUTZ at $2995.

The Motor

You would choose the finest 8-cylinder motor obtainable. Familiarity with automotive design would dictate 8-in-line. The NEW SAFETY STUTZ 8-in-line provides unexcelled quiet and flexibility, power to spare for every emergency, responsiveness that is a sheer delight, and smoother, longer, trouble-free service. Always noted for advanced motor design, STUTZ has now incorporated many new features which place this engine years ahead of its time in remarkable motoring performance.

1. Dual Ignition. Your Ideal Perfect Motor Car would include dual ignition as found in the NEW SAFETY STUTZ—two spark plugs for each cylinder, igniting on both sides of the gas chamber, insuring certain, quicker and fuller explosion, cleaner firing and much greater power.

2. Oil Rectifier. The same triple duty oil rectifier you would choose for your $20,000 Ideal Perfect Motor Car is built into this ultra modern car. As the motor runs, grit and dirt are removed, water and gasoline (crankcase dilution) are boiled off and the gasoline returned to the carburetor. Change of oil every few hundred miles is unnecessary. Carbon removal nuisance is reduced to a minimum, resulting in smooth performance and complete motoring enjoyment.

Safety

Your $20,000 custom-built car must, above all, be safe. From radiator cap to tail light, no detail has been slighted to provide maximum safety in the NEW SAFETY STUTZ.

Safety is accentuated by its greatly lowered center of gravity. This is best appreciated when driving on the highway and in crowded traffic. The NEW SAFETY STUTZ is 5 to 8 inches lower, only 70 inches from road bed to top of sedan, yet road clearance and head room are greater than on many highly priced cars. The same roominess inside, over-head and from seat to floor, characterize STUTZ cars now as always.

Worm Drive: Such a radical departure from ordinary practice in motor car design is made possible by incorporating the tried and proven worm drive rear axle, long accepted and preferred in the costliest European cars. The NEW SAFETY STUTZ is the first and only American passenger car to provide the benefits of a worm drive. Unlike any other types of rear axle, the worm drive improves with use. Timken, its maker, estimates that this worm drive has a lifetime of 500,000 miles, or more—years of satisfactory, trouble-free service.

Chassis: The Safety Chassis is unqualifiedly the strongest chassis on any automobile. Steel running boards are integral parts of the frame—veritable side bumpers, affording extra protection to both the car and its occupants.

Brakes: You would want the newest perfected four-wheel brakes in your $20,000 made-to-order car. You can find them in the NEW SAFETY STUTZ—brakes that operate evenly and simultaneously, brakes you can depend on every time. They are built by Timken on the hydrostatic principle, and hermetically sealed, the very newest improvement. They give equalized braking pressure at every point on all 4 wheels and bring the car to an easy, graceful stop under all conditions.

Safety Glass: Not only the windshield, but every window is equipped with the newest, perfected safety glass, an exclusive feature in the New Safety Stutz. The hazard of injury from flying shattered glass at front, sides and rear of the car is completely eliminated.

Luxurious Bodies by Brewster

Surmounting all the structural and mechanical perfections of your $20,000 custom-built automobile, you want a body that will represent your own personal tastes, one that is the finest in design and appointment, the most luxuriously comfortable and arrestingly beautiful body that the art of coach-building can produce.

Every NEW SAFETY STUTZ body is designed and constructed under the personal supervision of Brewster of New York, respected in America and abroad for the superb artistry and craftsmanship which characterize all coachwork bearing the Brewster name-plate.

The long sweeping lines are more than modern—they are individual and distinctive, and embody all the elegance and dignity you would wish for in any motor car at any price.

Roomy comfortable seats are deeply upholstered in your choice of fine fabrics. The outside finish is subject to your selection from tones which beggar description for beauty and harmony of color. The safety glass ventilators on every window, exclusive on this car, add to the unusual details of interior appointment.

You can best appreciate the many remarkable features by driving this ultra modern car yourself. This, you are invited to do. Satisfy yourself that what we say is true—that the NEW SAFETY STUTZ embodies every comfort, every convenience, every luxury and all the safety you would prescribe in ordering a $20,000 custom-built automobile.

To drive it will be a revelation to you. Call or telephone today or any day. You will find us less anxious to try to sell than to let this truly marvelour car speak for itself to you behind the wheel.

*Many enthusiastic owners of the NEW SAFETY STUTZ in Chicago have voluntarily given us permission to refer you to them by phone or letter. We will gladly furnish you their names and locations.

IRISH PROTEST LOSING PICTURES WORTH MILLION

Say British Trick Them on Lane Paintings.

DUBLIN, Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Led by the painter, poet and publicist, George Russell—better known in art and literature as A. E.—many noted Irish men and women are making a fight to induce the British government to return to the city of Dublin the famous $1,250,000 Lane collection of modern paintings.

The collection is that of Sir Hugh Lane, who went down on the Lusitania. It includes a number of masterpieces of great value, Manets and Monets, Corots, Renoirs and other modern paintings. Those in the fight contend the collection should become the property of the city of Dublin under the terms of a codicil added to his will by Sir Hugh on the eve of his departure on the trip to America from which he never returned.

Irish Senate May Act.

It is learned today that the matter is under discussion by members of the Irish Free State senate. W. B. Yeats, writer, is urging his colleagues in that body to take action.

There are thirty-nine paintings in the collection. And while Sir Hugh's will was properly executed, the codicil was unwitnessed, although signed by Sir Hugh. A committee of inquiry appointed by the British government issued a finding that Sir Hugh believed the codicil constituted legal disposition of the collection.

In addition A. E. and others claim that Sir Hugh's assurances to his sister, Mrs. Shine; to his aunt, the celebrated Lady Gregory, and to Senator Yeats were "absolutely convincing on that point."

After finding that Sir Hugh intended the pictures to go to his native city, the committee of inquiry advised against legislation to legalise the codicil. It is against this second decision that A. E. and his colleagues are directing their attack.

Leader of Fight Grows Bitter.

A. E., leading the fight, grows bitter. He speaks of the "theft" of the collection by the British.

"It takes a highly skilled ethical contortionist," says the painter and poet, "to square the second reply of the committee of inquiry with the first—namely: that Sir Hugh believed the codicil was legal. But the committee squares it, accomplishing it by imagining—let us quote its own words—'that if Sir Hugh Lane had been spared to witness the growth of the new gallery at Millbank, no doubt can be entertained that he would have destroyed the codicil and would have been content to let the pictures form the nucleus of a representative collection in modern continental art.'"

From A. E. come also charges that powerful influences designed to affect its decision were brought to bear on the committee of inquiry. He says that Sir Joseph Duveen was induced to build an addition to the Tate gallery by the promise that the Lane collection would be handed over to it. A. E. denies that any person had the right to make such a promise.

Speaks of "False Pretenses."

"Had the committee reported that the pictures should by the legalizing of the codicil go to Dublin," says A. E., "then Sir Joseph Duveen might reasonably have cried out that he was tricked into spending a large sum to build a gallery, that there had been false pretenses."

Supporting A. E., Senator Yeats urges his colleagues in the senate to request the publication of the minutes of the meeting of the trustees of the national gallery in London, at which assurances were said to have been given that the Lane collection would be placed in the new gallery contributed by Sir Joseph Duveen.

Senator Yeats declares that Lady Gregory had both oral and written assurances from the late Lord Curzon—the most active trustee of the national gallery—that no authority had been given by that body to promise anything concerning the pictures to Sir Joseph Duveen or any one else.

"We really feel sick," says A. E., "at the cant that if Sir Hugh had lived he would have changed his mind."

"It is a mean grab. We would not have been half as angry if they had simply said, 'No, it is a bad precedent to legalize an unwitnessed codicil.' But they let us see into the whole disgusting business."

OPEN BIDS FOR STREET LIGHTS IN OUTER ZONES

Nine and one-half square miles of outlying territory will be served with 6,000 electric lights by the firm chosen from among those whose bids were opened yesterday by John T. Miller, commissioner of gas and electricity.

The work is to be paid for out of the $2,000,000 bond issue voted early this year and will result in parts of twenty-two wards being supplied with electricity instead of gasoline or gas lamps. The lowest bid, that of the Outdoor Lighting company, was $134,893 less than the $550,000 estimated by the department.

The contract will not be awarded till Tuesday, but Mr. Miller was confident that if the Outdoor Lighting company was found to be reputable it would get the job.

Cooler Weather Relieves Shanghai Cholera Epidemic

SHANGHAI, Aug. 14.—(AP)—With the falling temperatures, the cholera epidemic which has been ravaging the Chinese population in the environs of Shanghai is subsiding. This also is due to the drastic precautionary measures enforced by the authorities. Outbreaks of the disease, however, are reported from many places in Kiangsu province, north of Shanghai.

'KITCHENER BODY' IN LONDON; FOUND IN NORWAY GRAVE

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 14.—The Kitchener myth refuses to down.

Frank Power, London journalist, who brought back from Norway the body he claims is that of Lord Kitchener, today wrote Prime Minister Baldwin as follows:

"I have in my possession the remains of a person I am convinced is the late Lord Kitchener. I hasten to tell you they are at the disposition of a competent department and I am only too ready to keep any appointment you make."

Lord Kitchener was killed on June 5, 1916, when the cruiser Hampshire, while en route to Russia, struck a German mine in the North sea.

Finds Remnants of Uniform.

Mr. Power told THE TRIBUNE this afternoon he had received a communication from the imperial war graves commission asking for further information.

"I am supplying all the information in my power and am asking for a complete investigation," he said.

When asked how he had identified Lord Kitchener and how the body was clothed, Mr. Power said:

"So far as I can say now, there are remnants only of his field marshal's full dress uniform. There is a mark on the skull and there are his teeth, which a dentist could identify. There is his stature, and I am informed it is possible to identify him by a certain leg injury, although this occurred years ago."

Other Hampshire Dead There.

Discussing the admiralty statement saying that the body was that of one of the sailors of the battle of Jutland, Mr. Power declared:

"It is an extremely curious fact that nothing has ever been said about the Jutland battle dead being buried in Norway until I made public my discovery. The authorities never mentioned the existence of British graves in Scandinavia, but now that the matter is revealed, they admit that 50 per cent of those British graves in Norway contain bodies of unidentified men. My information is extremely definite that other bodies from the cruiser Hampshire, were found there and the authority for this is based on a report I have in my possession from an eminent doctor."

The body which Mr. Power claims to be Lord Kitchener's rests in a private morgue in Waterloo road. It is encased in an elm casket placed inside of another coffin of elm and copper. The case has not been disturbed since it arrived in London yesterday. It is covered with the union jack, a crucifix and a picture of the Saviour. Two candlesticks and vases of flowers stand at the head. Mr. Power says he is reserving the right to be present when the coffin is opened.

DENIES BODY WAS WASHED UP.

The British admiralty a few days ago issued a statement branding as false the story that Lord Kitchener's body was washed ashore in Scandinavia and buried there. The admiralty also contradicted the story that Lord Kitchener lost his life as a result of a betrayal by naval spies.

GUARD FOR MORGAN MEN NOW SO THEY CAN'T SPILL BEANS

New York, Aug. 14.—[Special.]—To make certain a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan and company would not again be quoted as commenting upon the state and prospects of the stock market, Dwight W. Morrow, member of that firm was accompanied to the gangplank of the White Star liner Homeric, on which he sailed for France, by half a dozen companions, who informed newspaper men, "Mr. Morrow has nothing to say."

The Rev. S. Parkes Cadman sailed to take part in a conference at Berne, Switzerland.

Mr. Cadman said he feared it would be a long time before the prohibition question was settled, but asked, now that it had been made a part of the constitution, how it could be gotten out.

Water Cooling is behind the times.

SKYWRITING that casts its shadow on the ground

THE NEXT BIG ADVANCE in the automobile industry is coming from the sky. No one can ignore its approaching shadow.

For the development and the use by airplanes of the air-cooling principle pioneered and perfected by Franklin has now definitely passed the turning point. Today its superiority in aviation is unquestioned and the total eclipse of water-cooling for aircraft engines is drawing near.

Do You Know the Facts?

Byrd conquered the North Pole with air-cooled motors. Cobham used them to span darkest—and hottest—Africa.

And by the time you read this, Fonck or Davis will be on the point of starting the $25,000 New York-to-Paris non-stop flight. Warned by Hawker's historic failure at mid-ocean in 1919, due to a radiator leak, both have chosen air-cooled planes for the attempt.

The New Aviation Standard

The U. S. Navy is now concentrating its development on air-cooled engines. This is on the authority of Commander Wilson of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics.

The Army is following suit. There, too, the air-cooled engine is regarded as the coming standard. Many Liberty engines have already been converted to air-cooling.

Nearly every new design in commercial planes has chosen the air-cooled engine, according to one of the country's leading aircraft engine experts. The new Philadelphia-Washington passenger line is using them. The important new cotton-spraying work in the South is being done with air-cooled airplanes.

All Over the World

Profiting by the experience of Government air-mail flyers, who found that the greatest cause of forced landings in their work was cooling failures, six of the ten private contractors now operating these lines have chosen air-cooled planes.

Abroad, it is the same story. The Jupiter air-cooled engine in particular is rapidly driving water-cooled airplane motors out of existence. South American governments are using them. The Canadian government is employing them for its exacting forest patrol service.

But the greatest demonstration of air-cooling's superiority is taking place about you—not above you. On land—not aloft. Not in airplanes, but in the New Franklin Car!

Even More Valuable in Motor Cars

In airplanes, the benefits of air-cooling are restricted to greater dependability, greater economy, and more power per pound of weight. But in the Franklin these benefits extend throughout the entire range of performance.

Air-cooling saves worry, work and expense—that goes without saying. And it lets you take the worst hill without a stop—cross even a desert in any temperature—use your car without stint at any time.

But that is only the beginning! The Franklin is a better car not because it is air-cooled, but because it can use air-cooled construction!

Air-Cooled Construction

Cutting out radiator and water cuts down weight. Along with less weight in the cooling system goes less weight throughout—particularly below the springs.

With no delicate radiator to protect, rigidity—foe to comfort—can be killed. Chassis frame can "give", as it should. Springs can be full-elliptic. Body can be hung at four points only. Truss-rods can be thrown away.

Other good results follow in quick order—chief among them the remarkable Franklin non-skid transmission brake.

Results Are Undeniably Better

Get behind the wheel of the New Franklin, and see, feel and hear the difference that these principles make on the road—

The amazing smoothness of riding—the outstanding ease of handling—the sense of security—the ability to cover more miles in a day—the unequaled fine car economy—

And along with it the quick-triggered getaway—the rush of power on hills—the self-evident quality—the distinctive style—of the remarkable New Franklin.

Take the Ride of Your Life—Today!

That is what has pushed Franklin's 1926 sales even ahead of 1925—the most prosperous year in Franklin's long history!

That is what has produced an increase so far this year of 50% in sales to former owners of water-cooled cars.

One ride brings out the undeniable difference. A car is waiting to give it to you at our showroom. Make a real motoring discovery—Today! See what air-cooling can do for you. And ask about special terms of payment.

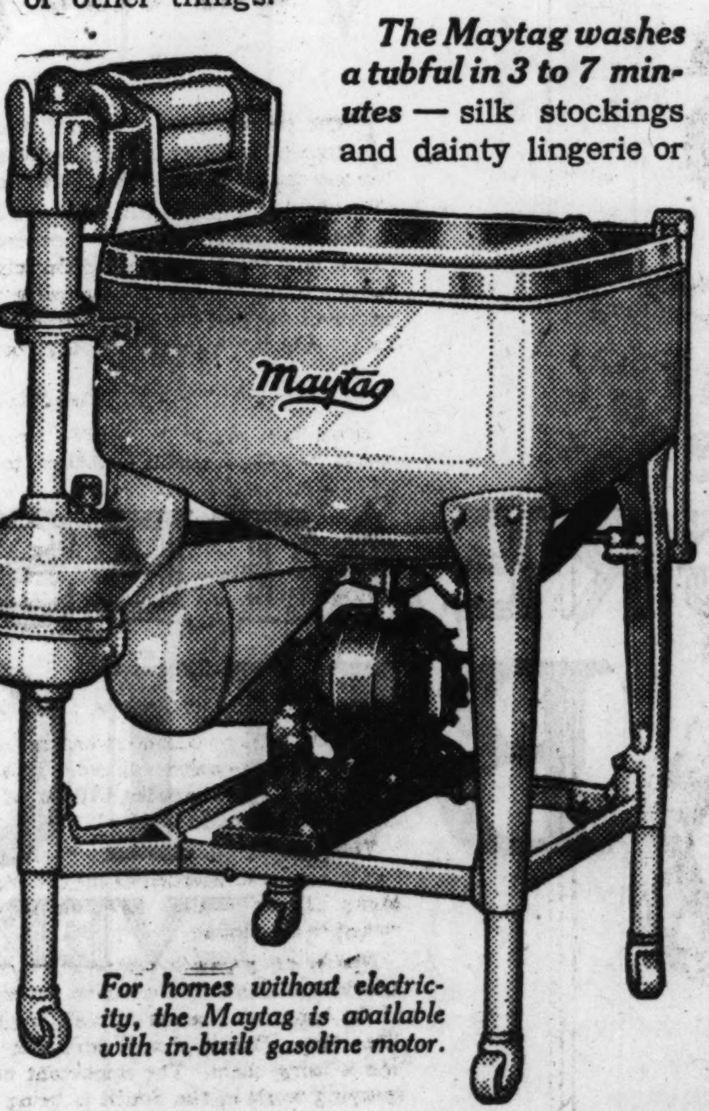
The Maytag washes a tubful in 3 to 7 minutes — silk stockings and dainty lingerie or sheets and shirts. The capacity of the roomier, heat-retaining aluminum tub is 21 gallons instead of the usual 17 And the Maytag does all the work. Even cuffs —collars—neckbands are washed clean without hand-rubbing.

You feel fit when "Maytag Wash Hour" is over. Your comfort is well cared for. The washer is adjustable to suit your height. The hinged cover opens flat back and forms a handy work shelf. The automatic wringer instantly adjusts itself to a handkerchief or a blanket and wrings both dry. The wringer is handily-low, close to the waterline, with instant tension-release and self-reversing drainboard. The tub drains and cleans itself in 30 seconds after the washing is done.



For homes without electricity, the Maytag is available with in-built gasoline motor.

As the result of new protests from otorists, Mr. Mueller recalled Justice seph Wright of Maywood and deanded that the Maywood "yellow p" system of speeder trials be abolied.

This system requires a motorist, hen arrested, to sign a slip giving e court authority to appoint somee to represent him if he fails to apar for trial. By this means the osecuting policeman is often able to present the defendant at the trial, cording to Braun, and the justice thereby entitled to collect $5 costs. e state law permits justices to colt but $2 in cases of bond forfeiture. After a heated conference yesterday, stice Wright agreed to discontinue e use of yellow slips.

FIREMAN FRED WRIGHT.

FIREMAN RISKS LIFE TO RESCUE UNCONSCIOUS BOY

Pipeman Fred Wright of hook and ladder company No. 37 yesterday risked his life to climb a ladder to the third floor of an apartment building at 5706 Drexel avenue, enter a smoke filled bedroom, and carry to safety a 15 year old boy who was lying unconscious in bed.

Louis Kamerlink, the boy, was sleeping and his sister, Ida, 13 years old, was in a bedroom near him when the fire started. Their parents were visiting. The flames were confined to the third story and other occupants of the building escaped. When firemen arrived, it was thought that all the apartments were vacated, but Pipeman Wright was sent up to make sure.

Wright found the boy in bed and lifted him to his shoulders, carrying him down a thirty-six foot ladder to safety. The girl was awakened and made her way unassisted down the inside stairs and out the front door.

a vacuum cleaned crank case

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT BUICK WILL BUILD THEM to protect closed car passengers from engine fumes

The new Vacuum Ventilator, introduced in the 1927 Buick, ends all annoyance from engine odors and smoke.

It removes gases and vapors from the crankcase and expels them through an ejector tube, before they can penetrate the car's interior.

Even with all windows closed, the air inside Buick closed cars is free of engine fumes, at every speed.

This is a luxury never before attained in closed car construction.

The Vacuum Ventilator is one of the big reasons why the 1927 Buick is the Greatest Buick Ever Built! Drive one of these new Buicks and notice the difference!

BROOKHART HAS KIND WORDS FOR NEW IOWA SOLON

Commendation of Stewart Aid to Harmony.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Republican party harmony is once more listed on the Iowa political stage.

Two statements supporting the middle west's fight for farm relief legislation by Senator David W. Stewart and words of praise for Senator Stewart spoken by Smith W. Brookhart, the party's erstwhile bad boy, are the latest indications that there is no more gunpowder in the party peace pipe.

Break Is Averted.

Peace of a sort has prevailed in Republican ranks since the state convention July 21 when the prodigal Brookhart was ostentatiously gathered unto the party bosom. The two week old party harmony was threatened Aug. 6 when the Republican delegates were reconvened to nominate a candidate for the remainder of Senator Cummins' term at the November election.

Insistence of the old guard on the nomination of a Cummins man threatened to bring about a break with the Brookhart forces, but the choice of Stewart apparently was acceptable to the insurgent's supporters since Stewart, while a member of the Cummins' wing, supported Brookhart in 1924 and has progressive tendencies.

Praises Stewart's Stand.

The stand in favor of farm relief legislation taken last Thursday by Senator Stewart in his first formal address since his appointment was praised by Col. Brookhart in Sioux City, Stewart's home city, yesterday. At the same time the one time insurgent conferred with members of the Woodbury county Republican central committee, a procedure in contrast to that of his election campaign two years ago.

At least one sharp reversal of political attitude was evidenced when Brookhart was introduced at a luncheon meeting by George C. Call, prominent business man, who supported Cummins in the June primary and who heretofore had been opposed to the colonel's political views. "At this time," Call said, "the majority of the people of Iowa are with him and believe in the doctrine."

Senator Stewart was not in Sioux City to meet Brookhart, having come to Des Moines, where he issued a formal statement on the farm relief question today.

AUTOISTS, THESE ORPHANS NEED A LITTLE LIFT

An S. O. S. signal was sent out yesterday for more automobiles to transport the orphans and old people who will be guests next Wednesday of the Orphans' Automobile Outing association at its twenty-second annual picnic at Lincoln park. Three hundred cars are lacking, officials said, and unless they are forthcoming there will be many disappointments.

Not a single car has been offered by residents of Forest Park or River Forest, it was stated, although several institutions located in those towns will be represented among the guests. It is emphasized by the officials in charge that the service required will occupy only a couple of hours.

Volunteer motorists are advised that they will enjoy a new experience in driving, for the entire police force of the city and of the park systems have been given definite orders to allow the right of way to all cars bearing the orphans's picnic signs.

OUT OF WORK, ENDS HIS LIFE.

Oscar A. Eckstrom, 60 years old, 3218 North Racine avenue, a laborer, was found asphyxiated in his room yesterday. His wife, Selma, said he was despondent because he was out of work.

Alabama Democratic Rift Offers Chance.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Republican leaders in Alabama are said to have taken advantage of a reported rift in the ranks of Alabama Democrats to push Republican party affairs, not only in state politics but in the next presidential campaign as well.

There was increased activity in Republican circles today when James Esdale, head of the Alabama branch of the Ku Klux Klan, was quoted in the Birmingham News as saying that the rank and file of the klan and their sympathizers to the number of 150,000 would "scratch" Al Smith, in event the New York man headed the national Democratic ticket.

This interest, by Republicans, was accentuated by the approaching date for the state Republican convention, at which time a full congressional and state ticket is expected to be placed in the field.

G. O. P. Officially Dry.

The Alabama Republican party is officially dry, and its individual members are standing behind present prohibition statutes, it is stated. It is said to be an open secret that Republicans would attempt to make capital if the opposition party should place any national candidate in the field not bone dry.

Mr. Esdale, in his quoted statement, did not say that Democratic members of the klan would support a Republican and bolt their ticket. But it was understood from his statement that klansmen would go to the polls.

Republican leaders appeared to believe that the party had gained considerable strength recently and that Alabama would not longer be a one party state.

Will Seek Unity.

The G. O. P. convention here Wednesday promises to bring together all factions of the Republican party in an attempt to mold the organization into a workable entity that will cause itself to be felt in local and national affairs, according to leaders in the state.

Mr. Esdale's statement was believed to have been prompted by the success of klan candidates in Tuesday's primary. Bibb Graves, who openly fought Al Smith as a presidential possibility, was nominated for governor. Hugo L. Black, also backed by the klan, had a walkaway in his race for the senatorial nomination.

CONTENTMENT.

No progressive person is ever contented with conditions as they are. There is always some detail to perfect or improve. Little time would be found for an idle and selfish spirit of dissatisfaction if, in earnest and hard work, one would strive to better oneself and help others to do likewise. To ignore these possibilities of betterment is to fall into a rut of mediocrity.

The leaders of a successful business are never content to let things drift. They are hard at work devising means to be of greater service to their customers, for they know that the finer the standard of service, the greater the returns that come from it.

OBSERVERS SEE CLOSE CONTEST FOR NEXT HOUSE

Republican Majority to Be Smaller.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Conflicting claims by Republican and Democratic managers point to a close contest for control of the next house.

The Republicans are seeking to hold their present majority but concede they may suffer some losses.

The Democrats are conducting an offensive which they hope may carry them within reach of a majority.

The impression prevailing among neutral observers is that the Republicans will retain control but by a reduced margin.

The Republican and Democratic campaign committees are getting into full swing, though nominations in many states remain to be made and election day is about eleven weeks distant.

Must Gain 35 Seats.

The Democrats, to capture the house, must gain thirty-five seats. This is possible, according to Representative Oldfield [Dem., Ark.], chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee. It is impossible, says Representative Tilson [Rep., Conn.], who will open eastern headquarters of the Republican congressional campaign committee at New York on Monday.

What the outsiders think is that the regular Republicans may wind up with a net majority of something like fifteen or twenty over the combined opposition of insurgent Republicans, Democrats, independents, and Socialists.

Their net majority at present is 32. The records show a Republican total of 247 which would indicate a majority of 59 over all others, who consist of 183 Democrats, three Farmer Laborites, and two Socialists. Eliminating 12 La Follette Republicans from the 247 gives the Republicans a net total of 235 as against a combined opposition of 203.

In the last "off year" election in 1922 the Democrats elected 205 members of the house. With this number they were able to form a combination with the La Follette Republican group, which held the balance of power, and managed to make things uncomfortable for the administration. In the 1922 election the Democrats made a big increase in strength, having elected only 132 members at the time of the Harding landslide in 1920.

May Win in Pennsylvania.

Representative Oldfield thinks that the Democrats can pick up from fifteen to twenty new seats in the east and as many more in the west. For example, in Pennsylvania, which now has a solid Republican delegation of thirty-six, Mr. Oldfield expects the Democrats to elect six members or even possibly eight or ten. The Republicans lost six seats in Pennsylvania in 1922 and concede that this time one or two may slip out of their hands.

In New York state the Democrats say they will gain at least two seats. The Republicans, on the other hand, do not see how the Democrats can gain there, inasmuch as they already have all but three districts in New York City and also have members from Albany, Rochester, and Buffalo. The state delegates include twenty-three Democrats, twenty Republicans, and one Republican-Socialist. The Republicans think that if Gov. Al Smith does not seek reëlection and a Democrat with less popularity takes his place they ought to gain two or three congressional seats.

The Democrats hope to gain one in Connecticut, one or possibly two in Massachusetts, three or four in New Jersey, two in Maryland, and possibly four in West Virginia. As against these claims, the Republicans expect to hold their own in Connecticut and Massachusetts, admit that they may have some difficulty in holding the three or four doubtful districts in New Jersey, concede that at least one district is doubtful in Maryland where John Philip Hill, present Republican house member, is seeking nomination for the senate, and say they may lose one member in West Virginia, where they now hold five out of six seats.

In Maine, where the election comes Sept. 13, all four present members are Republican and all are likely to be reëlected, with one district probably in doubt, although the incumbent, Wallace H. White Jr., has been elected five times consecutively. The Democrats have a seat in Rhode Island and probably will keep it. The Republicans hold the other two seats and expect to retain them, although the state is usually close, one senator being Republican and the other Democratic.

The Democrats predict gains in Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Montana, Nevada, and California. The Republicans, on the other hand say they will hold their own in all of these states, although admitting there are several doubtful districts.

In the corn belt states the Republicans do not see why their party candidates should lose, because for the most part the Republican nominees represent the views of the farmers on agricultural legislation and have done their part toward securing its enactment. The Republican managers fail to see what advantage the farmers would gain by voting for Democrats merely because they are displeased with the Coolidge farm policies.

See Hope in Minnesota.

The Republicans are hopeful of picking up one of the three seats in Minnesota now held by the Farmer-Labor party. They expect to keep Michigan solidly Republican. They don't see much chance of making any headway in Wisconsin against either the ten La Follette members or against Representative Berger [Soc.]. They expect to reëlect their two members in Idaho and to hold three out of the four districts in Colorado.

Missouri presents a battle ground. The Republicans hold seven districts and the Democrats nine.

In 1922 the Republicans won in only five districts, but notwithstanding this fact, they believe they will keep what they have and possibly pick up an additional seat. In Oklahoma, where the Republicans now have only two out of eight seats, the Democrats expect to gain one and the Republicans admit the situation is doubtful. In Texas the lone Republican congressman, Harry M. Wurzbach, probably will be reëlected.

The Republicans have two seats in Tennessee and three in Kentucky, border states which are usually doubtful. The Republicans expect to hold these seats.

HOME BUILDERS STAGE BARBECUE PICNIC

4,000 Attend

More than 4,000 members of the Home Builders Association of America gathered in Thatcher's Woods at River Forest yesterday for their annual picnic at which a real Dixie barbacue was the feature. Winners of the 40 prizes in the Home Builders $5,000 prize contest were announced, and dolls, ballons, crackets and other novelties given to the children. Robert Sweitzer, county clerk, made an address.

Mexico Starts Cleanup of Bandits; Disarm Agrarians

Mexico City, Aug. 14.—(AP)—The department of war has ordered all military commanders to "completely exterminate" bandit groups. A distinct increase in the operations of bandits is reported in various parts of the republic. The authorities in the state of Vera Cruz are disarming "agrarians," a term that is often a euphemism for bandits. The state also is disarming special guards, fearing that these may turn bandits.

TOP HAT SHOWS PROSPERITY AND PEACE IN ERIN

Gay Throngs Attend Dublin Party.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, July 18.—[By Mail.]—It is a cheerful sign of the times in Ireland to find a Dublin morning newspaper devoting an editorial to the revival of the tall hat in this country.

The Irish Times denies at once the obvious charge of snobbishness, while it points with unfeigned satisfaction to the fact that at a recent garden party given at the viceregal lodge by the governor general almost all the men present wore the conventional silk hat, while at least half a dozen came in summer gray "toppers" with clothes to match. By way of explanation of this joyful revival, which might not seem to require explanation by many, the paper proceeds to say:

"Dublin is a capital city who in her long day has kept the best company. She has a great tradition in art, letters, and the graces of living, and the lamp of her history shines on fair women and brave men. There is something wrong with Dublin, therefore, when she forgets her gayety and ceases to be careful about her clothes."

Shows Civic Pride.

It is not difficult to detect the note of civic pride which this conveys, and of the prevalence and deep-rootedness of that pride there is no manner of doubt. Dublin is a capital city and ought, on state occasions, to be top-hatted.

A country just emerging from revolution has not much use for social amenities garden parties, and top hats. Less than five years ago Ireland was signing a treaty with England after a terrible struggle. Less than four years ago she was in the throes of civil conflict. Now the sword is sheathed, the machine gun is silent, most of the scars have been healed.

The progress which has been made towards good order is great. It is no wonder that Ireland is glad that the days of the garden party and of other social gayeties have returned. Within the last few weeks the social round has been wonderfully diversified and the weather has been all that such gatherings require to spell complete success.

Many Nations Represented.

The governor general's party was something in the nature of an exhibition to the world, a proof to the natives that the Irish Free State has "come out." And it was appropriate that the chief guests of the occasion were the delegates of the International Women's League of Peace, which was simultaneously holding its congress in Dublin.

The women came from the civilized nations of the world, including Great Britain, France, America, Germany, the Balkan states, and the Scandinavian countries, as well as from India and Australia. It was a wonderful spectacle to see this very representative assemblage of women, many of whom wore native costumes of many colors, paying their respects to Gov. Gen. Healy and to note the dignity and old world courtesy with which the former fire eating politician and erstwhile lawyer welcomed them. In addition to the international representatives Gov. Healy had around him a galaxy of men and women, the cream of his own country, types of humanity of which any country might be found.

Different from Pre-War Days.

Inevitably one was forced to contrast the function with others of a similar nature which in pre-war days were held in those famous grounds surrounding the viceregal lodge. In those days the host was an English nobleman, and the guests were English or pro-English. Few of them had any real sympathy with the country in whose capital they were being entertained. Irish people were not invited, and to the masses the functions meant nothing. Even the clothes that were worn, for the most part, came from London or Paris.

Another notable function was the garden party given by the head of the civic guard, Gen. O'Duffy, when President Cosgrave came to present three members of the new police force with medals for the greatest act of bravery performed during the last year.

Medals Donated by New York.

The medals are the gift of the head of the New York police force. The daring and gallant deeds performed by the three recipients were read out by the president, and the large audience applauded as he pinned the medals on the breasts of the three gallant officers. Gen. O'Duffy had around him for the occasion a great concourse of representative people, whose support throughout the country will lend strength and backing to the guards in their work of maintaining social order and banishing crime from the country.

These social festivities are but the forerunners of many others announced for the later months of the summer.

PEABODY COAL CO.'S INCOME TAX TOO HIGH, REFUND APPEAL SAYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Net income of the Peabody Coal company of Chicago amounted to more than $1,000,000 annually in 1921 and 1922, according to information disclosed in papers filed with the board of tax appeals today.

The company is contesting $98,000 out of an additional income tax assessment of $163,073.72 for 1921. It is contended that the commissioner of internal revenue should have allowed a deduction of $350,000 on account of loss sustained through a worthless debt owed the company by the Black Mountain corporation.

The next taxable income of the company in 1921 was $1,112,968.65 and in 1922, $1,097,687.60. The total tax assessed for 1921 was $217,681.17, of which $111,296.87 was the normal tax computed at ten per cent and $106,384.30 excess profits taxes. The company has heretofore paid $54,607.47, leaving a deficiency of $163,073.72.

The revised tax as assessed against the company for 1922, was $137,210.95, which represented the flat corporation tax at twelve and one-half per cent under the 1921 revenue act. The company was previously assessed a tax of $158,268.08 so that it is entitled to a refund for over assessment amounting to $21,057.13.

At the North American a real
Steak Dinner—65c
[A tender steak with French fried potatoes and tomato salad]

Why pay $1.00 to $1.50 elsewhere?

In most places you pay from $1.00 to $1.50 for a good steak. Yet here, at the North American, a steak (usually big enough for two people) with French fried potatoes and tomato salad, costs only 65 cents. And this is only one example of the big savings you make by dining here—any time from an early breakfast to a midnight lunch.

Always comfortably cool at 70°

The North American Restaurant is kept cool and comfortable, no matter what the weather, by one of the finest and most complete ventilating and cooling systems ever installed—a system that takes fresh air out of the sunshine then washes, cools and dries it and pours a complete change into the restaurant every three minutes.

Cadillac's genius for leadership was never so manifest as today; when, following on the heels of the most successful year in its history, when sales increased 87.5 per cent, Cadillac inaugurates the unprecedented plan of providing 500 color and upholstery combinations, and 50 body styles and types.

Thus to the unequaled performance of the new, 90-degree, 8-cylinder Cadillac is added unexampled luxury and distinction—with the widest possible latitude for individuality in the selection of body style, color and upholstery.

Simultaneously Cadillac has added new improvements and refinements—notably in an exclusive cushion spring design that is incomparably luxurious and easeful; in added niceties of trim and fitments; in the development of new lines with larger and more curving fenders; a new radiator shell design; new and larger lamps—refinements which, in combination with an unapproached range of body styles and color selections, place the new Cadillac on a commanding pinnacle of individualized luxury and distinction.

THIRD PARTY IN MINNESOTA IS DISINTEGRATING

Voters Drift to the Old Organizations.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—In Minnesota the hyphen has been knocked out of the Farmer-Labor combine and the third party is in the throes of disintegration. Magnus Johnson of the megaphonic voice is running for governor this time against Gov. Theodore Christianson, Republican, but is not making much headway among the farmers who elected him senator three years ago in the "wheat uprising" and turned him down for re-election in 1924—it looks like a romp for Christianson in November.

As the old war horses view it, Minnesota's radical splurge of a few years ago was due to a hell-raising complex somewhat similar to the one that impelled Iowa recently to give Brookhart a 75,000 plurality over the late Senator Cummins.

Vote Shows Futility.

Two years ago the Dakotas and Minnesota rolled up big votes for La Follette. While Coolidge carried them, the third party almost obliterated the Democrats. Next to Wisconsin, these three states were regarded by the La Follettites in the campaign as of exceeding ripeness with a set up hard to improve on. Ever since its defeat at the polls the third party has been evaporating until now its vote is regarded as a demonstration of its futility.

In the primaries June 21 the Republicans polled 422,652 votes, while the farmer laborites got only 155,226. Both parties had stiff fights, so the third party recession was not due to lack of a contest.

On the Republican side Gov. Christianson carried every county over George E. Leach, Mayor of Minneapolis and had a plurality of 162,000. This was the largest plurality ever cast in Minnesota for any candidate for governor either in a primary or a general election.

Drift to Old Parties.

On the Farm-Labor side Magnus Johnson got 82,000 as against 70,000 for Tom Davis. It was a significant showing of weakness, for two years ago, although Coolidge got 420,000 votes or 51 per cent of the total, La Follette polled 339,000, or 41 per cent of all.

The drift is strongly back into the old parties. The Democrats, who were almost wiped off the map two years ago when Davis polled only 56,000 votes, or less than 7 per cent of the total, have put up Alfred Jacques of Duluth for governor, and have hopes of polling enough votes to make the party look less like a bargain counter remnant.

Radicals Scattering.

At the same time the Republicans, who seem to have the world again by the tail in the state, are debating whether segregation, to a limited degree, is not such a bad idea in politics.

So long as the radicals and extremists from the coral shell pinks to the ox-blood reds, congregate in a party of their own, the G. O. P. leaders have a definite objective for their wallops. Now the radicals are scattering into the old parties and the next year or two may see them adopting in politics the old I. W. W. policy in labor, that of boring from within.

Evaporation has been fast in South Dakota, where Tim Ayres, Farmer-Labor, running against Gov. Carl Gunderson, is not conceded a Chinaman's chance in a state where La Follette got 37 per cent of the total vote two years ago as against 50 per cent for Coolidge and only 13 per cent for Davis.

North Daktota's Realignment.

In North Dakota the fadeout gives politicians mirth. In the primaries this year the Farm Laborites did not get enough votes to land on the ballot a party. It requires only three hundred votes, but William Lemke for senator polled only 295, although back in the old rip-snorting league days he was Arthur Townley's right-hand bower and was guiding angel of the Bismarck caucauses that ran the government.

North Dakota is in an interesting stage. The extreme left and right wings are being beveled off. The politicians are fond of saying the leaguers and the regulars are being assimilated, but they don't say which side is doing most of the assimilating. The leaguers have a trifle the advantage, but the Republican party is taking on new shape with a merging of the less radical leaguers and the more liberal Republicans.

HUSBAND OF YANK HEIRESS IS HELD IN ENGLISH MURDER

LONDON, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Alphonso Francis Austin Smith, who, in 1912, married Ruth Bernadette Wynne, daughter of Robert J. Wynne, postmaster general in the cabinet of President Roosevelt, is being held in Maidstone jail in connection with the mysterious murder of John Thomas Derham, Mr. Smith's boyhood friend at Eton college. Mr. Smith was charged yesterday at Canterbury with the murder with a revolver. The police report that when Mr. Smith was arrested his head was heavily bandaged, there was a big bruise under his eye, and that he asked: "How is he? Where is the seducer?"

Both Mr. Smith and Mr. Derham are well known—Mr. Derham as the grandson of Brig. Gen. Tyler, and Mr. Smith as a man who once was immensely wealthy, having inherited two fortunes from his grandfathers, both of whom were famous Canadian millionaires. Mr. Smith formerly was an officer in the Dragoon guards. He is understood to have been separated from his wife since 1918.

The inquest will be held tomorrow.

THREATEN GIRL; ROB OFFICES.

Three armed men entered the offices of the Sanitary Construction company, 355 Union Park court yesterday, and after threatening Miss Lillian Schubert, 25 years old, 2519 Cullom avenue, took $85 and checks amounting to several hundred dollars. Miss Schubert notified L. J. Kernan, 4863 Waubansia avenue, president of the firm.

Russia, Germany Exchange Convicts to Promote Amity

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—Russo-German friendship further has been cemented by reciprocal pardons. Germany decided to release and expel the Russian communist agitator, M. Sokolewski, who, a year ago, was sentenced to death and then to the penitentiary for life. Russia released fourteen Germans imprisoned in Russia, includingg three students who were tried for espionage. They were sentenced to death, but received reprieves.

Persian Highways Again Beset by Robber Bands

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TEHERAN, Persia, Aug. 14.—Bandits and highwaymen again are infesting Persia's public roads, attacking mail vans and tourists. The situation is regarded as proof that Riza Khan is more feared as war minister than was the shah. Persia has not yet nominated an ambassador to Moscow and has delayed the rapprochement mission to Moscow.

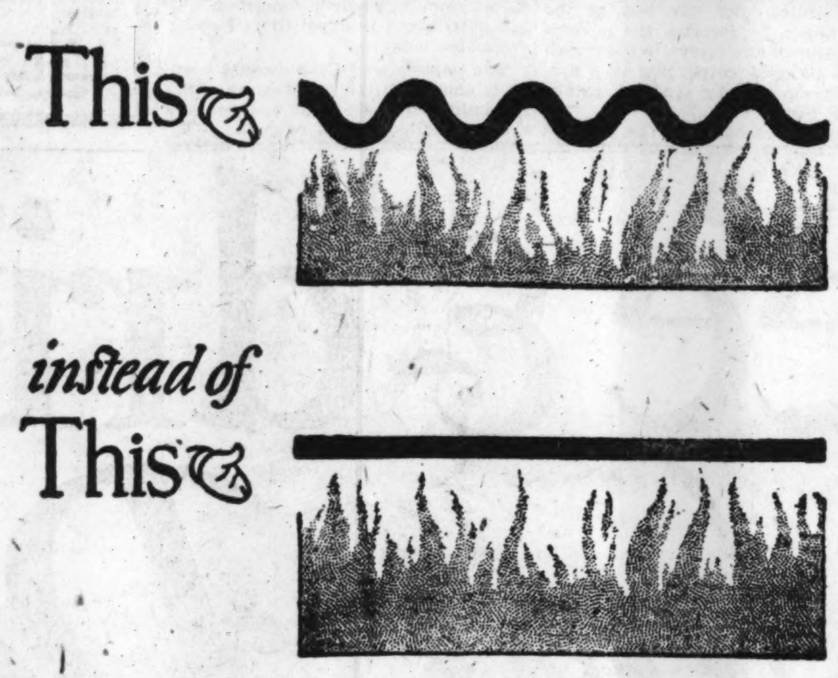
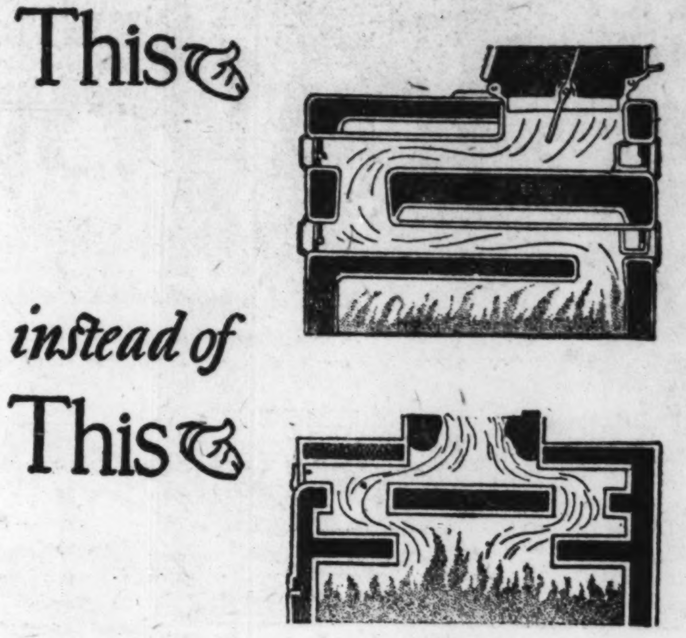
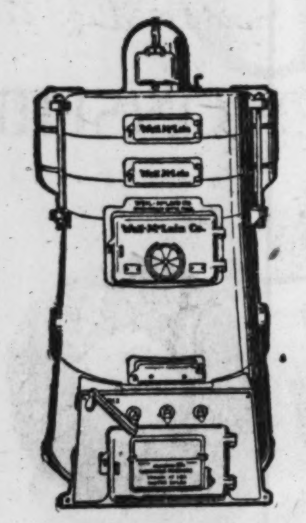
It is a tournament that stands alone in honesty, intensity of purpose and thrills. There are no paid performers and each event is a contest under the most stringent rules ever devised for a sport card. It presents to you all the top hands of the great horse ranges, fighting every minute for the honors of their profession. It presents over 400 head of real Western stock, including the tops of the three greatest strings of bucking horses in the world, vicious crossbred Brahma-Mexican steers, and two carloads of fleet Indian ponies. It presents a band of 50 Flathead Indians in full regalia, demonstrating their feats of horsemanship. Your Two Biggest Reasons for selecting this Boiler







Round Type Boiler

For steam, vapor, vacuum and hot water heating; made in sizes for bungalows, residences and small apartments

Note particularly that these boilers have fuel saving corrugations in every section

Weil-McLain Boilers give you more heating surface

Some people think all heating boilers are alike. But why does one boiler require less fuel than another of the same apparent size? Why are Weil-McLain boilers noted for fuel economy and extraordinary efficiency? Two reasons, mainly. Heating surfaces that are corrugated instead of straight. Long back-and-forth fire travel. Learn why these two great boiler improvements have become famous.

Heating Surface Increased

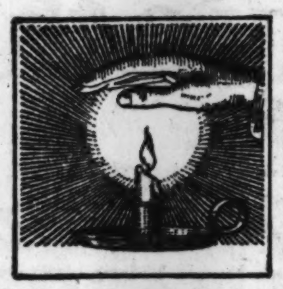
Less than five years ago Weil-McLain Boilers brought to the public a new conception of heating efficiency and economy. Home owners quickly grasped the fact that here was something far in advance of previous practice. They asked us the reasons for these revolutionary results. And here is what they learned.

By means of deep corrugations the heating surfaces in Weil-McLain Boilers have been tremendously increased. This has added greatly to the capacity and efficiency of the boilers without otherwise adding to their size or adding a single penny to their price.

You can easily figure it out for yourself. Picture these corrugations 〰〰 straightened out. They will make a surface as long as this ————————. By means of these corrugations Weil-McLain put 40 per cent more heating surface into the same space.

This added heating surface in every section in Weil-McLain Boilers means proportionately greater heating efficiency—more heat per ton of coal or coke or per gallon of oil—lower fuel bills for you—a truly remarkable boiler value.

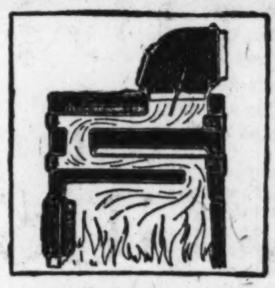
Fuel-Saving Corrugations in Every Section



The surface directly above the fire is most efficient. To prove this, first hold your hand at the side of a flame—then directly over it. You will find the hottest point directly over the flame.

The candle test (at left) demonstrates in a simple way that heating surface directly above the fire is the most valuable. The Weil-McLain "double-surface" crown sheet section directly above the fire has deep, fuel-saving corrugations to greatly increase the valuable heating surface at this most important point. All other sections have Weil-McLain corrugations to further increase efficiency and save fuel.

Back-and-forth Fire Travel



Long "back-and-forth" fire travel

But this is not all. Perhaps of equal importance is the famous Weil-McLain principle of long "back-and-forth" fire travel. In this modern boiler there are no short cuts to the chimney. The hot gases are baffled backward and forward through the corrugated heating surfaces, until the maximum number of heat units are absorbed and delivered to your radiators.

Scientific Combustion

And so it is throughout the entire boiler. Advanced designing has made possible Scientific Combustion which assures more complete burning of the fuel and more heat in the burning gases.

Weil-McLain Boilers burn any of the solid fuels (hard coal, soft coal or coke) and because of the forethought in their modern design they are unexcelled for oil burning.

Write for Free Catalog

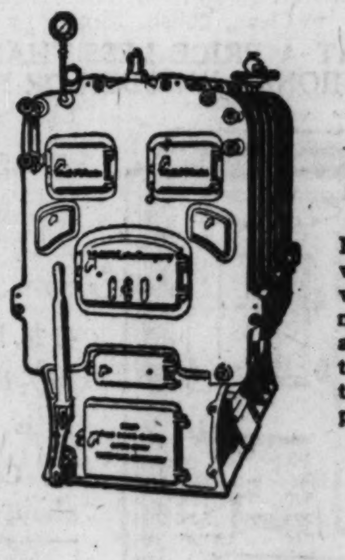
Unexcelled for Oil Burning

The quick, intense heat produced by modern oil burners demands in a boiler a great amount of concentrated heat-absorbing surface, large water content and a long fire travel. You get all this in Weil-McLain Boilers through corrugated heating surfaces, large water spaces and long back-and-forth fire travel.



Square Type Boiler

THE CRADLE, BABY REFUGE, ISSUES PLEA FOR FUNDS

Model Hospital Is Dream of Philanthropists.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Somewhere in the upbuilding of the model hospital for infants at 2039 Ridge avenue, Evanston, known as The Cradle, whose work begins with a baby's needs and ends only with a care for that baby's future health and happiness, the formula for approximately 100 per cent efficient philanthropy appears to be in sight.

Punctuated with lusty howls from small throats, energetic waving of countless small arms and legs, and an occasional mischievous smile, the work of the Cradle staff has gone quietly on from day to day until the need of larger quarters and additional equipment has forced all other considerations into the background, and "What to do?" is the topic on all tongues in Cradle land.

Model in Its Field.

This babies' hospital was unique at its inception three years ago. The few similar institutions now in operation in other cities are copies of the original, which still is regarded as the model of its particular kind.

Within those three years 362 infants have been placed in its care, to be tended and at last passed on to the carefully selected home where the love and the opportunities of a natural child await it, and no stigma of illegitimacy may follow.

Distinguishing the Cradle baby from the ordinary adopted child, there is the minute and scientific care given these scraps of humanity by physicians, experts in their chosen lines, whose services are contributed; the scrupulous and constant nursing they receive from the moment they arrive at the hospital, and finally, the edict of the chief of staff giving each child a clean bill of health before adoption, which assures the foster parents they are receiving a normal child.

Now Occupies Two Homes.

Established at first in an eight room house, a gift to the organization, the Cradle, which began caring for eight babies received from various Chicago hospitals, now occupies two homes with a fireproof connecting runway, and has just been given the corner property adjoining on Ridge avenue by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith of Winnetka as a memorial to their son.

It is the dream of the officers, including Mrs. William B. Walrath, its founder and managing director; Frank S. Cunningham, president; Sewell L. Avery, vice president; Mrs. M. F. Gallagher, secretary, and Mrs. John C. Slade, treasurer, to acquire enough funds somewhere, somehow, to erect a new hospital to care efficiently for all babies received and to permit clinical work by physicians and medical students.

The board of directors includes some well known citizens of the north shore district, notably Vice President and Mrs. Dawes, Dr. Gladys Dick, Mrs. Daniel H Burnham Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Rollin W. Keyes, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Scott, and Mrs. W. C. Danforth.

Feeds Hungry, Pretty Girl and Loses His Clothing

Hubert Smith, a railroad fireman, living at 2300 West Roosevelt road, took a vow in Judge Alfar M. Eberhardt's court yesterday never to flirt again. Smith said he met Miss Jean Cowan, 19 years old, 1252 North Clark street, two days ago. She was pretty and she told him she was hungry and homeless. "I took her to my home and cooked her potatoes and pork chops. I left for work and when I returned, my clothing and a suitcase, worth $150, were gone. Miss Cowan, found by police, denied the charge

BUSCH ORDERS TAXICAB BONDING LAW ENFORCED

Climaxing a bitter court fight of nearly two years, Corporation Counsel Busch yesterday notified Chief of Police Collins to proceed with the enforcement of an ordinance requiring a $5,000 bond on each taxicab operated on the streets of Chicago.

The purpose of the ordinance is to protect the claims of the public against taxicab concerns by insuring their financial stability. Five companies have failed in the last year, notably the Premier company, invalidating claims totaling thousands of dollars.

The matter was taken to the State Supreme court by the Checker Cab company and an independent firm and the law upheld in both cases. The latter firm has taken an appeal to the United States Supreme court and secured a temporary restraining injunction, but according to Mr. Busch it does not apply to other companies.

SHOWDOWN NEAR IN SPANISH ARMY ROW WITH PRIMO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Aug. 14.—A council of the ministers, under the presidency of King Alfonso, who is coming especially from Santander, has been called for next Monday when, according to those best informed, there should be interesting developments in the tussle between the government and army dissidents.

Every day it is becoming more and more evident that the government's abolition of the "closed scale" of the army is proving most unpopular. Before long, it is believed, there will have to be a definite concession either on the part of the government or dissatisfied factions of the army.

The president of the council of ministers maintains that there exists an understanding between the artillery, engineers' corps, and government that the former will adjust themselves to the new system. But according to those following the situation closely, the artillerymen deny that they ever made such an agreement, or that any one was empowered to make it in their name.

Send Note to Government.

A note to this effect has been presented to the government in the name of the whole artillery corps by their supreme chief, Gen. Canton. The former head, Gen. Cosrea, preferred to resign and withdraw from active service before presenting such a protest, but the present head is much more closely united with the rest of the corps, which, he informs the government, requests the return to the closed scale in all army corps, that is, a system of promotion by seniority rather than by merit.

Gen. Primo de Rivera, the Spanish dictator, definitely has refused to do this. He is determined to stick to his ground now that he has taken the bold step of attacking the power of the army leaders.

The artillerymen are beginning to resign from their positions and all those who have received promotions are withdrawing from the service rather than accept. This attitude threatens to embarrass the government as much as the complaints, since it will greatly diminish the efficiency of the army if the government nominees themselves resign from their new posts.

Threatened by Comrades.

Two or three of the promoted engineers who have accepted are making the question still more complicated by causing a division of opinion in the army. Those who have accepted the promotions are finding themselves insulted roundly by their comrades, who are determined to expel them forcibly from the army.

The importance of the coming council is shown by the fact that the king is coming down from his summer palace especially for the council.

Every Pullman Dining Car

in this country, without a single exception, has a Bohn Syphon Refrigerator in its kitchen, the smallest and hottest kitchen in the world. The plain reason is that no other refrigerator will stand this severe test.

The California Fruit Crop

shipped from Southern California in the hot months of June to September, crossing the hot alkali deserts of the Southwest, must reach the markets in perfect condition or it cannot be sold. Bohn Syphon Refrigerator cars carry practically the entire crop! Surely it is not hard to guess the reason!

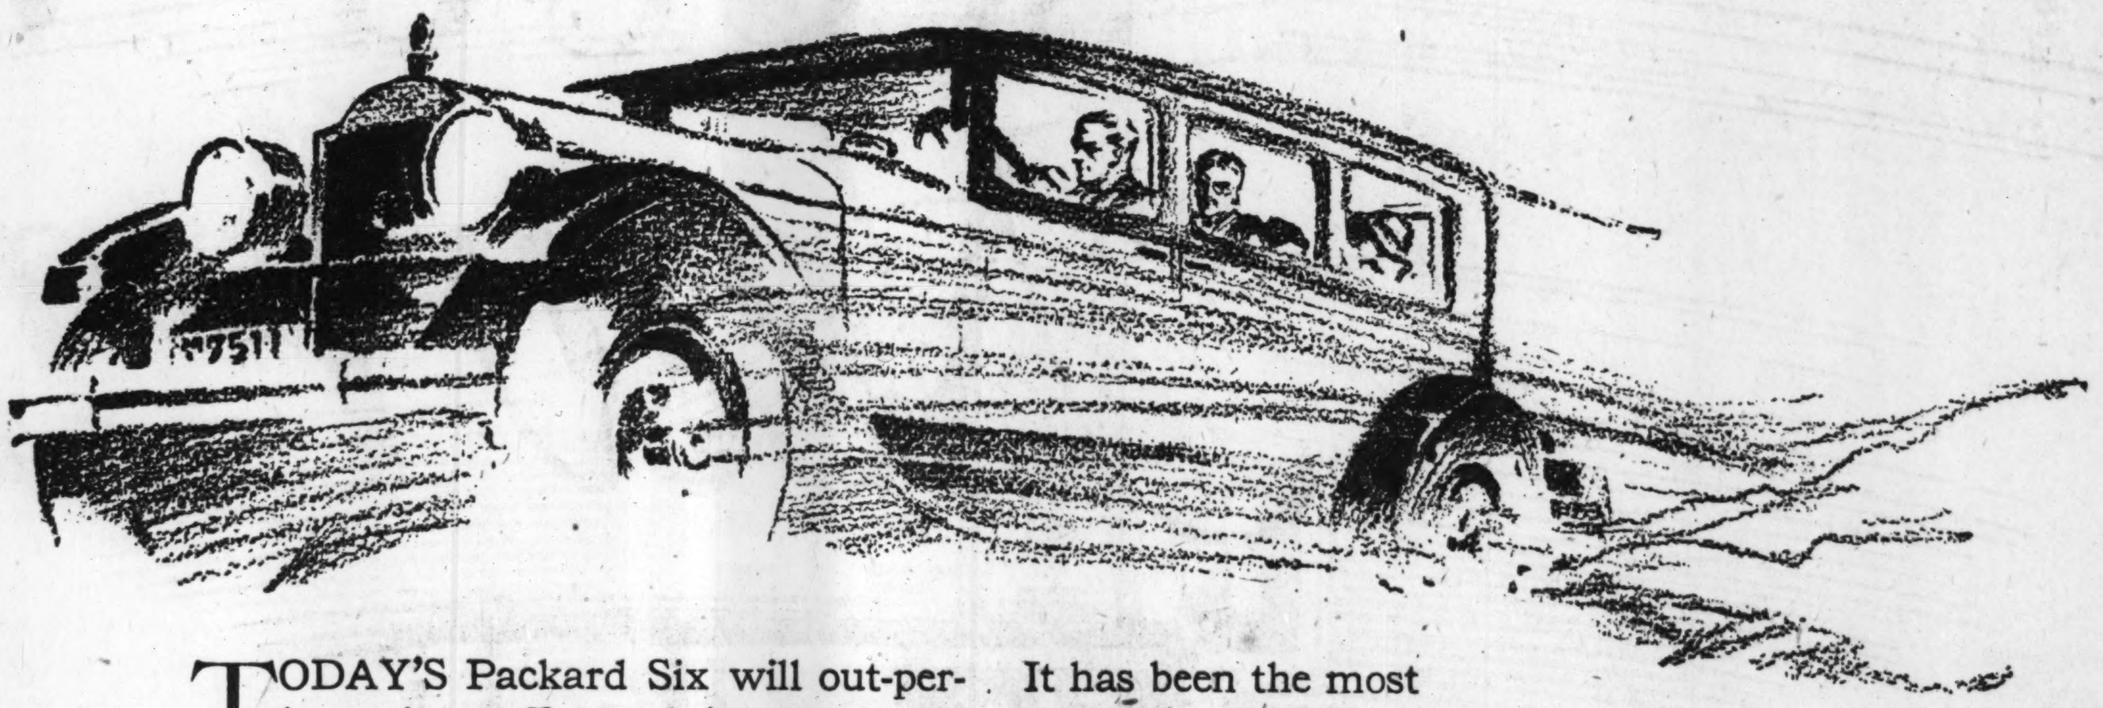
INTRODUCING

The Improved Packard Six



TODAY'S Packard Six will out-perform, in traffic and in speed, any Packard car ever built with one exception.

The exception is today's Packard Eight —The Boss of the Road.

The Packard Six has long excelled in beauty, in comfort and in distinction. In simplicity and in economy. Greater than ever in all of these, it now also excels in performance.

Those who drive the improved Packard Six will let others pass as a matter of courtesy, never of necessity.

In car beauty contest or contest on the open road it will more than hold its own against any Six, or any Eight, excepting cars of racing type.

Most useful and most appreciated of all, however, will be the car's agility and ease of control in crowded traffic.

For more than six years the Packard Six has been an inspiration to engineers.

It has been the most copied car in the world, mechanically and in body lines.

Now the industry has something new to inspire it—the most brilliant performance of any Six, or any Eight, light or heavy.

If you would know the finest in motor cars permit us to demonstrate the improved Packard Six.

We give you the word of one of the oldest and most conservative companies that you will experience the greatest thrill of your motoring life.

Despite the fact that the glory of all previous Packards has been surpassed, Packard Six prices have not been increased.

You are cordially invited to ride in and drive the improved Packard Six whether you intend to buy a new car or not.

We shall be more than repaid in seeing you get your thrill and in the story you will tell your friends.

Our next advertisement will tell of the improved Packard Eight—

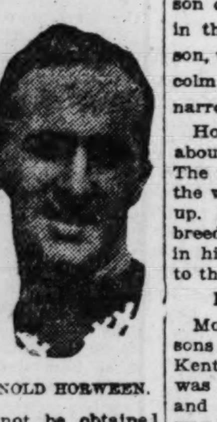
TIGERS POUNCE ON SOX FOR 5 TO 2 WIN

WOLVERINES TO PLAY HARVARD ELEVEN IN 1927

Split in "Big Three" Forecast.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Rumors that the big three agreement involving Princeton, Yale, and Harvard was in danger of abrogation spread today after the unofficial announcement that University of Michigan was to appear on Harvard's football schedule in 1927 and 1928 on the date now assigned to Princeton.



ARNOLD HORWEEN.

Confirmation of the report, which was published in the Boston newspapers, could not be obtained from Harvard athletic officials, but it was indicated from many sources that the two year agreement with Michigan had been reached. William J. Bingham, Harvard athletic director, was absent on a yachting cruise.

At Michigan, Nov. 5, 1927.

It was known that Bingham discussed football matters recently with President Clarence C. Little of Michigan and that a two year agreement was proposed but it was understood that definite decision on the matter had been postponed until the fall. Today's announcement said the 1927 game would be played on Nov. 5 at Ann Arbor as the formal dedicatory contest for the University of Michigan's new stadium, and that the return game would be played at Cambridge in 1928.

The first Saturday in November is the date which Princeton has had on the Harvard football calendar since the big three gridiron competition was inaugurated in 1911. It was this fact which gave rise to the report that football relations between the Tiger and the Crimson were about to be severed.

Might Drop Dartmouth.

A report that Dartmouth might be dropped from the Harvard schedule to make way for the western university also was circulated. President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth told the Associated Press today that he had heard nothing of such a possibility.

Harvard and Michigan teams first met on the gridiron in 1881, the Crimson winning the contest at Cambridge by a touchdown. In 1895 Michigan came east again and Harvard again prevailed, 4 to 0. In 1914, the last game was played between the two institutions, Harvard winning once more, 7 to 0.

Football relations between Harvard and Princeton, interrupted in 1896, were renewed in 1911 and have continued since that year, with the exception of the war period. Since that time the big three games have been the objective contests of Harvard, Yale, and Princeton. Agreements have been arrived at by the athletic heads of the three colleges governing training periods, eligibility of players and other matters affecting the game.

Horween Said to Have Helped.

Persons close to Harvard athletics said tonight that the proposal for a Crimson team to play in the west resulted from pressure brought by Harvard alumni resident in the west, after Dartmouth's successful invasion of Chicago last season.

It was also said that Harvard's new head coach, Arnold Horween, himself a westerner, had thrown the weight of his influence in favor of the plan. Under the rules governing schedule making at Harvard, a Crimson team may play only one game each season away from Cambridge.

Harvard Chief Noncommittal.

Nantucket, Mass., Aug. 14.—(AP)—William J. Bingham, Harvard athletic director, tonight refused to confirm or deny reports published in Boston today to the effect that University of Michigan would displace Princeton on Harvard's football schedule next season.

"All I know about our 1927 football schedule is that we will play Yale," Mr. Bingham said. "I will do nothing about drawing up the 1927 program until I have talked with Head Coach Horween.

"If any arrangements such as are reported had been made, I could not make any announcement until the athletic committee had approved them."

Nothing to Say—Princeton.

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the board of athletics control at Princeton university, today refused to comment on the report from Boston that Harvard contemplated dropping either Princeton or Dartmouth from their 1927 football schedule. Other members of the board could not be reached.

Donany Injured in Roby Speed Trials

Raymond Donany, racing driver, was taken to the South Chicago hospital with a broken hip and possible internal injuries last night after his automobile had turned turtle, pinning him underneath at the track at Roby, Ind., where races are to be held today. Donany was making a trial run at terrific speed when the accident occurred.

SUPREMUS WINS CRETE HANDICAP BEFORE 15,000

Malcolm B. Jr. Beaten by Nose in Stretch Duel

BY FRENCH LANE.

Supremus, Hal Price Headley's four year old son of Ultimus, won the first running of the Crete handicap at Lincoln Fields yesterday and the band played "My Old Kentucky Home" as he dropped his head in front of Malcolm B Jr., New York colt, at the finish line.

These two leaders fought for every inch of ground all down the stretch, Jockeys J. Roberts and Goldie Johnson drove them like the richest purse in the world was at stake, but Johnson, whipping, kicking and urging Malcolm B Jr., lost the decision by the narrowest of margins.

Horse people could talk all day about this thoroughbred Supremus. The finest thoroughbred blood lines in the world are to be found in his makeup. And because of his excellent breeding he was taken out of training in his three year old year and retired to the stud.

Brought Back Into Training.

More than a dozen yearlings, his sons and daughters, are to be found in Kentucky, but a few weeks ago he was put back into training again, and the Crete stakes at six furlongs was his first serious effort. He won it almost like a champion, plowing his way over the muddy, holding, difficult course in 1:15, but had spent so much energy in the early going, he had all he could do to hold Malcolml B. Jr. safe in the final drive.

A crowd of more than 15,000, the largest that has visited new Lincoln Fields, watched Supremus race to his victory and most of those who visited the certificate mutuel speculating pavilion profited when he got his narrow verdict, for the Headley entry, with Helen's Babe coupled with Supremus, had been backed into favoritism.

Helen's Babe Fancied Most.

It was Helen's Babe which was most fancied by the players, for in other starts this year she had found heavy going, the kind which prevailed at Washington Park, to her liking. But Headley was well aware of the running qualities of Supremus, and preferred to stake his chances of victory on him. His judgment was good and after Reputation, carrying top weight of 117 pounds, led all the way to the stretch with Dark Phantom and Malcolm B. Jr. nearest to him, Jockey Roberts moved up with Supremus. Then came the struggle with Malcolm B. Jr., in which Supremus finally conquered by dropping his head down in front at the finish.

Gay Throng Watches Races.

Much has been written about Chicago racing crowds in recent years, while one feeble attempt after another to revive the sport of kings here were made. But the crowd at Lincoln Fields yesterday, was of the metropolitan type, as gay and as colorful as the throngs at Belmont Park on a big day, as carefree and as representative a gathering at Churchill Downs during Derby week. The racegoers made merry throughout the afternoon, packed and jammed their way into the big stands, elbowed their way about the lawns, and in the clubhouse, one of the most fashionable gatherings in Chicago racing history assembled.

Rain threatened throughout the morning, but so many people sought the turf entertainment it required seven special C. & E. I. trains to carry the crowds to the course. Thousands of others wended their way down the Dixie highway by motors.

Fabian Beats Barbara.

When Fabian, Jimmy McGill's aged handicap star, came from last place to the front in the Kenwood stakes and finally beat Barbara by four lengths, the whole crowd was up cheering. Away to a bad start, running far back for the first half of the sever furlong journey, it looked like Fabian's task was a hopeless one. But Jockey R. Jones moved the son of Ballott up with almost unbelievable speed on the turn into the stretch, fairly ran over his field an eighth out and came on to win as he pleased.

And again in the sixth race a real thriller was staged as the despised outsider Arabian, at odds of 22 to 1, got a narrow verdict over Paula Shay and George De Mar. Paula Shay was probably best, but finished limping badly, and this probably accounted for her defeat. But Jockey Froggatte and Arabian staged a game battle throughout the stretch which brought victory.

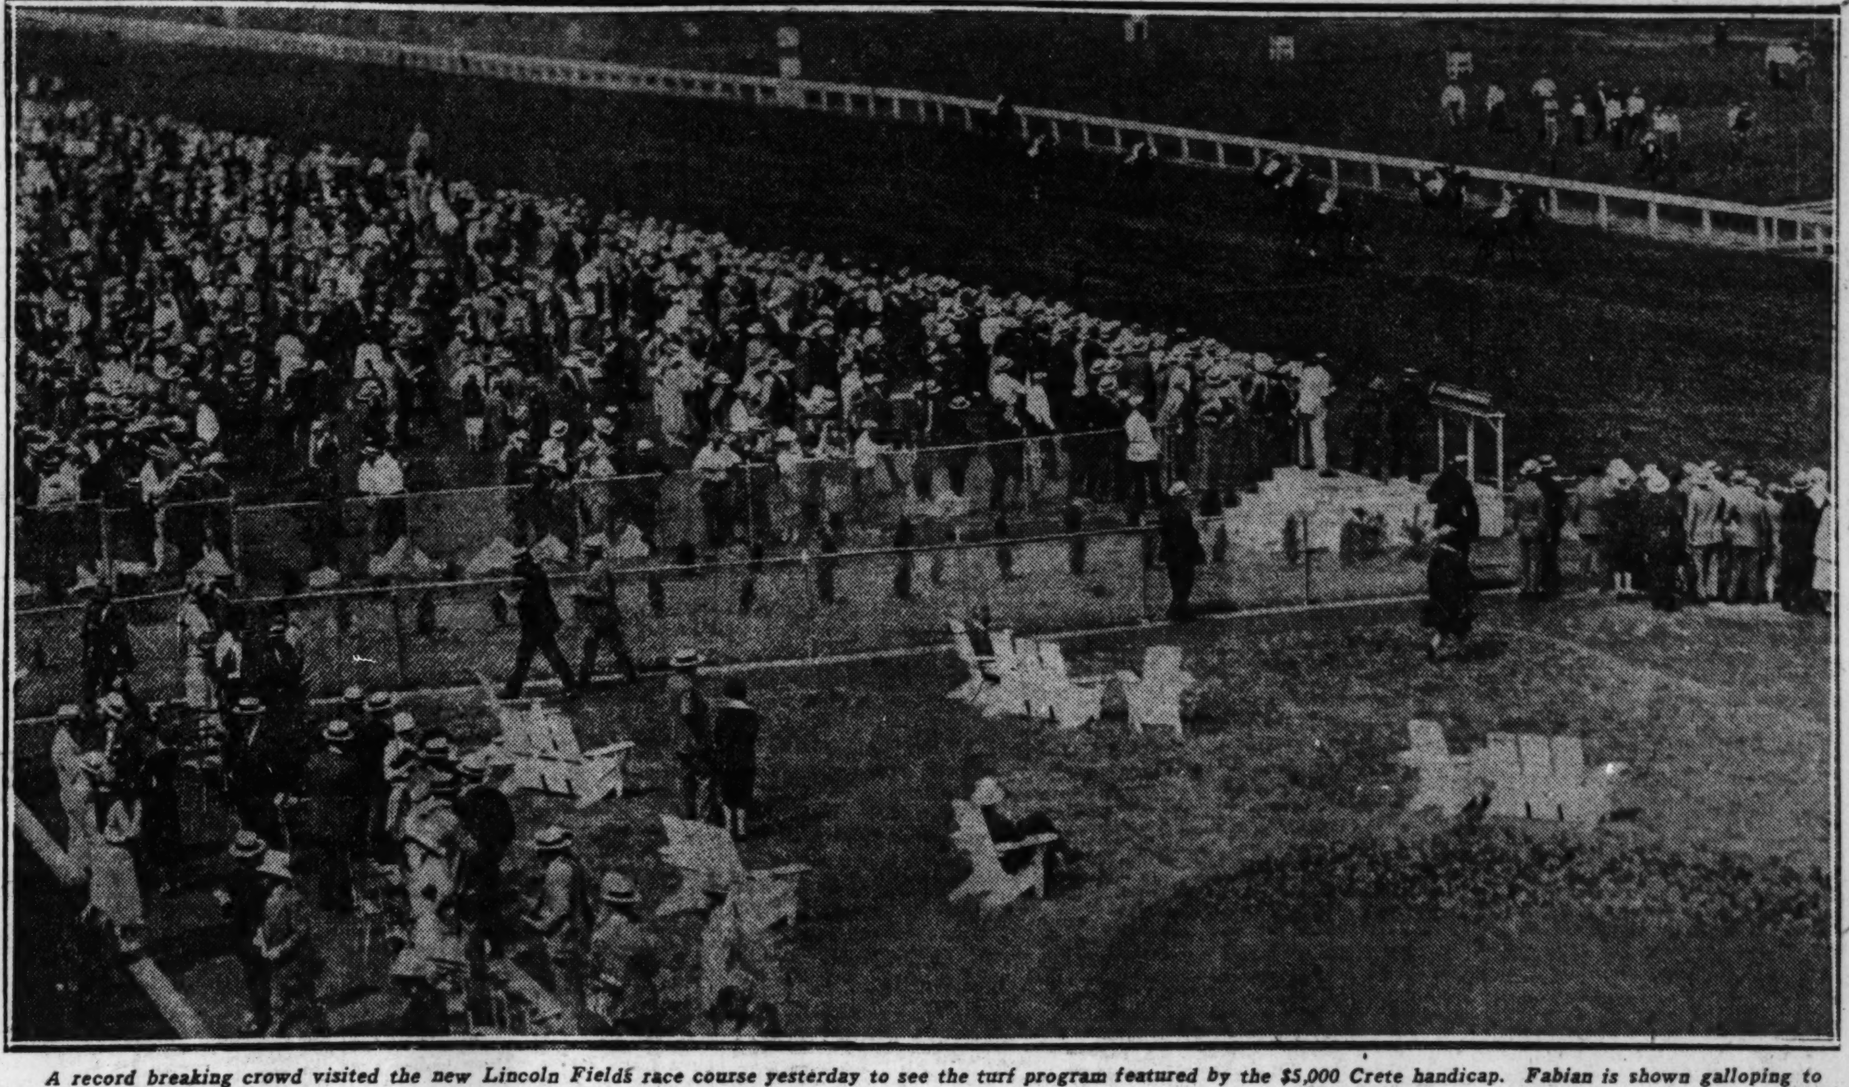
MISS BARRETT TRIES CHANNEL AGAIN TODAY

DOVER, England, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Clarabelle Barrett of New Rochelle, N. Y., is making plans to start on her second attempt to swim the English channel from here to the French coast early tomorrow morning. She expects to take the water at about 6 a. m.

She will enter the water from the beach west of the Admiralty pier, Dover. It is generally admitted that to swim from the English to the French coast is far more difficult than to swim in the opposite direction.

Miss Barrett is confident of success, inasmuch as she more than covered the channel mileage in her first attempt Aug. 3. At that time, she pointed out, she was only defeated by a blanket of fog which obliterated the pilot boat and made further progress impossible when only two miles from the goal.

15,000 SEE FABIAN GALLOP TO EASY VICTORY



A record breaking crowd visited the new Lincoln Fields race course yesterday to see the turf program featured by the $5,000 Crete handicap. Fabian is shown galloping to an easy victory by four lengths in the fourth race, outdistancing Barbara. Pirate Gold is finishing for show money, while trailing, in order, are Bolton, Devon, and Gaberdine. Fabian's victory paid his backers $8.50 for a $2 ticket.

It's the Same Old Story as Big and Little Bills Clash

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 14.—(AP)—The rivalry that has given American tennis history some of its most sensational chapters, started its eighth season today with a triumph for "Big Bill" Tilden over "Little Bill" Johnston.

Tilden gave a convincing demonstration of his mastery, beating back his rival in decisive fashion after the Californian had exhibited only a brief flash of power. The scores were 6—3, 4—6, 6—1, 6—1.

The national champion's victory was the high spot of the two-day struggle for international team supremacy in which the east overwhelmed the west, taking all of the seven matches that brought most of the top ranking stars into action.

Richards, Williams Win.

The crowning touch to the eastern sweep was applied by the eastern double combination of Vincent Richards and R. Norris Williams, national champions, who defeated Johnston and Edward G. Chandler of California, 6—3, 6—4.

Straight set victories were scored by eastern representatives in two other singles matches today. Francis T. Hunter defeated Phil Neer, 6—4, 6—3, while Manuel Alonso, emerged the winner over Cranston Holman, Stanford, 6—3, 8—6.

Little Bill Wilts in Heat.

Tilden and Johnston crossed racquets today for the first time since their stirring five set struggle in the finals of the national singles last September but their match had few of the trobbing moments of that epic struggle. Johnston held his own for the first two sets as they match drive for drive in a base line duel, but the champion made short work of his rival in the last two sets, bringing the full battery of his versatile assortment of shots into play as "Little Bill," wilting in the humid atmosphere, saw the punch and accuracy vanish from his strokes.

Tilden, although he was erratic, particularly on service, always held command. He had Johnston on the run with his sharply angled drives to the corners, whipped across his backhand for repeated placements and mixed his attacking strokes craftily. Johnston's service went to pieces towards the end. In the last two sets "Little Bill" made his service good only once in six times.

RICHARDS BEATS CHAPIN

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 14.—(AP)—With a sweeping triumph at 6—2, 6—1, over Alfred H. Chapin Jr. of Springfield, Mass., Vincent Richards today paved the way for his fourth battle of the year against William T. Tilden in the final round of the southern New York state title tournament.

The rivals of six years' standing will renew their feud tomorrow afternoon on the turf courts of the Westchester-Biltmore club, three sets out of five to prevail. The outcome of their struggle not only will decide the title at stake, but will have an important bearing on selection of the singles players for America's defending Davis cup team, since Tilden already has gone down to defeat three times before his youthful foe from Yonkers, N. Y.

Molla Plays Mary.

Prior to the men's singles final Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, who upset Helen Wills yesterday in a hard fought three set match, will meet Miss Mary K. Browne in the final round of the New York state women's championship. The contest was postponed today by a heavy shower.

Richards required only thirty-two minutes to dispose of his semi-final match against Chapin today. Taking advantage of heavy court to use his low skidding chop, the ranking No. 3 singles player skimmed the lines with clever placements and handled Chapin's returns with unerring skill at the net.

Richards Sets Fast Pace.

Twice he broke through the New England player's service in the first set, piling up 31 points to 21 for Chapin. In the second set he traveled at an even faster clip, making three breaks through service and amassing 29 points to 14 for his opponent.

Only four games in the entire match went to deuce, while Chapin was able to save but three of his eight service games, Richards closing the contest with a break in the final game at love.

Mars Captures Travers Stake; Crusader 4th

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Electrifying a record racing throng of more than 25,000 persons by his brilliant closing charge, Walter M. Jefford's Mars, diminutive son of Man o' War and Christmas Star, this afternoon captured the fifty-seventh running of the historic Travers stakes for 3 year olds at the Saratoga track, defeating William R. Coe's Pompey, two year old champion of last year; Walter J. Salmon's Display, the Preakness winner; the Glen Riddle farm's Crusader, acknowledged 3 year old champion, and a number of lesser lights. Under 123 pounds and with Frankie Coltiletti in the saddle Mars ran the mile and a quarter in 2:04 3-5 over a fast track and earned $15,850 through his victory in the oldest classic of the American turf.

The Travers was the feature of the most brilliant card of the meeting, which had as its secondary feature the thirty-fifth running of the Spinaway stakes for 2 year old fillies, which was a notable victory for H. P. Whitney's Bonnie Pennant in a field of eleven of the best misses in training. Under 112 pounds, the daughter of Pennant and Bonnie Broom ran the six furlongs in 1:14 3-4, earning $9,350 by her victory. The Whitney entry was the 11 to 5 favorite.

Rosa Grosse Shatters Own 100 Yard Record

Toronto, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Competing in the first women's track and field meet ever held for Canadian championships, Rosa Grosse, outstanding girl athlete of Toronto, broke her own world's record of 11 2-5 seconds for 100 yards when she covered the distance in 11 1-10. Myrtle Cook, Toronto, was second and Fanny Rosenfeld, Toronto, third.

HELEN, UNAFRAID, BUT ILL, OUT OF TENNIS TOURNEY

Doctor's Report Confirms Parent's Belief.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Because she is "below par physically" and not through any "fear of taking a beating," Miss Helen Wills of Berkeley, Cal., national woman's tennis champion for the last three years, will not defend her title in the tournament here next week.

Announcing her decision regretfully, through Jones W. Mersereau, president of the United States Lawn Tennis association, Miss Wills said she had been advised by her physician that to participate in further tournament tennis this year not only would be too great a tax upon her strength, but might jeopardize her entire competitive future.

Official Agrees with Father.

Mersereau joined with Miss Wills' father in counseling her against further competition after receiving the following letter from Dr. Robert K. Kennedy:

"I have examined Miss Helen Wills today. She is below par physically and in no condition to play through a tournament for at least three months."

Miss Wills returned to the court only about three weeks ago after being out of the game for two months as a result of an operation for appendicitis in Paris. Engaging in invitation and preliminary tournaments, she seemed on the way to success in her attempted comeback until she was decisively defeated by Miss Elizabeth Ryan in the finals of the Seabright, N. J., tournament Aug. 6. She met her second defeat yesterday, losing to Mrs. Molla Mallory in three sets at Rye, N. Y.

Helen "Awfully Sorry."

Through Mersereau, Miss Wills expressed keen regret at her inability to play next week. She leaves the courts without having the chance to gain any of her major objectives this season. Stricken in France after losing her first tilt with Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, the American girl was prevented from a second meeting with the French champion. She also was kept out of the Wimbledon championships and the Wightman cup matches.

Her most likely successor as American champion is Miss Elizabeth Ryan, the veteran Californian, who returned from England last year to take the second national ranking position. Miss Ryan defeated Miss Wills last year as well as this season at Seabright.

Luke Sewell Gets License, Then Cold Feet, on 13th

Akron, O., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Luke Sewell, first string catcher for the Cleveland Indians, threw superstitions to the winds yesterday and obtained a marriage license to wed Miss Edna Mae Ridge of Akron. Having obtained the document, he became superstitious again and postponed the wedding set for yesterday until tonight.

Cubs Drive Old Alex Off Slab and Nose Out Cardinals, 3-2

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 14.—This was intended to be a day in which Old Pete Alexander would oil up his venerable arm and heave consternation into the ranks of Joe McCarthy's touring Cubs.

GROVER ALEXANDER.

Old Pete oiled up all right and for a limited period had a gay old time, but eventually the Chicagoans broke forth with a party of their own, drove their former mate to cover, and trimmed the wings of the high flying Cardinals in the first act of a three game series.

It ended with the Cubs in front by 3 to 2 after nine considerably snappy innings that were put on before some 17,000 citizens who were overheated internally by pennant hopes and heimgemacht and superheated externally by the prevailing humidity.

Breezes Along for Five Innings.

Alex enjoyed something resembling a Roman holiday for five innings. Only one blow was notched against him during that time and there were marked indications of joy on the Cards' bench. Even Old Pete was in high spirits and once thumbed his nose at Hack Wilson, who had hurled some snippy remark to the veteran. Alex also chewed an unknown brand of gum steadily, which probably was intended to convey the impression that he did not feel it necessary to conserve all his energy for pitching purposes.

In order to discourage the pennant ambitions of the Cards the Cubs had to get some very choice pitching, and they got it from Sheriff Blake. He had a great curve and some speed that he knew how to handle. He was slightly shaky in the early innings, when the Cards scored both their runs, but once in the lead as the result of Cub rallies in the sixth and seventh, he threw so much stuff at his opponents that they couldn't get hold of anything. All they grabbed in the last five rounds was one hit.

Cause of Blake's Setback.

The first of the only twp setbacks suffered by Blake occurred in the opening inning. Blades led off with a hit and Southworth sacrificed. The great Hornsby followed with a bounder at Adams, but the pill hit a submerged pebble and went whistling past Sparky's ear for a single. Blades scored. The other run seeped over in the fourth on Lester Bell's Texas league single, a clean blow by Douthit, and O'Farrell's sacrifice fly.

When the Cubs started their sixth round attack they had next to nothing to show for their previous efforts. Heathcote, who singled and stole in the fourth, was the only tourist who had been to base. Then Hartnett started to alter the complexion of the score board by leading off in the sixth with a robust single to left. The next two batters grounded to short for force outs and either of these could have been double plays, but Hornsby was thinking about one of his fifty-seven varieties of boils, so neglected to cover second.

Alex Throws Wild.

The second of the above mentioned force plays left Adams on first and he stole second. Heathcote drove a ball back at Alexander and the old fellow stabbed it with his bare hand, but it got away. He retrieved it and threw wild to first after Heathcote had already arrived there. Adams scored on the hit and error and Heathcote legged it for third. A hit by Stephenson sent him home and tied the count at two apiece.

Freigau opened the seventh by converting one of Alex's twisters into a hit. Cooney sacrificed and Hartnett walked. Then Blake slashed a hit to left and Freigau hustled home with what proved the winning tally.

One for Blake

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

About the only thrill one could get out of the combat yesterday at Comiskey park between the White Sox and Tigers for fourth or fifth or sixth place or something was in watching Ty Cobb and Eddie Collins function on the coaching lines and reminisce a bit on the days when both of them performed on the field. Ty outcoached Eddie by a score of 5 to 2 or at least that was the way the game came out, with Ty's team on the good end of the count.

TY COBB.

Except on two or three occasions when some one of the younger generation of performers did an active stunt, the game was dull and dismal, but when expectancy became monotonous, one could simply glance at the coaching lines and see either Old Ty or Old Eddie all fired up with enthusiasm as he urged his men to carry on, and one could imagine what a battle it might have been if the time worn bones and muscles of these old timers would only respond to their call.

Whitehill Baffles Sox.

No doubt the young men of the White Sox team were forced to appear listless by the clever and cunning pitching of Earl Whitehill, whose southpaw curves and shoots seemed to have them greatly baffled. Anyway only a half dozen hits were gathered and they were scattered over a half dozen innings.

Tommy Thomas opposed him and was almost as effective and cunning as the Detroit left hander, but he was wild and that caused his downfall. Hits were bunched with passes for two runs in the fifth and two more in the sixth and that was the ball game. Tommy gave way to a helpless pinch hitter in the seventh and Hollis Thurston finished, one run being obtained off him in the ninth with the aid of an error.

Old Rivalry Still Exists.

Even with their famous Mr. Ty and our famous Mr. Eddie forced to the coaching lines, it was noticeable that the old rivalry between the two teams still exists and the 12,000 or more fans assembled gave an old time whoop when the Sox broke away in front with their two runs in the third inning. After two were out Mostil and Hunnefield drew passes, whereupon Sheely let drive his two base drive down the left foul line. Mostil counted and Honeyboy stopped at third, but tallied a moment later when Gehringer fumbled Falk's roller.

That lead was held until the fifth when Bassler led off with a single. Whitehill flied out, but Neun drew a pass. Manush drove to Barrett in deep right and Whispering Bill made a heroic heave to third but couldn't stop Bassler from advancing to that corner. Neun also advanced to second on the heave and both scored when the sturdy Mr. Fothergill poled safely to left.

Thomas Loses Control.

In the sixth two were out when Thomas again lost control and walked Tavener. Bassler followed with a two base knock to right, Tavener stopping at third and right there Mr. Whitehill won his own game with a single that brought both mates home.

Neun opened the ninth with a two bagger and Manush sacrificed. Fothergill then bounced to our Young Mr. Berg for his only chance in the game. He might have pegged Neun out at home but he messed the ball.

YANKEES, GRIFFS DIVIDE 2 GAMES; RUTH HITS NO. 38

Goslin Gets Two Homers, Gehrig One.

New York, Aug. 14.—(AP)—New York and Washington split today's double bill, the Yankees winning the first, 4 to 2, and losing the second, 10 to 5. Home runs featured both contests, Gehring getting his third in two days and his 12th of the year in the first, while Babe Ruth drove out his 38th.

Goose Goslin made two home runs in the second game, his 15th and 16th. Earl Combs was spiked in his throwing hand by Koenig in the fifth of the closing battle when both tried for Bluege's fly. Score:

White Sox Notes

THE Sox and Tigers will combat again at the south side today. Ty and Eddie will coach.

After today's contest, the Sox will leave for their finial trip of the year, making every city in the circuit except Cleveland before they return on Sept. 6.

While Manager Collins hopes to try out some recruits before the season ends, it will be necessary to do all the road battling with his present array of warriors. Secretary Grabiner says the Sox recruits are such stars in their present minor league berths that they can't get away until their pennant races are decided.

At least our young Mr. Berg broke into the batting averages yesterday. In the fourth inning with two out, he socked a beauty liner to right center for two bases. It was his first hit of the year, but judging from the way he socked it, he will gather a number of them in the remainder of the season.

Whispering Bill Barrett turned out the sparkling stunt of the day when he captured a foul drive by Heilmann in the second inning. Bill raced over the foul line and speared the ball with one hand and finished on top of the rolled up canvas.

Notes of the Cubs

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 14.—Charley Root, for whom the Cubs seldom score more than one run, will face the Cardinals tomorrow. Flint Rhem will do the throwing for the local hopes.

The customers here have gained such a reputation for bottle throwing that the management has ceased to sell glass encased liquids in the upper deck.

O'Farrell flied to Wilson for the last out in the sixth and just as Hack was about to toss the ball to the infield it slipped from his hands. One of the umpires ruled the runner safe, but after a conference the three wise men in blue decided the inning was over.

Heathcote staged two thrilling catches in the third inning. He raced in to make a one-haded catch of Southworth's short fly behind first base. A moment later he charged into foul territory and got his hands on Hornsby's fly.

Freigau robbed the Cards of a run in the second when Douthit was on second as the result of a double. O'Farrell slapped a hard bounder close to the bag and Freigau dove for it. He came up with the ball and tagged Douthit, who was on his way to third.

THE SPORTING GOODS
BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

HELMY HAS AN IDEA.

ISHAK HELMY, the Egyptian swimmer, has been toying with the idea of coming to the United States in the autumn to glean any currency that Luis Angel Firpo may have overlooked when Luis Angel was harvesting these fertile acres. The only thought that deters Ishak is the thought that while he is lifting the proceeds of a hasty career in the prize ring profession some rough character might lift his face over on to the back of his neck with an earnest swipe tossed from the hip.

Ishak is very well satisfied with his face as it is, for it is not only a good, serviceable face but something of an ornament as well. He has an aristocratic nose, facile eyebrows, which twiddle up and down and serve as punctuation marks when he speaks, and his teeth are all as white as beans and home grown. He has inspected the facial chaos of Paul Journee, Joe Beckett and several other noted European heavyweights who insisted on blocking punches with their features and he realizes that the human face, in being lifted over on to the back of the human neck, is likely to be permanently disarranged.

Ishak is a very intelligent young athlete and there is some logic in his idea, which is about as follows:

Luis Angel Firpo was a bottle washer, who wore highwater pants, a 19½ derby, and a celluloid collar. He knew no more about fighting than a rock crusher knows about indigestion, and yet he made a large amount of those dollars.

I am Ishak Helmy, an aristocrat, the son of a pasha who had six wives, and I wear leg-of-mutton pants which are tailored for me in Sackville street, London, W. I know the difference between Lord Nelson and Battling Nelson. I can tell you the vintage of a bottle of wine by sniffing the cork, and I can't possibly know any less about fighting than Luis Angel Firpo did.

Therefore, Ishak concludes, I should be able to earn a large quantity of those dollars in the boxing profession in the United States. I should not employ seconds but a covey of body servants from the old family reservation in Egypt and I should have an equerry instead of a manager. I have never tried to fight, but I should be a much more attractive public personality than this comical person who resigned from the bottle laundry and went to New York wearing highwater pants, a chowder bowl derby, and celluloid collars. On the whole, I am a pretty swell job of work. It is not so?

Ishak entered a bar in Paris one night last spring and met an acquaintance, an American authority on the prize fight industry, who was enjoying a quiet seidel of cognac.

"Ah, my friend, my friend," Helmy exclaimed. "You are the one I wish to see. I lost fifty thousand pounds last winter investigating a system for beating the roulette wheel at Monte Carlo. I was a silly ass to quit without giving the system a thorough trial. However, I have decided to go to America and be a prize fighter and earn back the fifty thousand pounds. You are my friend and an honest man, so I have decided to appoint you my director."

"Helmy," said the expert on conditions in the American cauliflower trade, "I am your friend and I am an honest man. To show you the extent of my friendship I will advise you to keep your remarkably handsome mush outside the ropes, where it is an asset for gabbing and eating and smiling at the women. And to show you how honest I am, I will state that you will never be a fighter. In fact, if you will wait until I train on another wee pint of cognac, I will take you out into the alley and give you a pasting myself to prove that you can't fight."

Nevertheless Ishak wishes to come to the United States and be a prize fighter. He weighs 245 pounds. He drinks anything but doesn't smoke anything He is 6 feet 6 inches tall. He has great endurance and physical courage He spent a day and a night in the water in his attempt to swim the channel last year and when cramps snarled his muscles he calmly rolled over on his back and kneaded them out. The only drawback is that he might not be able to push over the customary array of pushovers on his way to a match with the champion and would have to go back to Egypt with his handsome face in a sling and comparatively few of those dollars in his satchel.

HOW DOES A FELLOW LET GO?

WE have heard that it is comparatively easy to grab a rattlesnake by the tail, but quite a feat to let go, and this is a reminder of the present situation of Mr. C. C. Pyle.

When he really turned his personal attention to the matter, Mr. Pyle had no trouble in promising Suzanne Lenglen a lot of wealth and persuading her to drop the rather transparent amateurism that clothes most of the amateur stars at present.

But if Mr. Pyle has promised Miss Lenglen as much money as we think he has, we wonder where he is going to find that money and so, probably, does Mr. C. C. Pyle.

Although Miss Helen Wills has enjoyed a sudden rise to eminence in the profession of journalism through the discovery of a previously unsuspected knack for literature, she is still an amateur athlete.

The Messrs. Richards and Tilden also are journalists who leaped to important positions on the pay roll about the same time that they leaped to high positions in the national tennis ranking, but they, too, are amateur athletes.

Under the present understanding of amateur ethics in tennis, an amateur athlete avoids contact with a professional athlete with the same hauteur that a ball player would manifest toward Mr. Cozy Dolan. Thus, where's the contest for Miss Lenglen? Does Mr. Pyle expect to collect money for exhibitions of shadow tennis?

And even if the boys and girls come to a new understanding of amateurism and decide to play with Miss Lenglen, how many matches will that give Mr. Pyle? Star tennis matches are not arranged in the same manner that the boys are selected for the star bout in the prize fight business. A big tennis match is the culmination of a tournament, not a cold selection.

Perhaps Mr. Pyle will be able to persuade some others to take his shillings. Certainly an athlete who makes a fortune or a living out of sport ought to be sportsman enough to give sport credit. The establishment of a professional class might not improve the social tone of tennis, but it has been many years since the ranking players were all listed in the social register. Such a development would make tennis fairly honest, anyway.

WHY WILLS?

ALTHOUGH Tex Rickard will never admit as much, he realizes that a fight between Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills, if it could be brought off in Chicago or New York, would draw as much as the Dempsey-Carpentier demonstration.

Rickard could have the match but he won't touch it because of the risk that after he had built up the business with an investment of $300,000 or so, some one will send a constable around to close the show. It is hard to understand the preference for Harry Wills as heavyweight champion, but obviously a lot of customers would rather have him than Dempsey.

Wills is surrounded by a cluster of characters who can do more tricks with a blackjack than Gerald Chapman could do with a full kit of burglar tools. Furthermore, he is either a disgraceful faker or runner-up to Mickey McTigue as the world's worst fighter.

The professional pals of Harry Wills have an ingenuous explanation of his awful lack of class as a prize fighter. They will advise you that he didn't stop Bartley Madden or Luis Angel Firpo because he wasn't supposed to stop them.

This leaves you the choice of two conclusions:

Wills is either a mugg or what the boys call a desperado, which is another way of describing a fellow who is willing to jog along easily if the inducements are right.

Aging Legs Writing Finis to Collins' Day as Player

The day is not far away when Eddie Collins will take a seat on the bench and admit that he has reached the stage where regular toil on the diamond is a physical impossibility.

EDDIE COLLINS

It's the legs that get 'em all—the great, the near great, and the mediocre—and Collins is no exception. The pounding given the lower limbs by base running, by quick starting and stopping in the field, and by twisting at the bat have almost collected their toll, and it is not surprising.

Until the start of the present season the one time sensation of the Ban Johnson league had engaged in 2,557 big time games, and that is just about enough to wear out any pair of legs except wooden ones. This total can be increased by adding about 75 games for the current campaign.

He's Baseball Marvel.

The leader of the White Sox has long been one of the marvels of baseball, first because of his dazzling all around ability and later because of the manner in which he stood up under the strain of infielding. Few will equal his record in games played. None ever will excel him in skill.

The beginning of Collins' decline came last August when he accidentally stepped on a batted ball. Until then only those who watched him day in and day out could notice that there was less rhythm in his step. The leg could not withstand the sudden strain of that mishap. It has never been the same since. A younger man would have felt no ill effects. Today Collins plays only because he knows his team needs him.

It is a singular thing that as great natural hitters grow weak in the legs their eyes become sharper. Practically all the great sluggers of the past went down for the count with their batting marks flying as high as they ever had been. Larry Lajoie was one, Sam Crawford and Honus Wagner were others. Collins is going to follow in their footsteps. Right now he is as dangerous a hitter as when in his prime and as such probably will find much work unless he decides to give up and live on his laurels.

Hits .300 for 17 Years.

It is now almost twenty years to the day when Collins played his first game of big league ball. It happened on the old 39th street grounds that Comiskey abandoned in 1910. Collins, then a student at Columbia university and captain-elect of the baseball team, desired to retain his amateur status, so he broke in under the name of Sullivan. But they found him out, so he played no college ball thereafter.

In his twenty years of campaigning Collins has been to bat, exclusive of this season, 9,270 times and made 3,086 hits. His base burglaries have reached a total of 724. In only three of all those seasons has he failed to bat over the .300 mark.

Trudie Seeks Rest, but She Doesn't Get It

BY JULIA HARPMAN.

[Copyright: 1926: By Trib-News Service.]

BISSINGEN, Germany, Aug. 14.—Trudie Ederle's dreams of a rest at Bissingen, a tiny village located on the outskirts of the lower Alps, where she came to visit her grandmother, have been shattered.

Every place she goes she is followed by a large crowd. Long before she arises in the morning crowds of people gather at her doorstep to get a glimpse of the 19 year old American girl who breasted the English channel. Delegations from swimming clubs and other organizations in Stuttgart, Esslingen and many other towns continue to insist that Trudie make a public appearance in their towns despite her repeated refusal to make any public appearance until she reaches New York City.

Her Aunt Pitches Hay.

Today Trudie paid a visit to a great-aunt, who is a sister of Miss Ederle's grandmother and also godmother of her father. This great aunt, who lives in Weilheim, a neighboring village, is seventy-nine years old. When we drove up to her home we were told that she was out working in the fields. she returned later, accompanied by several men and women, who had been assisting her in loading wheat and hay into carts.

Trudie's great aunt brought out big stone pitchers of cider, which is the favorite drink here—cider which was old, having aged in dark, deep cellars beneath the farmhouse. Trudie's grandmother drank two glasses of the cider.

Everyone Drinks Cider.

Everyone here drinks either wine or cider, water being used only for bathing purposes. Every place we go the hostess brings cider and cakes the minute we are seated. The German people are not happy unless their guests are eating all day long. All of which does not afford one an opportunity to lose any weight here.

Bissingen is a picturesque village with quaint architecture, its plaster and brick houses supported by wide wooden beams and every house has pots of flowers at its windows. The houses are arranged in the center of the village with the farms spreading out beyond like the spokes of a wagon wheel radiating from its hub.

Almost the entire village is owned by members of the Ederle family. Trudie's grandmother owns 120,000 meters of land which was left her by her husband. This heritage has been divided, each child being given a portion which he now cultivates.

Okmulgee Signs Williams, Veteran of Many Leagues

Springfield, Mo., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—"Mutt" Williams, Giant right hander, who has been in many leagues from the Western association up to the New York Giants, and back down again, will join the Okmulgee, Okla., Drillers of the association at Joplin tomorrow, it was announced today by Chick Mattick, manager of the club. Williams' best work was with Minneapolis, Minn., and Fort Worth, Tex. He was sold to the Giants for $10,000 after pitching Fort Worth to a pennant.

BETTY BECKER IMPROVES.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 14.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Betty Becker Pinkston, 1924 Olympic champion diver, remained in a pecarious condition here today following the birth of twin babies, a boy and a girl. She was "slightly improved," however, hospital attendants said, and spent a restful night. Mrs. Pinkston is the wife of Clarence Pinkston, champion Olympic diver in 1920. The babies were reported doing well.

CENTRAL HOCKEY LEAGUE TO HAVE CHICAGO TEAM

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 14.—(AP)—The Central Amateur Hockey league next winter probably will include Kansas City and Chicago, it was indicated at a meeting of league officials here today.

This would make it an eight-city circuit for the coming playing season. Kansas City was represented at the meeting by business men who seek a franchise for a team there.

The question of a franchise for Chicago also was discussed, but no definite action was taken. Detroit, Mich., was formally awarded the franchise of the Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., club, which was in the central loop last season.

San Diego and Glencoe Net Stars in Rockford Final

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Howe Bancroft, San Diego, Cal., and George Holloway, Glencoe, Ill., high ranking junior tennis stars, went into the finals of the annual northern Illinois tournament here today and will meet in the title match tomorrow afternoon.

Edward Brolin and Arnold Seligren, Rockford, will play Holloway and Bancroft in the doubles semi-finals tomorrow morning to pick a pair of foes for Swan Burkland and J. Dillingham, Chicago, in the finals.

FANS WAIT IN VAIN FOR MAX CAREY'S 'EXPOSE'

Clark on Bench as Rain Halts Game.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14.—(AP)—The promised statement from Max Carey, deposed captain of the championship Pittsburgh National league baseball club, in which he said he would disclose events leading up to his suspension and the unconditional release of Babe Adams and Skeeter Bigbee, failed to materialize tonight.

The whereabouts of the three, who drew the heavy penalties for their part in a movement to oust the veteran Fred Clarke, assistant manager, from the bench, was uncertain. They were reported to be in conference, working on a statement, in various parts of the city, but sports writers who combed Pittsburgh all afternoon, failed to locate them.

More Talk Likely.

Pirate officials reiterated their statements that the matter was closed for good and all, but there was the general feeling among the fans that any statement on the issue from the three deposed stars, would bring further comment from Clarke, Sam Dreyfuss, treasurer, and Manager Bill McKechnie. Clarke was on the players' bench this afternoon for the first time since he learned of the movement to oust him. The team was ready to go into action, with Kiki Cuyler slated for Carey's old post in the middle garden, and Clyde Barnhardt in left. Rain interfered and the great throng of fans, gathered for a double header, were disappointed.

McGRAW WANTS CAREY

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Giants said today that he would put in a claim for Max Carey, deposed captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates now under waiver.

He regards the Giants' chances of acquiring Carey are slim, however, as clubs lower in the standing have first call. Manager Art Fletcher of the Phillies said he would not claim the player.

The Giants have sought an experienced center fielder for years, more than a score of players having been tried in that position since the days of Benny Kauff, and Carey is regarded as a man who would meet expectations, although his days in the major leagues are numbered.

Agnes Geraghty, a clubmate of Miss McGary, set a new world's mark for the 200 meter breast stroke when she beat her own time of 3:33 2-5 by 4-5 of a second. Mathilda Sheurich of the same club set a new national record of 1:31 1-5 for the 100 meter breast stroke.

Sheldon Lee Scott of Wichita, Kas., yesterday won the city amateur golf championship at Jackson park by defeating T. R. Montgomery, Chicago, 4 and 3. This is the first time the title has gone outside the district.

Scott, a contender in the national public links tournament at Buffalo last week, stopped off here on the way back. He failed to qualify at Buffalo.

Fans Crowd Course.

Both players received an ovation from the 4,000 fans who crowded every vantage spot. Scott won through superior driving and putting. Montgomery in the forenoon round was erratic off the tee, but in the last frame he cut out pressing for distance and kept his drives straighter. Many of his approaches were inside those of Scott, but when this situation developed the Kansas player made up for the discrepancy with dazzling putts.

Montgomery downed several fine putts, but most of these served to give him halves. The jig was up at the thirty-third, where Scott registered a fine birdie.

The gallery was so large, particularly at the greens, that Ted Lloyd, one of the committee, sprang a novelty so that the players might see the pin while executing their second shots. A young woman in a bright red dress was pressed into service to stand at the pin. At the next green she was missing so Ted used a large flag, draping it over the top of the pin post.

Montgomery Takes Lead.

After halving the first two holes in par on the morning round Montgomery took the lead at the third with a birdie that followed a 275 yard tee shot and the sinking of a 15 foot putt. Scott pulled his drive to the rough and put his second in a trap. A wild shot into the bushes near the green cost Montgomery the fifth.

At the seventh Scott drove to the island bushes, but he won the hole after Montgomery had put two tee shots out of bounds. The next two were halved and Scott rounded the turn 4 up, with a medal score of 33 against Montgomery's approximate 38. Par is 34.

The first hole credited to Montgomery was the tenth, where his tee shot dropped eight feet beyond the pin.

The home hole was halved and Scott went to luncheon with a lead of 2 up. Scott came home in 37 and had 70 for the round, while Montgomery's respective figures were 34 and 72.

Scott Is Two Up.

Montgomery cheered the home town fans by winning the first hole in the afternoon with a fine putt. At the second hole, however, he required three strokes on the green and Scott was again 3 up. At the sixth Scott downed a 50 foot putt for a win. He rounded the final turn 3 up, with a medal score of 36 against Montgomery's 37.

Coming home, Scott took the water eleventh after "Red" had driven behind a tree and had to shoot through the branches to carry the hazard. Scott missed a putt for a half at the thirteenth and, after halving the long fourteenth, the match ended at the next hole, where his approach was within a foot of the pin.

In the championship consolation, William Wallace of the home club defeated Keith Morrison, Jackson Park champion, 8 and 7.

Manager George Hilton went through the first flight defeating B. Reilly of Jackson, 5 and 4.

Pat Ennis won the first flight consolation, 2 and 1, from J. F. McCahill. Both players represented the home club.

HERE'S CHEER FOR N. U. GRID FANS: BAKER'S ELIGIBLE

Purple Captain Hurdles Scholastic Ban.

Although theoretically the football season doesn't start until Sept. 15, when the boys first don the moleskins and run through preliminary drills, talk concerning the impending gridiron year at Northwestern university is so incessant that they say the smell of oil of wintergreen already is in the air in Evanston.

Chief of yesterday's announcements was that Captain Ralph "Moon" Baker successfully completed the courses in accounting and money and banking that he was repeating in the summer session and therefore is eligible to compete next fall.

Then Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite, before leaving Dakota Wesleyan university, where he will instruct the summer session coaching school, signed eighty-six invitations to football candidates asking them to report on Sept. 14 for a medical examination. The players also were reminded that the season opens on the fifteenth and they should report in good condition.

Center Job Worries Coach.

A squad of over a hundred is expected and eight coaches will be on hand to meet them. The greatest task the coaches face is to find a new center to replace Timothy Lowry, 1925 captain. Not even a substitute from last year's varsity is returning. Four freshmen, Kline, Hellerman, Wyman and Panosh, and a former guard, Kuiper, will be groomed for the pivot position.

Another announcement that came from the Purple headquarters yesterday was relative to ticket sales. An innovation will be tried this year, ten thousand season tickets being offered the public. These tickets, costing $14, will admit to each of the six home games.

Ticket Orders Filled Sept. 2.

No orders will be regarded until Sept. 2, however. This is the date set by all conference schools for the acceptance of ticket orders. This rule will be followed rigidly, said Edward B. Davidson, manager of ticket sales, who warned prospective purchasers not to mail their orders before the first of the month.

Within the next two weeks 25,000 letters will be mailed out to alumni, in which general information about the tickets and other data will be given. These letters will contain a plat of the field, showing the seating arrangements and all exits.

Women's City Golf Tourney on Tomorrow

Mrs. William Wallace of Jackson park will defend her title in the women's city championship tournament which opens tomorrow over the new Marquette course. Mrs. John C. Fafner of Columbus park, who lost to Mrs. Wallace in the final last year, also will compete. Entries will be accepted until tee time.

This will be the first open event held at Marquette since the links were revamped to a point where iron play is a big factor in the game. Women's par is 72. The best scores thus far by women have been rounds of 40—38—78 by Mrs. Mary P. King, and 37—39—76 and 37—37—74 by Mrs. Oscar C. Horn.

The field will shoot 18 holes Monday for places in two match play brackets of 32 each. All match rounds except the final will be at 18 holes. The list of entries thus far announced follows:

9:00 a. m.—Grace Saunders, Marquette; Mrs. C. E. Hill, Edgebrook; Miss Charlotte Munzer, Jackson Park; Mrs. Zill, Marquette.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question R. E. Johnson, Forest Park, Mason City, Ia., was awarded $5.

The Question.

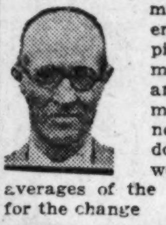
Do you favor the proposed rule shortening the distance between home plate and the pitcher's mound?

Where Asked.

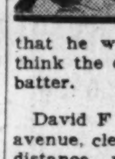
Madison at State street.

The Answers.

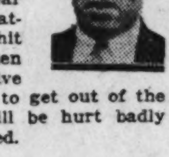
Gordon Devlin, 840 Dakin street, plumber's apprentice—No, I do not. I think the distance is short enough now. Why tamper with a rule that has proved a success during the many years it has been in force. It seems that the governors of baseball today are always trying to find something wrong with the game. Leave the rule as it now stands.



W. C. Nequette, 605 Belden place, miner—If it were shortened it would give the pitcher a chance to put more speed on the ball and make the game more interesting. I do not think the cutting down of the distance would hurt the batting averages of the athletes. Yes, I am for the change



Hobart McNeill, 2534 Burling street, art student — I think the game would gain considerable from such a change. The pitcher would be able to perform much better, and when a batter said he was up among the .300 hitters one would know that he was pretty good I do not think the change would endanger the batter.



David F Lackie, 1449 North Laurel avenue, clerk — If the distance were shortened it would be dangerous for the batter to attempt to hit a ball, for he would be so near the pitcher that the latter probably would hit him six out of ten times. It wouldn't give the batter a chance to get out of the way. The game will be hurt badly if the rule is changed.

Earl Huff, Bedford, Ind., clerk—The speed most pitchers have would make it risky for the batter, who wouldn't have a chance to save himself from getting hit with the ball. I can't see why any one with any knowledge of baseball would even consider the changing of the rule relative to the distance between the home plate and the pitcher's mound.

14,000 SEATS IN PURPLE STADIUM ARE COMPLETED

Work on the new Northwestern university stadium is almost a week ahead of schedule, the J. B. French Construction company, contractors in charge of building operations, reported to Director of Athletics Kenneth L. Wilson yesterday.

More than 400 men are working two shifts to complete the structure.

Concrete has been poured on six sections and 14,000 seats are ready for occupancy. At least 11,000 more are expected to be in place when the first whistle blows on Oct. 2.

The concrete structural work on the west stands is well under way and the forms are erected for the concrete arches which will surround the oval grand stand. The west stands will be completed this fall, including the towers, the dressing rooms and the interior equipment. The east stands will be only partially completed this summer.

New Stand to Accommodate 6,000 Fans.

Seating accommodations for more than 6,000 spectators will be available in Patten gymnasium when the 1927 basketball season opens, according to an announcement yesterday by Director of Athletics Kenneth L. "Tug" Wilson. Approximately 2,200 seats will soon be added.

Nineteen Rows of Seats.

The increase was necessitated by the steadily growing interest in the cage sport in Evanston. At the opening conference game of the season with Michigan at Patten gym last winter, three thousand fans were turned away, while more than 5,000 crowded into 3,500 seats. Similar conditions were in evidence at almost every conference game. The Purple was one of the two schools in the Big Ten to show a substantial profit at the end of the basketball season.

To make room for the extra fans next season, stands nineteen rows in height will be used instead of the fourteen row variety used heretofore, while space wasted before will be utilized. Despite the changes, every seat will afford the occupant a clear view of the floor.

Play Notre Dame There.

It is doubtful whether the capacity will be great enough for most of the games next winter, ten home contests being billed. Illinois, Chicago, Minnesota, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Purdue are dated for home-and-home conference tilts, while Wabash, Notre Dame, Drake, and the Michigan Aggies will be at Evanston for practice encounters.

A Purple journey into the Notre Dame stronghold at South Bend is the other of the seventeen games.

Hunter Needs to Befriend Farmer—Bob

BY BOB BECKER.

Although the fall hunting season doesn't enter into the picture for a couple of months, hunters who live in cities and haven't any hook up for a shooting place this fall are advised to get busy now to make their arrangements. With farmers forced to lock their gates and bar all free lance hunters because of the depredations of a few, it behooves the responsible city hunter to enter into a combine or compact with one or two friendly farmers who are willing to permit one, two, three, or four fellows to hunt upon acreage for a nominal sum.

This is the only way to be assured of rabbit or upland game bird shooting within a reasonable distance from Chicago. And now is the time to do it. Nine out of ten hunters own automobiles. While touring and vacationing on the road at this time of the year the wise hunter will make friends with some farmers in good rabbit or quail country so that when the season arrives Mr. Shotgun fan will be set for sport. If necessary, pay for the exclusive hunting privileges on the property.

If the hunter or hunters are responsible men who will not tear down fences and destroy stock the average farmer will be glad to take a small sum from them for exclusive hunting privileges on his farm. Friendship and gentlemanly conduct get results in this game. The farmer has had his fill of the other kind of contracts judging by what I heard at a farmer's meeting when some of the men present related what they had suffered from careless and vicious property destroying gunners.

So the tip is, better hop into your car sometime during the next month and hunt up a shooting place. You'll find some good spots within 100 to 175 miles of Chicago. Tell Mr. Farmer who you are, what you want, assure him that you are on the square and want to pay him something for his game crop and you'll win.

Motor Boat Regatta to Be Held Today

DOEG DEFEATS PARE IN JUNIOR TENNIS TOURNEY

Coen Wins Over Wood for Boys' Title.

BY HOWARD ROBERTS.

Julius Seligson of New York, the dark horse of the national junior tennis championships, raced down the stretch and into the final round yesterday with a straight set victory over Robert Seller of San Francisco, 6—4, 7—5, at the South Side Tennis club. Today he will clash with John Doeg, Santa Monica southpaw, for the title. Doeg entered the finals by taking a gruelling three set battle from Emmet Pare of Chicago, 5—7, 6—3, 6—4.

Coen Wins Boys' Title.

Junior Coen, Kansas City's little giant of the courts, won the national boys' championship with an easy victory over Sidney B. Wood Jr. of Forest Hills, 6—2, 6—1, in the other feature match of the day.

Seligson's victory was dramatic and unexpected. The squat New Yorker whose build belies his ability had eliminated Berkeley Bell of Austin, Tex., on Thursday, but few gave him a chance against Seller's aggressive game. But Julius trotted his bulk about the court with even more agility than he displayed in his match with Bell and provided a second major upset.

The match was strictly a baseline duel and at that style of play Seligson was supreme. Seller was driving with power but the easterner lunged about, digging his drives out of the turf and spinning them back. With almost uncanny accuracy he raked Seller's back court with sizzling drives, forcing the coast lad into errors.

Doeg Defeats Pare.

Emmet Pare, Chicago's last title hope, went down fighting before Johnny Doeg, seeded number two in the draw. Emmet was superior on general play but could not cope with Doeg's terrific service, which experts classify as one of the most vicious in the game today.

In the opening set Pare cracked Doeg's service in the third game and ran up a lead of 5—3. Johnny then responded by breaking Pare's serve to square the match at 5—5. Emmet scored another service break on the coast boy's errors and then took his own delivery for the set at 7—5.

Doeg then rand through the second set and piled up a 5—1 lead in the third. Emmet, making a desperate final stand again broke Doeg's vaunted service and won his own twice. Here his spurt failed and John, putting his full strength into his serve took the final game at love.

Little Junior Coen had a walkaway in his boys' championship match with Sidney Wood and in winning stamped himself as one of the greatest young players in the game.

Pare and Seller Win Doubles.

Junior had his ground strokes under perfect control, chasing Wood legweary with hard drives down the sideline and whistling cross court drives. Young Wood played well but was no match for the champion.

Emmet Pare and Bobby Seller got a measure of consolation for their singles defeats by reaching the doubles finals over Ben Gorchakoff and Arthur Kussman of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—2. In the other doubles semi-final, Berkeley Bell, Austin, and Jimmy Quick, Dallas, won over Eddie Jacobs and C. Alphonse Smith, Baltimore team, in a close match, 6—4, 8—6.

In an exhibition match George Lott, Chicago city champion, scortd a crushing victory over the veteran Watson Washburn, former Davis cup player, 6—2, 6—0.

CRACK DRIVERS RACE 75 MILES AT ROBY TODAY

Thirty-nine crack drivers are scheduled to start this afternoon in the seventy-five mile national championship auto race to be held at Robey speedway, 108th street and Indianapolis avenue. Time trials will be held this morning, while the final drive for the crown will get under way at 2:30 p. m.

Nearly all of the leading drivers of this section have entered the grind, "Dutch" Baumann and Wilbur Shaw, both of Indianapolis, being picked by fans as probable winners. Many eastern pilots also will start. Chicago will have its usual delegation on hand, headed by Roy Ketcham, Ralph Eckstrom, and D. D. Morris. Louis Schneider, former Indianapolis star, also will represent Chicago.

From Detroit will come Fred Harder, who finished second to Wilbur Shaw in the fifty mile national championship race at Hawthorne last Sunday, one of the most spectacular drivers in the game today. Gus Schraeder, Iowa champion, will represent the corn state.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

RACING LUCK.

HAVE you ever noticed that it is always the horse upon which you bet that gets a poor start, or is shut off on one of the turns, or turns wide into the stretch, or upon which the jockey puts up a woeful exhibition? Of course, you have, and have bewailed that fact to any more or less interested friends with patience to listen.

Well, there's a reason. All the misfortunes which you thought you saw happen to your money carrier probably did happen. Your attention was fixed on that one horse. What you did not see so well was what happened to the others. They might have fared just as badly or worse but you did not note that because you were not interested.

Then there are the times when your choice gets away "winging," as the turf expression goes, leads all the way and comes home on the bit, as the turf expression also goes. Perhaps a lot of grief has happened behind him, but in your elation you do not note it. Of course not, neither do we.

Racing luck decides many races. In no other sport, not even football or baseball, is luck so great a factor when the field is evenly balanced. Luck breaks about even in the long run, but in racing there is something in us, a peculiar quality, which ascribes our failure to pick winners to faults not our own, while vindications of our judgment fill us with an exultant sense of our superior mentality. It's a great sport—this racing.

HONOR SWEATERS COST MINNESOTA $2,500 FOR YEAR

More than $2,500 was spent for honor sweaters to reward both varsity and freshmen athletes at the University of Minnesota with letters and numerals during the last year, according to information given out by Fred Luehring, athletic director.

Records kept of the various sport participants during the school year of 1925-'26 reveal the fact that 103 varsity men were given letters for their services on various teams and 135 freshmen were given numerals for their service in athletics in the ten different sports which these men played a part during the respective seasons.

Football Heads List.

The list of sports in which awards with the number of men receiving letters in these sports are as follows: Football 25; baseball, 11; basketball, 9; cross country, 6; hockey, 11; swimming, 12; track, 15; tennis, 4; wrestling, 10; gymnastics, 4. The university not having a varsity golf team.

The number of freshmen granted numerals during the last year is the largest in the history of the school, athletic officials said. The numerals given out exceed the number of letters given out by 32.

24 Frosh Numerals.

The nine sports in which first year men scored and the number who were given numerals are as follows: Football, 24; baseball, 18; basketball, 15; cross country, 8; tennis, 4; hockey, 12; swimming, 15; track, 18; wrestling, 10. Awards to freshmen for gymnastics have not been made yet.

Besides being given a letter for his work in a certain sport a varsity man is granted a life-time pass to all athletic contests held at the university.

McGraw Considers Hiring Carey, Suspended Pirate

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—[U. P.]—Max Carey, Pirate captain, suspended without pay until claimed, may be considered for the New York Giants, John McGraw, Giant manager, said today.

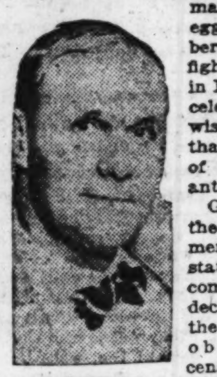
"I might consider Carey but haven't made up my mind as yet," McGraw told the United Press.

BROWER APPEALS TO LAW TO CURB LICENSE BOSSES

Thereby Perils Golden Eggs of Ring Goose.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]



TEX RICKARD.

New York, Aug. 14.—The generous barnyard fowl that has been laying so many 18 karat eggs for the members of the prize fighting profession in New York, may celebrate its demise much sooner than the members of the profession anticipate.

George Brower, the famous other member of the state cauliflower commission, has decided to have the law on the obstreperous license committee of that body and the law is something that the prize fighting profession has little respect and less use for. The better minds of the profession, realizing that the happiest results always are to be obtained by rough and tumble business methods, have had the least possible recourse to the law, even when outswindled by still better minds. Their own business methods being what they are, the members of the profession have felt the same philosophic delicacy that a holdup man would feel who lost his watch and stickpin while practicing his profession on a pickpocket.

Brower's Training Different.

Brower, however, is a lawyer by trade, and, although he finds himself sitting in the middle at the meetings of the cauliflower commission, he is not really a member of the profession. Thus he cannot realize how sensitive the profession is about the law.

Brower has sent a legal communication to Alfred Ottinger, the state attorney general, asking him to state whether the cauliflower commission or the license commission thereof is the real controller of the profession. For more than half a decade the cauliflower commission blissfully believed itself to be the government and the license committee was regarded as an unimportant subsidiary. In fact, few persons except those who had nothing more important to do than study the text of the prize fight law of New York realized that there was such a body as the license committee. The cauliflower commission issued fiats, ukases, manifestos and bulls. It suspended one fighter for neglecting to pay his alimony and warned another who chanced to be under conviction for murder that if he didn't curb his conduct he might soon commit some serious offense and be suspended, too.

Who's Boss Now?

It imposed a minimum wage scale of $10 a round for preliminary boxers and it even gave the well known Dame Fashion an argument in an official decree forbidding prize fighters to wear the modish white trunks which were so dear to the heart of the prize fighter a few seasons ago.

But now it appears that the license committee, composed of Col. William Phelan and Col. Walker Wear, is setting itself up in business as the real authority in the government of the cauliflower industry, and there is much indignation. The commission has formally ratified Jack Dempsey, declaring him to be legal and wholesome in all respects, and the license committee has invited the commission to go jump in any one of a large selection of accessible lakes.

This May Embarrass 'Em.

Brower's communication to the attorney general asks him to state whether the license committee has the right to tell the august cauliflower commission to go jump in any body of water. For, obviously, if the license committee has this right, then the cauliflower commission is not the cauliflower commission at all, but just three gentlemen with a lot of rubber stamps and title that don't mean anything.

But it is particularly trying to the members of the profession to find Brower going to law about the matter because when people go to law there are likely to be investigations with a lot of lawyers asking a lot of embarrassing questions. The lawyers may wish to examine the books of Madison Square Garden and ascertain how much Tex Rickard has paid out in taking care of the ice man these last five years, the ice man being a poetic term used to describe all manner of grafters. Rickard admits, by the way, that he has had a sizeable ice bill.

Why Game's a Bobtail Flush.

The lawyers might wish to examine the books of the recent charity performance for the benefit of New York Foot Clinic, which performance was affectionately known as the Hoof and Mouth show. One member of the press was accused that he had been carried on the hoof and mouth pay roll for $200 a week and his petulant demand to be told who got the dough brought no satisfactory reply.

"I think I am an honest fellow," this journalist said, "but I have never given it a tryout during big league grafting conditions and I would like to see whether I am a big league square shooter or only a square shooter up to $50."

The lawyers might request Paddy Mullins, president of the firm of Harry Wills, to submit a list of the stockholders in Harry Wills with a view to ascertaining whether some persons are inspired by pure altruism or something else in demanding that Wills be given a Dempsey match which would bring at least $150,000 to the firm.

Of course the lawyers would never get such information, but the mere asking of the questions would cause great distress because the prize fighting profession has one fatal trait in common with a bobtail flush. It can never stand investigation.

Navy Crew Wants Dual Race with the Huskies

The U. S. Naval academy oarsmen want the University of Washington varsity eight to compete against them on the Severn next June previous to the Poughkeepsie regatta.

Hoover Enters Tribune Water Carnival Race

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

WALTER HOOVER.

Walter Hoover of the Undine Barge club of Philadelphia, the American single sculls champion, former holder of the diamond sculls and golden cup, emblematic of the world's championship, may be a contestant in THE TRIBUNE'S fifth annual water carnival to be held in the Lincoln park lagoon next Sunday afternoon starting at 2 o'clock.

The champion already has accepted the invitation and as soon as his trip is approved by the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, Hoover will come to Chicago to practice over the course. John J. Mulcahy, secretary of the National Association of A. A. has granted a sanction for the regatta and Harry P. Burke, president of the association, has been assured that all amateur regatta rules will be observed.

Hoover in Fine Condition.

William H. Bartley, captain of the Undine Barge club, is anxious to have Hoover come west as he firmly believes the champion's appearance in the section will be a boom for rowing and attract thousands to the banks of the lagoon in the north side park. Bartley states the champion is in splendid condition as a result of the training he did for the national regatta held last week when he successfully defended his American title.

In order to give Hoover the best competition possible, single scullers of the Lincoln Park Boat club will engage in elimination trials this week to select the club champion. At the central states regatta held recently at St. Louis, representatives of the local club won the first five places in the single sculls. The event will be rowed over a three-quarter mile course starting at the south end of the lagoon and finishing at the north end. Hoover also may consent to row a quarter mile dash against the pick of the local oarsmen.

Weissmuller in Exhibition.

Hoover will not be the only champion to compete in the carnival. Miss Ethel Lackie and Johnny Weissmuller of the Illinois A. C., the two fastest swimmers in the world, will swim an exhibition quarter mile. They will start at the south end of the lagoon and swim to a point opposite the club boat house. Miss Lackie is the Olympic and American champion and holder of a number of records. Weissmuller's ability as a swimmer is well known. The pair will illustrate various strokes during their exhibition.

In addition to the single sculls there will be other races to give boating fans and followers of water sports plenty of thrills. Lincoln Park Boat club, which boasts two excellent eights, will meet Culver Military academy and the Century Boat club of St. Louis. There will be two races over the three-quarters mile course. These contests will give the spectators an idea of the famous regattas held on the Hudson river in the east and the River Thames in England.

In the doubles Lincoln Park will meet the Duluth Boat club over the same distance, and in the fours the South Side Boat club of Quincy, Ill., will meet the local crew.

Four Canoe Races.

While the shell races will attract considerable interest, the canoe events have their following. There will be four races open to all canoeists registered with the American Canoe association. In this competition, gold, silver, and bronze medals will be given the winners of first, second, and third places, respectively, while a trophy emblematic of the team championship will go to the club whose representatives score the greatest number of points on a basis of five for first, three for second, and one for third. Entry in these events can be made with Vincent Smith, care of the Lincoln Park Boat club.

Harry Hazelhurst, swimming instructor of the C. A. A., will be in charge of the divers who will perform from the high and low boards during the afternoon.

Announcers to Call Events.

Through the courtesy of the Lincoln park commissioners the lagoon is being put in excellent shape for the event, and everything possible will be done for the comfort of the thousands who are expected to journey to the park to see the races. The event is staged primarily for the public. There is no charge and the sloping banks of the lagoon with the large shade trees afford excellent opportunities to see the races without discomfort.

For the benefit of those who intend to see the carnival, the complete program will be printed in next Sunday's issue of THE TRIBUNE. Announcers will ride up and down the lagoon in small motor boats to keep the spectators informed as to what is taking place.

FANTOME WINS FEATURE YACHT REGATTA RACES

63 Boats Compete Off Randolph Street.

Forming one of the most picturesque sights ever seen in Lake Michigan waters, sixty-three yachts and sailboats yesterday spread their sails for the annual Lake Michigan Yachting association's regatta, held off the Grant park harbor at Randolph street under the auspices of the Columbia Yacht club.

Races in Choppy Sea.

Fantome, owned by Bill Faurot of the Chicago Yacht club, romped off with the day's features, victories in both the R class and the Universal time prize events. Fantome's time for the ten mile drive, sailed in a fairly choppy sea, with a light northeasterly gale in the air, was 1:13:14.

The Sewanhaka class prize went to Hal Redmon's able sailor Columbia of the Jackson Park Yacht club, which covered the course in 1:19:12. For yawls, 25 feet and under, Beaver, owned by L. Hess of the same club, was the winner. The time for the 10 mile course was 1:42:53. Ben Carpenter's Freya of the Chicago Yacht club captured the large yawl class race in 1:29:12.

Intruder Wins Class Q.

Nakomis of the Columbia Yacht club won the schooner prize in 2:01:30, while Gus Nylund's Springtime won the 25 foot sloop trophy in 1:22:04. Yacht No. 2 of the Chicago Yacht club was the victor in the Eagle class race, sailing the distance in 1:29:39. Columbia of the Jackson Park Yacht club also finished first in the thirty foot sloop division in 1:19:12, while the O'Rourke brothers' yacht Intruder of the Jackson Park Yacht club captured first money in the Q class division.

In P class, for large sloops, Intrepid of the same club won in 1:21:11. In the race for the International fleet of the Sheridan Shore Yacht club of Winnetka, yacht No. 356 finished in front of a fleet of ten boats over a three and one-half mile course. Time was 0:55:35.

Banquet Last Night.

A guest boat left the Columbia Yacht club's slip shortly before the race got under way, firing both the warning and starting signals. The judges were: W. J. Moore, Jackson Park Yacht club; James Barr, South Shore Yacht club; F. B. Wever, Chicago Yacht club, and Charles Scates, Columbia Yacht club. Walter J. Eden, chairman; I. E. Buse, Henry Worthman, H. S. Gaither, and C. B. Buschick formed the regatta committee.

A banquet held last night by the Columbia Yacht club wound up the day's activities for the amateur sailors.

ILLINI EXPECT CAPACITY CROWD FOR PENN GAME

Homecoming Battle with Iowa Excites Fans.

Urbana, Ill., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Football became an important topic at the University of Illinois this week when the first batch of application blanks and information leaflets went into the mails. The initial mailing was to enthusiasts in distant cities in order to give them a chance to get their applications on equal terms with the fans who live closer to Urbana.

This plan will be followed in mailing upwards of 50,000 blanks and leaflets, all of which will be in the mails by Aug. 25. By Sept. 1, when the football ticket office will begin to fill orders, it is expected that thousands of letters will have been received.

Judging from the various letters of inquiry, the Iowa and Pennsylvania games will run a close race for popular favor. The Hawkeyes, who play the "homecoming" engagement for the first time since 1922, should attract a throng and Pennsylvania, the first eastern team to play in the Memorial stadium, promises to do as well.

Four Games Pack Stadium.

Since the stadium was opened in 1923 it has been sold out four times. Chicago opened the stadium in 1922 and Michigan appeared for the dedication in 1924. Last year the Wolverines came here again and Chicago played at Illinois in 1925. Last year was the first season in which every seat was sold for two games. The capacity of the stadium is about 67,000.

Although "Red" Grange had much to do with the crowds last year, the Illini point out that in 1923 he was not widely famed and that the stadium sold out for the Chicago game then. Under ordinary circumstances Chicago and Michigan, it is believed, will draw better than any other teams at Illinois, because of traditional rivalry.

HUB SCHOONER STARTS IN LONG BRITISH RACE

COWES, Isle of Wight, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Nine yachts, including Lothrop Ames Jr.'s 49 foot schooner Primrose IV. of Boston, today started the second annual ocean race from Cowes over a course of approximately 600 miles. From Cowes the course takes the yachts around Fastnet rock, off the Irish coast, to finish at Plymouth.

One feature of the event is that most of the yachts' crews consist largely of amateurs.

The race is a handicap affair with the English cutter Halloween as the scratch boat. The outside allowance of 38 hours 20 minutes was given the English cutter Penlock, while the American Primrose IV. received the next highest, 28 hours 20 minutes, and the Jolie Brise, which won last year and competed in the recent Bermuda race, 15 hours 22½ minutes. Fine conditions favored the star.

TRUMBULL PARK GIRLS CAPTURE SWIM HONORS

In the annual South Park girls' swimming meet held yesterday at Sherman Park pool, Davis Square and Lyman Trumbull park took first place in junior and senior competition, respectively. High point winners were Minnie Urban of Davis Square, who scored 10 points in the junior meet, and Dorothy Jones of Ogden park, who annexed 12 points in senior competition.

Smart New Rumble Seat
For Sport Roadster

Rumble seats are justly popular. They add a smart, rakish touch to roadster lines, and increase the carrying capacity by two passengers.

That Dodge Brothers Sport Roadster now provides this convenience, will be welcome news to thousands.

Like the main seat, it is deeply upholstered in gray Spanish genuine leather, and the seat back is high and well pitched, providing unusual comfort.

When closed, the rear compartment is absolutely water-proof, even in rainiest weather.

Ample space is provided behind the main seat for golf clubs, suit cases, tennis rackets and similar luggage.

Brilliant pheasant green lacquer body and hood, strikingly in contrast with the tan top, black fenders and full special equipment, complete a general color scheme of exceptional dash and charm.

JACK COMMENCES ROAD WORK FOR BOUT WITH GENE

Skips Races to Shop with Estelle.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 14.—(AP)—A few miles of road work in the morning and a shopping trip with his wife in the afternoon constituted the major portion of Jack Dempsey's day. Starting out early, the heavyweight champion jogged over five or six miles of road and returned to his camp at White Sulphur Springs.

After lunch, Mrs. Dempsey led him forth for a shopping tour of the stores, an expedition which covered the major portion of the afternoon and which may have been responsible for his absence at the race track today.

With his entire staff at hand, Dempsey planned to start intensive training tomorrow afternoon, when, at three o'clock, he goes into the ring for his first sparring match. His first two days at the training camp were spent in resting up and becoming acclimated.

HEAR INJUNCTION SEPT. 7

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Judge Clinton H. Givan, who kept attorneys in the Jack Dempsey-Chicago Coliseum club injunction case waiting his arrival in Superior court all day yesterday finally arrived in the court room today and granted a continuance of the case until August 20. On that date he will hear arguments on the jurisdiction of the court. If the attorneys fail to question his right to try the suit a hearing on the petition for an injunction will be held Sept. 7.

The Chicago Coliseum club, which claims to hold Dempsey's contract to fight Harry Wills, Negro challenger, seeks to restrain Dempsey from meeting any other boxer in advance of an engagement with Wills.

BADGER FIGHT FANS ENTHUSED OVER MITCHELL

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Outdoor boxing will continue in Milwaukee, according to announcement of promoters today, who are seeking Tommy Freeman of Cleveland, for a bout with Pink Mitchell, junior welterweight champion, for early in September.

Mitchell regained the regard of Milwaukee boxing followers in a slashing outdoor match with Tommy White of Forth Worth, Texas, Thursday night when the local man exhibited a fighting disposition never before shown Milwaukee fans and won easily.

Mitchell's next bout is against Georgie Ward at Boyle's Thirty Acres, Aug. 20. The match was taken, according to his manager, after a bout with Joe Dundee at Newark, N. J., was cancelled when Dundee fell victim to an infection.

Lincoln Fields Race Notes

BAGENBAGGAGE, at Lincoln Fields with the western division of Edward R. Bradley's stable, is recovering from a leg injury and may be ready to race before the end of the Lincoln Fields meeting, according to Trainer William Hurley.

"Just as good, and probably better than Saratoga," remarked John Hertz, the taxicab magnate, during the running of yesterday's Lincoln Fields program. It was his first visit to the new course as he returned from Saratoga late last week.

Boot to Boot and a half dozen other Idle Hour farm horses are expected to arrive from Saratoga early this week.

When Myra M. galloped in front all the way in the first race yesterday, beating a cheap field, she established herself as one of the most consistent platers to race in Chicago this season. All her victories have been scored handily.

Followers of C. E. Durnell's horses made a cleanup when his 2 year old, The Hovel, won the second race in a stirring finish with Parmelee, but they did not do so well when they tried to make Bolton win the Kenwood stakes. After leading for a time, he dropped out of the picture late in the race.

Firetoma gave his followers heart failure in the last race when he was far back until the turn to the stretch. Then Jockey Barnett brought him up with a rush, passing one horse after another and beating Maxie by a nose in the final strides.

Seventeen horses, some of which will figure prominently in the Lincoln Fields racing, were brought to Chicago from Latonia yesterday by William Perkins, the colored trainer. The shipment included Little Visitor, Florence Mills, Phil Photo, Gay Hallie, Ragtime, General Haldeman, Padona, Buttons, and Marion Elizabeth. The Perkins horses are quartered at Washington Park.

FEEHAN LOSES TO HILDEBRAND

Feehan suffered its first setback in the west division of the Knights of Columbus baseball league yesterday when Hildebrand trimmed the section leaders 6 to 2. Lawrence, with a double and a triple, and Schultz, whose hitting in the pinches featured, were chiefly responsible for Feehan's defeat. RING SHOWS TO BE HELD TUESDAY AND THURSDAY

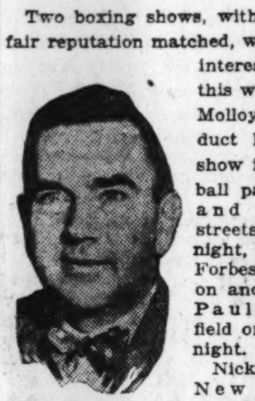
Molloy Stages First Card, Forbes the Other.



GEORGE BLAKE.
[La Barba's Manager]

Two boxing shows, with fighters of fair reputation matched, will draw the interest of fans this week. Mique Molloy will conduct his second show in the baseball park at 74th and Aberdeen streets tomorrow night, and Harry Forbes will put on another at De Paul university field on Thursday night.

Nick Quagerelli, New York 130 pounder, and Eddie Speaks of Louisville will mingle in the windup of Molloy's show. The former can hit with his right hand and the latter is only a fairly hard hitter but a clever boxer. To all appearanes both are in excellent condition.

While the Quagerelli-Speaks bout is advertised as the feature, the six round semi-windup between Paul Allen and Joe Medill, local featherweights, is creating a lot of interest. A fast match is expected.

Peters Battles Gonzales.

The other bouts will bring together Ollie O'Neill and Jackie London, Ernie Peters and Ferdinand Gonzales, Hy Gottfreed and Mickey Kerst, Joe Miller and Jim Logas, and Joe Patz and Frankie Hall. The show will open at 8:15 o'clock and popular prices will prevail.

A double windup will feature the bill at De Paul university field. Ever Hammer, local lightweight who stopped Tony Sanders in the last show, will go to the post against Ted Blatt of St. Paul and Midget Smith and Archie Bell, New York bantamweights, clash in the other. Tommy Logan and Shifty Logan, local 147 poundtrs, meet in one of the other ten rounders and Lou Perreth and Ray Olcott, lightweights, in another.

Cubs Park Receipts $44,145.

The receipts of Jim Mullins' show at Cubs' park Friday night totaled $44,145. The paid attendance was a little over 10,000. Rosenberg, the bantamweight champion who was held to a draw by Joey Sangor of Milwaukee, was given $7,850 and Sangor, $2,500. Fidel La Barba, the flyweight title holder, who outpointed Emil Paluso of Salt Lake city, took down $5,710 and his opponent $2,000.

La Barba made a decidedly favorable impression upon local fans. Leo P. Flynn, manager of Paluso, declared La Barba is the best flyweight since the days of Jimmy Barry and he will not be surprised to see La Barba the bantamweight champion within the next few years.

O. W. Huncke, chairman of the boxing commission, was well satisfied with the conduct of the show and spectators. The chairman believes a few more such well conducted affairs will place boxing on a firm footing in the state.

Sangor Fights Thursday.

Joey Sangor, who put up one of the best fights of his career by holding Rosenberg to a draw, will meet Ernie Fleigel at Minneapolis in a ten round bout Thursday night. Aug. 26 Joey will clash with either Chick Suggs or Datto Farr in Cleveland. Sangor returned to his home in Milwaukee yesterday afternoon.

Clyde Hudkins, manager of Ace Hudkins, the Omaha lightweight, has posted $2,500 with the New York boxing commission to bind a match between Hudkins and Sammy Mandell for the world's 135 pound title. Eddie Kane, manager of Mandell, asserted he intends to pay no attention to the matter as Sammy will be unable to fight until the latter part of next month because of an injured rib. The injury is proving so painful the champion has been ordered to stop playing golf.

BRITISH AMATEUR BILLIARD MEET CARDED JAN. 17

New York, Aug. 14.—[Special.]—The amateur billiard championship of England will be played Jan. 17 at Messrs. Thurston & Co.'s hall, Leicester square, London, according to a decision reached recently by the Billiards Control council. The winner of each qualifying section only will be allowed to compete in the competition proper, which will be 200 and 300 points.

EAST PROCLAIMS CHANCE SHOT AS BEST 2 YEAR OLD

Victory Over Scapa Flow Notable Triumph.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Eastern followers of the turf believe the champion two year old of the year has been uncovered at Saratoga in Chance Shot, a son of Fair Play-Quelle Chance, bred by the late August Belmont.

While Chance Shot was the result of carefully thought out mating and has shown every promise of being a great race horse, it took his impressive victory in the Saratoga special to convince the skeptical that he in any way measured up to championship possibilities. In this race he took the swift running Man o' War colt, Scapa Flow, into camp and administered a sound trouncing to him. Until this victory Scapa Flow was generally regarded as the best in the east.

Dr. Washington Good Colt.

In the west there has been no outstanding 2 year old, although there is a possibility that Dr. Washington, bay son of Cudgel-Miss Jemina, winner of his only start at the Washington Park track in Chicago in impressive style, may develop into a leader of the division.

Behind Chance Shot and Scapa Flow in the Saratoga special came Osmand, winner of the Flash stakes earlier in the season, but he, like Scapa Flow, was no match for the speedy son of Fair Play.

There are, of course, other great colts in the east, but on the showing so far Chance Shot looks much the best, although certain admirers of Scapa Flow were not satisfied with his defeat and have suggested another meeting between the pair. Chance Shot is owned by Joseph W. Widener.

Bradley Stable Divided

Termagant, a daughter of Whisk Broom II.-Mrs. Trubbel, and Overlook, a bay son of Wildair-Hanovia, may develop into first line stars if they race to their trials, but neither has gone to the post and until they prove their class in actual racing cannot be considered in the championship talk.

General Haldemann was hailed as a possible champion in Kentucky early in the season, but has dropped out of the limelight. Edward R. Bradley may have another title winner hidden away in his stable, which has been divided, one division racing at Saratoga and the other in Chicago. Most of Senator Camden's 2 year olds have failed to reach greatness and the same is true of others in Kentucky this spring and summer. There is always a chance, however, for the late summer or fall racing to develop a sensation.

Smith, Iowa Grid Leader, Injures Knee

Iowa City, Ia., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Football prospects at Iowa have been gloomy enough and now comes bad news which will plunge Coach Burton E. Ingwerson and his followers farther into the depths.

Capt. Paul E. Smith, relied upon to fill one of the end positions, has aggravated an old knee injury to the extent that he may be out for some time. Capt. Smith, while not a regular last year even though he was elected captain, is a good end and an ideal leader. Romey, a regular end last year, is lost by graduation.

Squad May Be Small.

Harry Rice changed off at one wing with Smith last year and he will probably be called upon to fill one of the end berths. But Smith was slated for the other one and material for the job is scarce. Iowa is lucky if forty men report for football and usually half of these are good enough to play. Then divide this in half again for the back field and about ten men remain from which to fashion a line.

Young, a former Cedar Rapids high school star, is a possibility. He played as a reserve end last year. Woodruff, once a Mason City high school player and a member of the yearling squad last year, is another prospect.

Hines Versatile Player.

Coach Ingwersen may be able to transform one of his tackles into a wingman. He has Don Hines, Iowa's all-around lineman who has worked in all positions in the forward wall but the end. Before he came to Iowa he was a back field star at Cedar Rapids.

It may be that Smith's injury is exaggerated and that it is only some of the old "ballyhoo." But Coach Ingwersen is in Europe and he cannot be suspected of perpetrating it.

PROVED ON THE PROVING GROUND

The De Luxe Coach, priced $1050 at Lansing, is illustrated from a life photo on the General Motors Proving Ground.

Under every conceivable condition of weather and temperature, speed and road, through the gruelling ordeal of constant grind, hour after hour, day-in day-out; over the steep hills, the straightaway, the paved, macadam and rough dirt roads that cover the 1,152 acres of General Motors Proving Ground . . . the new Oldsmobile Six has proved its worth!

Every condition of owner use has been anticipated and duplicated; the trials of miles and months met and surmounted . . . in advance.

Every added feature of the Oldsmobile Six . . . every improvement . . . every new detail, stands proved on General Motors proving ground—

Proved to provide still greater power, still longer life, still smoother performance—proved conclusively to constitute "the car you can recommend to your best friend"—

Proved more emphatically than ever to ask no favors, fear no road!

OLDSMOBILE SIX
PRODUCT of GENERAL MOTORS

1 in every 4

During the first six months of 1926 one in every four buyers of new automobiles bought a General Motors car. During 1925 the proportion was about one in five. During 1924 it was about one in six.

THIS steady addition of new friends for the products of General Motors has a double significance.

1. It is proof that the grouping of strong companies in one big family is economically sound. Large scale operations do make possible important economies in research, in purchasing, in manufacture, in financing, and in sales; and these economies do benefit the buyer, in greater value and lower costs. The public has recognized this principle and profited by it.

2. Increased public patronage involves increased obligation. General Motors is responsible for the welfare of its 152,000 employees and their families, its 20,000 dealers throughout the world, and—indirectly—for the 6,000 companies which furnish it with supplies and materials —at least a million men, women and children to whom its public good is a personal concern.

As the volume of production increases there must be a corresponding increase in the values offered. The new series of cars just presented does embody larger values; it is a direct reflection of the fact that more than 1,075,000 General Motors cars were sold at retail during the year just closed. The added quality has been built in where it counts most in comfort and safety and long life. With great pride we invite you to inspect these new General Motors cars.

MOTORDOM

Demand Wide Roads as Chief Feature of Emergency Plan

Champions of Average Car Driver Call for Showdown.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

WIDER roads—not new and narrow belt line pavements, nor new rights of way which boost the price of real estate at the expense of the Chicago automobile driver and license fee payer—must be the object of the emergency traffic relief program soon to be submitted to the Cook county board.

COL. W. G EDENS.

Any emergency money raised to relieve traffic congestion, whether it be by a county bond issue of $15,000,000, by a gasoline tax arranged to bring the money paid to the state by motorists back into the county or other financing methods, will have to be spent in road widening to be justified.

This is the consensus of opinion of veteran road builders, village councils, and highway engineers interviewed yesterday for their advice on the final plans for emergency road work now in the hands of the wider highways advisory committee appointed some time ago by President Anton J. Cermak of the county board.

"There is one and only one basic thing to do to relieve the intolerable congestion that keeps the average motorist of Chicago off the main highways entering Chicago," declared Col. William G. Edens, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement association and member of the committee. "That is to widen the existing main road pavements to 40 feet and to immediately provide the money for this work.

"Widening is the emergency need The county and the state have both the plans and the money to build the new roads needed and they are building them as fast as possible. What the automobile driver needs is pavement wide enough to get him into the country and back again safely and swiftly. He don't want to ride on belt roads. To reach some of the proposed new roads by-passing Chicago would take him two or three hours on a Sunday. He wants to get out of town on his old, familiar highway and to come back home again without battling every step of his way, and he deserves to do this because he paid for the laying of state pavements on these old main roads.

"The present emergency plan seems to overlook the need of road widening. It is concerned with the building of new narrow roads which for the most part are already a part of county and state building programs but are proposed to be shifted around and to be called 'emergency' roads. In the Cook county program, worked out by the best government and county engineers available and based on a traffic survey that cost $30,000 to complete, some 90 miles of road widening in Cook county is included. The emergency recommendation as it stands now calls for only about half of this mileage actually on the regular county program. It also calls for widening of all highway intersections to 40 feet. All intersections should be widened, but the widening must not stop there. There are some 300 miles of main pavements in this county that should be widened to serve present traffic.

"The Chicago motorist and the Chicago highway booster who has fought for years to carry out the Illinois bond issue system of highways like their famous old roads better than they do new ones. The old roads are the original and practical lanes of travel. They are an integral part of Chicago history and they are the best roads. When Pennsylvania tackled its congestion problem the state did not build new narrow belt lines to meet the emergency. It ordered the widening of the old Lincoln highway to 40 feet clear across the state. The New York state department did not consider that new narrow roads would stop traffic congestion. It ordered the widening of pavements on the famous old Boston Post road and Albany Post road. They meant something to every automobile driver in New York, just as the Dixie highway, Roosevelt road, Grant highway, Sheridan road and other friendly old highways mean everything to the Chicago automobile driver. Detroit concentrated its vast widening scheme to its old established routes of travel—Woodward avenue, Michigan road and others. Our old roads must be widened now and we must depend on competent engineers of the county, on the good roads board of commissioners of the county and on city, park and township agencies to build the new roads needed."

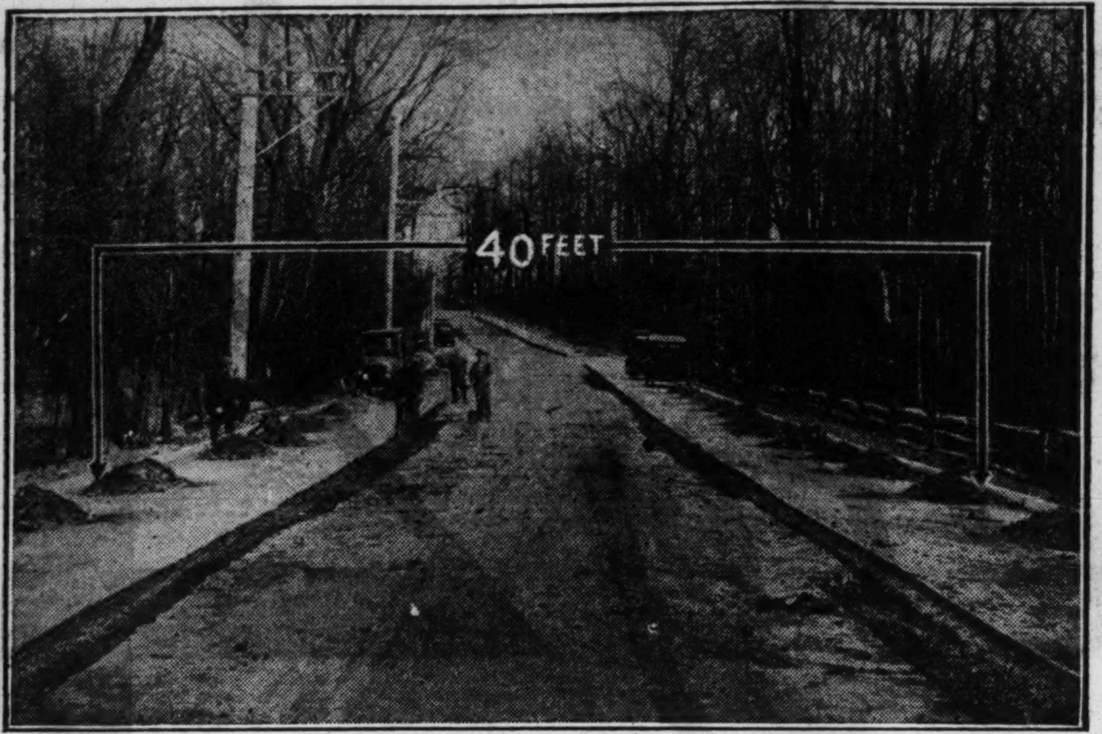
Maj. George A. Quinlan, Cook county superintendent of highways, declared that in no single instance has the building of a new county road relieved congestion on existing roads.

"Paving of new roads add to the jam on the old ones, if anything," he said. "A typical example lies along the Milwaukee avenue and Waukegan roads. When we built Waukegan road we believed that it would take congestion off Milwaukee avenue. It didn't, although both roads were absolutely necessary. Congestion on the main roads leading into Chicago will be relieved when these pavements are wide enough to care for both fast and slow moving traffic and when intersections are separated to obviate long waits by opposing lines of traffic. The old roads should be widened."

Other members of the committee also urged road widening as the principal object of the emergency program. The state highway members of the committee, Frank T. Sheets, chief engineer of Illinois, and Col. C. N. Miller, director of the department of public works and buildings, they remarked, have discouraged widening of existing pavements. They were responsible for cutting off some 20 miles of proposed widening on the first draft of the emergency plans, declaring that the state will build some new roads in the future with part of the $100,000,000 bond issue and that such future roads will eventually relieve congestion. A total of 150 miles of the old main pavements leading into Chicago are state property, built by state automobile license fees. Chicago and Cook county motorists pay about 30 per cent of all these state fees and have publicly demanded the widening of these roads.

Village boards in the Chicago district are preparing resolutions and demands for pavement widening. They were lead last week by the village of Berwyn where a mass meeting resulted in resolutions asking that Ogden avenue be widened among the first in any emergency program.

WIDENING FAMOUS HIGHWAY



John Motorist in Philadelphia will collect the family, crank up the flivver, and head out into the country today, with the pleasant knowledge that he can bowl along this 40 foot pavement on the famous old Lincoln highway without suffocating behind a single crawling line of traffic. The Pennsylvania state highway department has widened this and other stretches of the Lincoln across the state to carry four moving lines of automobiles. This view shows how concrete shoulders were added to the old and narrow bituminous pavement to stop traffic congestion. [Photo from Penn State Highway Dept.]

Narrow Roads Cost More than Highway Widening, Say Experts

CHICAGO and Cook county vehicles travel 990,000 miles every week day over the paved highways leading into Chicago, according to the official estimate of government and county observers.

Delays because these roads are only 18 feet wide instead of 40 feet and because of bottle necks and traffic congestion cost operators of these vehicles a minimum of $3,000,000 a year.

To reach this conservative figure of actual traffic loss, engineers assumed that the average speed on county pavements about Chicago should be 20 miles an hour and assumed that each vehicle loses but 4 minutes each hour because of congestion. This daily loss amounts to 3,300 vehicle hours. The value of this lost time in gasoline, wear and tear and delay of passengers is at least $3 an hour or $9,900 a day. On the basis of 300 working days, the loss amounts to $2,770,000.

This loss does not include the serious delays on Sundays and holidays when 323,000 vehicles use the pavements as compared to 81,805 on week days, according to the government traffic counts. Compute your own loss of time and money on Sunday!

The engineers further estimate that narrow and rough pavement on Halsted street costs motorists using that entrance to Chicago $2,100 a day or $630,000 a year. They add that it is cheaper to widen pavements at once at a cost of $50,000 a mile than to ignore the dangerous and expensive congestion situation.

Emmerson Shows How Motor Fees Pay Road Bonds

ILLINOIS has approximately 5,600 miles of paved highways. The construction of these roads was financed by automobile owners of the state, who are paying in $13,000,000 annually to meet interest charges and pay the principal on bond issues and for maintenance of the roads.

"Since 1917, when the plan for applying automobile fees to highway bond issues was worked out," Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson says, "the state has lifted itself out of the mud. Instead of being one of the most backward states in road improvement as it was then, it is now recognized as one of the most advanced.

"When we first began discussing this legislation we were collecting only a little over a million dollars a year in automobile fees and there was grave doubt as to whether or not the fees would take care of the interest and principal of the proposed $60,000,000 bond issue in the twenty years allowed.

"Since that time we have collected more than $62,000,000 in fees and not only are paying the interest and amortizing the indebtedness on the original bond issue but have assumed a $100,000,000 bond issue.

"The automobilists of Illinois, without question, are getting more for their money than are the owners of motor vehicles in most other states. Every cent of the fees goes directly into the highway fund."

Emmerson points out, however, that the excellence of the hard roads increases the hazard of driving because a few reckless drivers use them as speedways.

Grant Highway Detour.

On account of paving of the West Galena avenue hill at Freeport, a detour has been established at Stephenson street and Galena avenue on the Grant highway. The detour is west on Stephenson street to Globe avenue. This is a brick and dirt street. Earth portion has been freshly graded and is in good condition. In case of rain, however, it will be bad. The state highway department will keep a truck at the detour when necessary to pull cars through in case they become stalled. The highway will be closed for about six weeks.

Replacement Market.

Intensive studies by automobile manufacturers show that approximately 1,900,000 automobiles will this year be junked on account of old age, accidents, and other causes.

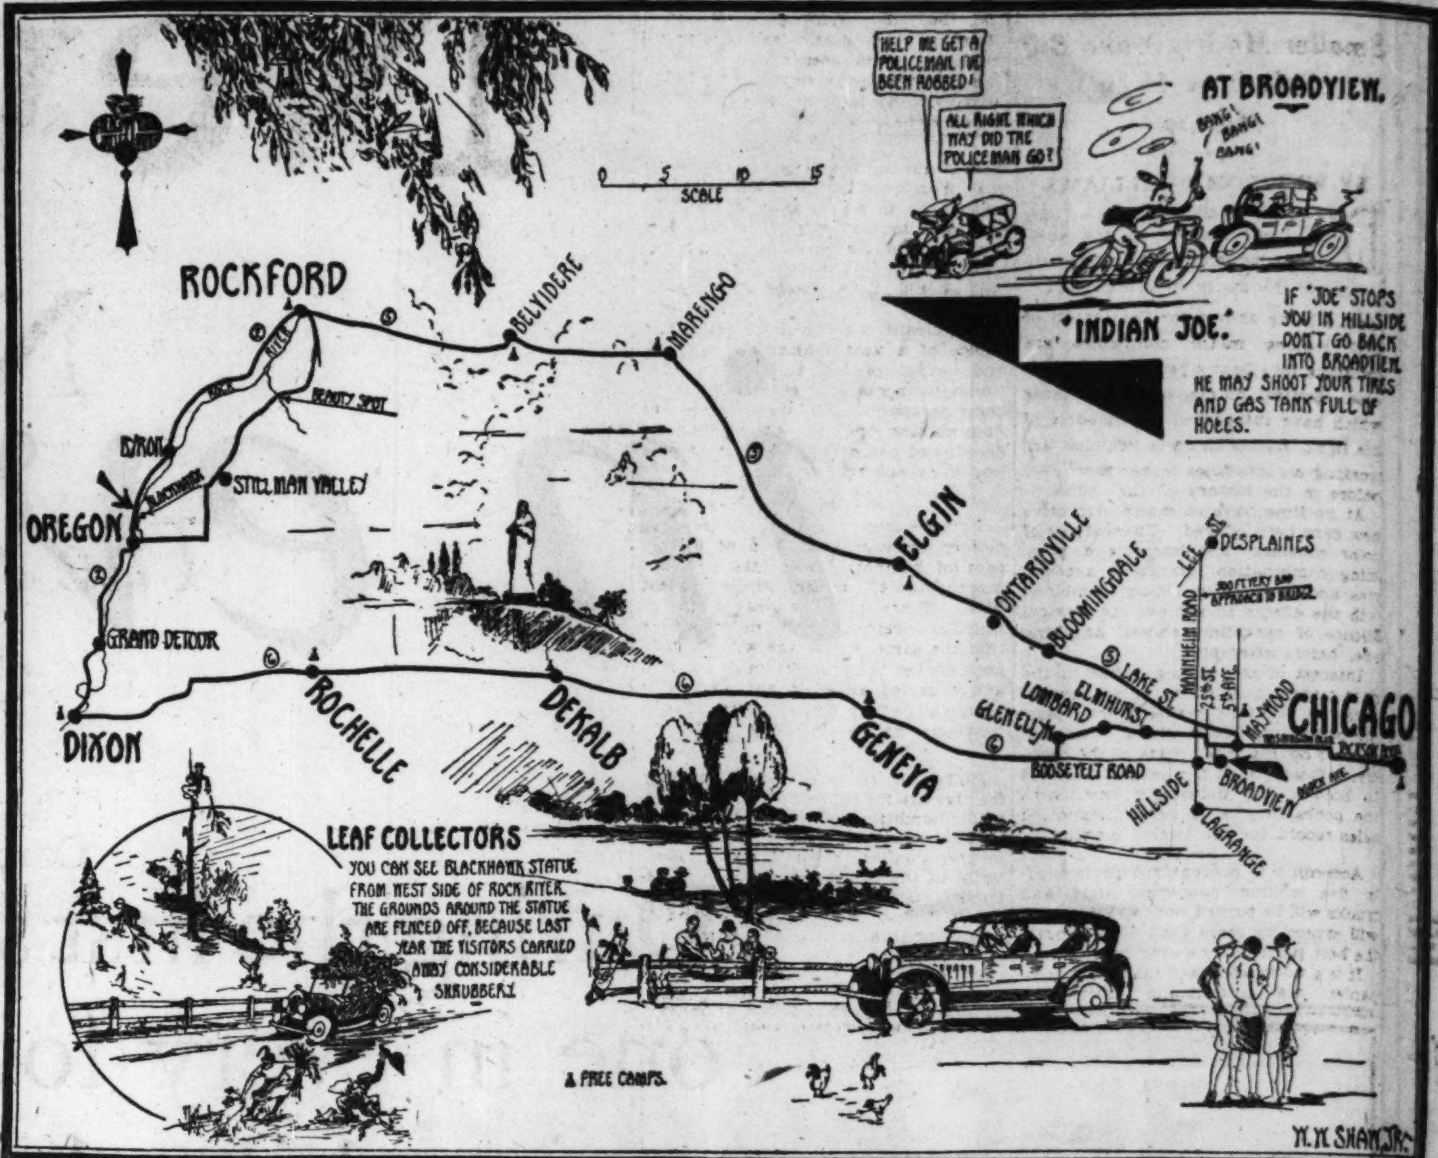
Further estimates indicate that the number released from service will rapidly increase from year to year, and in 1930 2,900,000 will have been declared useless.

This indicates that the present rate of production will not be required to slow down to any noticeable extent due to the arrival at the motor vehicle "saturation point."

Even now manufacturers are planning their production in the ratio of the number of car owners to the population.

TRIBUNE·TOURS

XX.—THE BLACK HAWK CIRCLE TOUR



FEW week-end pilgrimages in the Chicago touring district can compare to this popular swing through 200 miles of the best motoring country in northern Illinois. Excellent pavements—with the exception of the state's narrow and congested lanes entering Chicago—offer ideal going, with the beautiful Fox and historic Rock river valleys as features of the trip. Camp Grant, near Rockford; the Black Hawk statue near Oregon, and seven interesting cities en route add to the joys of the trip.

Leaving Chicago the preferred route is via Washington boulevard and Lake street, following the Grand highway-Illinois route 5 to Rockford. Optional routes south through the Rock river valley are shown, with the return trip over the Lincoln highway and Roosevelt road, avoiding rough pavement and the Broadview speed trap by using the St. Charles road east from Glen Ellyn.

Moon Anniversary.

As a feature of its twentieth birthday celebration, the Moon Motor company has announced production of the new "Jubilee Six-Sixty," a European type job each in coach, roadster and phaeton models.

A Bicycle Is Transportation

If all one is buying is transportation, why not buy a bicycle? You won't have to worry about it either. You can park it in the hall or take it upstairs in the elevator.

You could stay alive by eating frankfurters or bananas and drinking water but we believe some people want to do more than exist and we also believe some people want more than mere transportation.

Therefore, we offer the Auburn 8-88, powered by an eight-cylinder motor that is second to none in performance; a chassis with a wheelbase of 129 inches, insuring comfort and roadability; a steering gear of the cam and lever type that responds to the slightest twist of the wrist and makes you end a long day of driving without any arm fatigue; a body of low design that has no side-sway; seats and back of Marshall springs—the highest type cushion construction covered by high-grade mohair. All these we offer because we believe there are many people who still want chicken dinners and dessert with their meals and individuality in their homes and their clothing.

The proof that we are right is in our phenomenal growth when it was possible for us to sell as many cars in four and a half months of 1926 as we sold in the entire year of 1925, or in excess of eleven million dollars worth of motor cars.

See the new Auburn—drive it—if it does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy.

Five Million Car Year Looms Ahead of the Auto Industry

Smaller Models Make Big Splash in 1926 Market.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—As interest in the automobile industry continues to center in the many new lines and models being shown for the season of 1927 leading motor companies are swinging into heavy production schedules. Several plants, especially those which have introduced new models of the light, European style vehicles, are working on schedules larger than ever before in the history of the industry.

At no time have so many attractive new cars been offered. The variety of color schemes, upholstery and trimming combination, luxurious accessories and comfort in riding, combined wth the effects to achieve mechanical silence of operation, exceed anything ever before attempted.

Interest of the buying public in the new models and its desire to investigate the different makes before placing orders, combined with a steady increased buying in all parts of the country, indicates that the year is destined to become the industry's best, with the probability of a new, unexpected sales record for the twelve months.

According to present prospects nearly five million passenger cars and trucks will be turned out in 1926, which will exceed by more than 600,000 units the best performance ever recorded.

It is a noticeable fact that more companies are introducing their new models during the second half of the year than ever before. This method is sure to increase sales during the later months, and with production during the first six months at approximately 2,450,000 vehicles, the second half should show an output equally as large.

The closed car continues to be the choice of a vast majority of buyers, and output of the all-year car continues to increase as replacements become necessary. A few companies are now making open models only as ordered, and percentage of their production is exceedingly small.

Output during recent years has closely followed the ratio of 53 per cent of business during the first six months and 47 per cent during the last half. There is little reason to be found in present conditions to believe that the same percentage will not hold good during the present season, and an active period ahead is anticipated by practically every manufacturer of both passenger cars and trucks.

Eighty per cent of the demand today for cars are for those that meet modern traffic conditions. In other words cars that can easily be handled and parked in the smallest possible space, especially in the congested, downtown districts. Coupled with these requirements is also the insistent demand in recent months for cars economical, not only in price, but in operation. This trend for low priced, efficient, economical transportation is very pronounced.

NEW GATEWAY

The improvement of Torrence avenue from the Homewood-Lansing road south to the Lincoln highway has been completed. That portion between the Glenwood-Dyer road and the Lincoln highway is open for traffic, but the Glenwood-Homewood-Lansing road stretch has not been opened. When opened it will give an improved road from Ninety-fifth street to the Lincoln highway.

Causes of Motor Accidents Shown in Safety Survey

Contesting Right of Way Chief Reason for Crashes.

WHAT causes automobile accidents? How can they be prevented? These are the two big questions that received the consideration of the second national conference on street highway safety at its Washington meeting. Studies are still being made in more than 100 American cities which are reporting their monthly accident experiences regularly to the National Safety council. The summed up experience of the entire country is probably different from the individual experiences of cities.

Here is what motorists throughout the nation were doing during the last year when their machines became involved in accidents that caused the deaths of more than 21,000 men, women and children:

Contesting for the right of way caused more crashes than any other circumstance.

That exceeding the speed limit is dangerous is shown by the fact that this is second on the list.

Driving on the wrong side of the road resulted in thousands of accidents in which people lost lives, limbs and property.

Failure to give the driver behind the proper signals was another outstanding cause of crashes.

Cutting left corners and cutting in and backing helped to add to the toll.

Thousands of motorists who drove off the roadway were involved in accidents.

Hundreds of automobile drivers became involved in jams with street cars as a result of passing trolleys that were standing and being struck by vehicles approaching on the other side.

Several hundred machines continued running without drivers after their owners had left them before taking the necessary precautions to see they were parked securely.

Driving through safety zones resulted in hundreds of accidents.

Passing on the wrong side and passing on a curve or hill also proved the need of caution and courtesy.

Thousands were intoxicated while behind the wheel.

Conflicting habits, confusion and fatigue, following other cars too closely, defect in vehicles, inexperience and mental and physical incompetency were among the other conditions responsible for automobile accidents.

News and Views of the Auto Trade

STRIKING exhibitions of the newly refined advanced six and light six models, fresh from the Kenosha and Racine plants, feature the celebration today of the tenth anniversary of the founding of Nash Motors. Both lines of models are powered by the newly developed seven crankshaft motors which engineers declare mark the height of development won by the company in its decade of manufacturing. During the first half of this year, the anniversary announcement states, Nash sales reached a total of 78,133 cars, as contrasted to a total sale of 96,121 cars in 1925.

No drastic changes are noted in the new models announced by Packard last week, but a marked increase of power and scores of refinements in both power plants and bodies make the offerings unusually interesting. Added comforts for both the long distance and the local driver are featured in both the six and eight models.

Motorists concerned in trying everything new in the automotive field are expected to take immediate advantage of the Hupp Motor Car corporation's announcement of a demonstration fortnight with the public invited to visit Hupmobile showrooms, examine the new straight eight and enjoy demonstration trips.

Jordan has adopted the Fedco number plate system for use on all models turned out of the big Cleveland plant. He declared yesterday that it is high time automobile manufacturers came to the aid of police departments and insurance companies in cutting down the $250,000,000 worth of cars stolen annually in the United States, and in making both the theft and disposal of stolen automobiles extra hazardous for organized thief rings.

The Oakland company last week announced a new landau sedan as an addition to its Pontiac six line.

Improved body lines and new colors, together with motor refinements, feature the new line of Hudson models now on display.

Paris Offers Badge of Honor for Best Operation of Taxis

PARIS, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Prudent and polite taxicab drivers are to have their merits recognized by a badge under a scheme inaugurated by L'Auto, which has obtained the approval of the big taxicab companies.

Each passenger is requested to note his chauffeur's ability and whether he toots carefully at crossings, slows up when he ought to and attempts no acrobatic stunts with tram cars and other vehicles.

When a driver has been cited several times in this way he will receive a distinctive badge to wear on his arm or fix on his windshield.

PERFECT BRAKES.

To solve present traffic difficulties, which are gradually causing congestion in large cities, automotive engineers are being called on to improve and perfect brakes, signal devices, and illumination.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to the Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune. For today's question Mrs. L. S. Goesswein, 4411 N. Winchester avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

THE QUESTION.

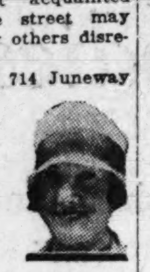
What do you consider the most dangerous street intersection in Chicago not yet protected by "stop and go" signals?

Where Asked.

Lake street and Wabash avenue.

The Answers:

Miss Elizabeth Schuck, 7410 Paxton avenue, cashier — I believe that the intersection of Woodlawn avenue and Sixty-first street is the most dangerous corner I know. There is a stop sign there but at night drivers not acquainted with the street may easily miss it and many others disregard it.



Mrs. Glen E. Holmes, 714 Juneway terrace, housewife — I think the intersection of Diversey parkway, Racine and Lincoln avenues is by far the most dangerous corner in Chicago. These three streets each carry heavy and fast traffic and occasionly they are protected by a traffic policeman. They should be protected by lights.

D. F. Hulbert, 5342 Crystal street, salesman — The west drive and Washington boulevard in Garfield park is a dangerous spot for motorists who travel at top speed. It is a case of the best man and heaviest car having the right of way here and it is a wonder there are no more accidents at the intersection.

George A. Norgan, 1659 Pratt boulevard, salesman—In my drives I find the corner of Montrose and Broadway is about as bad as any heavily used intersection without lights. This corner is seldom protected by a traffic policeman either.

W. J. Foster, 5023 North Mozart, purchasing agent—The worst spot I recall is in Washington boulevard just west of the club house in Garfield park. Here the boulevard meets a street carrying north and south traffic, and each opposing driver tries to beat the other across.

Chicago Trails Improve as New Pavements Open

Detours and Improvements Listed for Motor Fans.

A TEMPORARY bridge was erected on the Dixie highway at Milford and opened for service last week. This eliminates the 5-mile detour which has been in existence for a few days. A detour has been reported at Robinson because of street construction. Another detour is reported for 2 miles east and into Lawrenceville.

Contract has been awarded and construction work begun through Geneseo on Ill.-7. Ill.-10 at the west entrance to Danville is as bad as ever for a rough half mile. New city and state pavement will remedy this in a few weeks.

There is a three mile dirt detour around Galva on Ill.-28 because of construction going on through the city. The detour at present is very muddy and rough, according to the touring bureau of the Chicago Motor club.

There is a short detour in Bicknell, on Indiana route 12, owing to city construction work. Careful driving is advisable at approaches to the temporary bridge at 2 miles north of Gosport. Ind.-14 is under construction from Leopold to St. Croix, and motorists are advised to avoid it because of no good detour roads.

Mich.-16, between Portland and Grand Rapids, was opened for travel on Aug. 7. It is now paved road from Lansing to Grand Rapids. This completes the last stretch across the state on Mich.-16 from Detroit to Muskegon. Mich.-23, between Ypsilanti and Saline, was to have been opened Aug. 14. This will give continuous concrete from Detroit to Somerset Center. West of Somerset Center the road to Coldwater is still under construction and will not be opened until a later date. Mich.-60 is under construction between Niles and Cassopolis. A 16 mile gravel detour is in effect.

Motorists are advised to detour west of Iowa City to Williamsburg to avoid Ia.-7 while it is being paved from Iowa City to the Iowa county line. A detour has been created 6 miles south of Cedar Rapids on Ia.-40 while the road is closed for paving.

Safe Drivers.

That taxicab drivers can avoid accidents has been demonstrated in Cleveland, O., where 132 chauffeurs completed a three months' period without a single crash. This record secured a reduction during the first month of 61 per cent over the previous month in the cost of accidents. The accident prevention campaign was staged with the coöperation of the Cleveland branch of the National Safety council. The careful drivers were given cash prizes, banquets and theater parties and white gold signet rings.

Auto Association Demands Courtesy for Motorists

ARRESTS for minor infractions of traffic regulations could well be reduced in number without weakening the effectiveness of traffic control, a statement from national headquarters of the American Automobile association declares.

Pointing out that a timely warning to motorists ultimately is of more benefit to the individual and the community instead of wholesale arrests Thomas P. Henry, president of the A. A. A., urges moderation in enforcement of minor regulations and greater severity in dealing with the more serious offenses that involve personal safety.

"There is nothing to be gained by haling hundreds and thousands of motorists into court on the slightest pretext," he declared. "Traffic regulations were meant to bring order into the use of public thoroughfares and not to make respectable citizens feel that they had in them the makings of desperate criminals.

"Every violation of the traffic regulations is not worth taking a motorist into court. There are slight infractions that best can be disposed of by a warning on the part of the officer. Every one is likely to be absentminded at times and that is the chief factor in slight variations from the practice a motorist is legally required to follow. A warning in such instances probably will have much more effect than an arrest. The motorist will be more likely to remember what he has done wrong and avoid it in the future."

Cruising Tour.

Approximately 200 cars with an average of three persons to the car left Battle Creek and Adrian, Mich., last Tuesday morning for a "cruising tour" to the Pacific northwest, down the coast to southern California and back to Michigan over the southern route.

Last Link Ready in Scenic Road of Canadian West

COMPLETION of a 100 mile stretch of highway between Hope and Ashcroft, B. C., has forged the final link in the 1,500 mile motor road across western Canada from Winnipeg to Vancouver, according to an announcement by A. W. Campbell, dominion commissioner of highways.

"The new link follows the Fraser river cañon through some of the most picturesque scenic country in the west," said Campbell. "The roadbed is built over part of the old Cariboo trail along which wagon trains from Vancouver passed up to the Peace river country in the days of pioneer settlement.

"Beginning at Winnipeg, the highway stretches across the prairie provinces, passing through Portage La Prairie, Regina, Moose Jaw, and Lethbridge. It crosses the Rocky mountains by way of Crows Nest pass and winds down the west slope through Field, following the Kootenay river, thence through the Okanagan to Kamloops, and on down the Fraser river valley to Vancouver.

"Thousands of motorists from the United States, it is expected, will tour the new highway this summer. It is accessible from the Pacific coast as well as from the middle west. The highway connects with the Banff-Windermere road, a part of the 6,500 mile scenic lariat which touches three national parks in Canada and seven in the United States."

Need Playgrounds.

Playgrounds aid children, motorists, and mothers, says a bulletin issued by the National Safety council, which hopes more communities will provide additional recreation centers for youngsters. These safety havens take the children off the streets, enable mothers to have more time to themselves, and lighten some of the worries with which every automobile driver is burdened.

UNITE EUROPEAN STEEL AGAINST U. S. AND BRITAIN

Paris Parley Drafts Plan for Big Combine.

PARIS, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Negotiations for the formation of a continental steel and iron trust have been virtually completed. The agreements will be submitted to the industrial interests of France, Belgium, Germany and Luxemburg, who are concerned with them, for approval.

It is not expected that the agreements will be signed before Sept. 15, because of a difference in opinion between the French and Belgians on some minor details which will be discussed before ratification by all the groups involved.

The conversations which have been carried on here for the last two days follow preliminary feelers during the last two years with the object of forming a combine that will be able to compete with American and British iron and steel producers in foreign markets. The negotiators are particularly interested in South America and the orient, as it is admitted that the British hold the colonial trade and that the United States is supreme in Canada.

Germans Welcome Trust.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—(AP)—German financial writers today welcomed the progress that has been made at Paris in the creation of a continental iron and steel agreement apportioning shares of production in the industry to various countries.

They predict that the pacts will afford protection against over production and ruinous competition and will permit an industry which is felt to have become convulsed by the various peace treaties to return to coördinated conditions of production.

"Such Franco-German coöperation also will serve to ameliorate political and other acerbities," the Boersen Courier says.

Ruhr Optimistic.

The Rhenish Westphalian industrialists are most optimistic regarding the development of the Ruhr trade generally and express the conviction that even speedy termination of the British miners' strike would not have an immediate effect on the favorable position.

They say that the technical supremacy and superior organization of the Ruhr over British industry will make itself felt on the international markets, especially in view of the continental steel agreement and the cessation of the Franco-Belgian dumping competition.

Contracts for export coal have been concluded for several months hence and the demand for household coal in England and Germany, which it has been impossible to satisfy, owing to increasing requirements for industrial and shipping purposes, will further stimulate trade.

North German shipping circles say they expect that, with the termination of the British miners' strike, there will be record shipments of Ruhr coal to England at least for a further three months, as all stocks in England have been exhausted to satisfy the demand for bunker coal.

Fear Italy Will Suffer.

ROME, Aug. 14.—(AP)—The Paris negotiations for an iron and steel agreement between France, Germany, Belgium and Luxemburg are exciting extensive comment in the Italian press, which fears that Italy will suffer from it.

"It is an agreement which may become an alliance dominating European metallurgy," says Giornale d'Italia. "We expect either a policy of very low prices, intended to inundate the Italian market, or a policy of high prices, rendering purchases abroad extremely difficult or impossible for the Italian industry. Either case presents a new menace for Italian industry requiring immediate defensive measures."

FIND BOLT LOOSE AT SWITCH WHERE WRECK KILLED 6

New York, Aug. 14.—[Special.]—While public authorities and railroad officials coöperated in investigating the cause of the wreck last night at Calverton of a Long Island passenger train in which six were killed and eleven injured, an examination of the tracks today showed the large nut of a bolt on the switch to be missing. Efforts are now being made to find out whether it had been tampered with.

The two engines pulling the train, a combination baggage car and smoker and a Pullman coach were derailed in crossing the switch. The engineer and fireman of the first engine were immediately killed. The engineer and fireman of the second engine, with only an instant's warning, leaped to safety.

The others who were killed or seriously injured were in the first two cars. Mrs. George A. Shuford, whose two children were killed, was pinned under a piece of steel for five hours before workers with oxyacetylene torches freed her. She died today in South Hampton hospital.

Mrs. Shuford's Negro maid was similarly imprisoned. A surgeon found it necessary to amputate the maid's leg before she could be extricated.

Wife Slayer Is Captured After Four Days' Chase

West Frankfort, Ill., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—After eluding capture since Monday, George Marks, wife slayer, was arrested at Morganfield, Ky., late yesterday, and is now in the Franklin county jail. Marks killed his wife, from whom he was estranged, when she called at his rooms in West Frankfort last Monday night. He admitted the killing.

One Killed, One Hurt by Fall of Piledriver

Evansville, Ind., Aug. 14.—King Tichenor, aged 35, of Newburg was instantly killed and Carl Gentry, aged 30, also of Newburg, probably was injured fatally when a huge piledriver used at government dam No. 47 at Newburg broke today, crushing the men.

MRS. BERNICE DAY.

San Quentin, Cal., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Mrs. Bernice Lundstrom Day, the "acid bride" of Darby Day Jr., of Chicago, today entered the state penitentiary here as prisoner 42555 to serve a sentence of one to fourteen years for disfiguring with acid the wealthy young Chicagoan who since has been divorced from her.

Her mother, Mrs. Grace Lundstrom of Chicago, accompanied her daughter to the prison.

Mrs. Day was taken to the prison photographer, received an issue of gray cotton clothing and was given a physical examination by matrons. She was assigned to work as a waitress.

I. C. C. POSTPONES 6 CENT SLASH IN RATES ON GRAIN

Acts on Protest Made by West Shippers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Granting petitions of the Chicago Board of Trade and many other protestants, the interstate commerce commission today temporarily quieted a rising storm in the middle west by holding up the proposed six-cent reduction in rates on grain and grain products from the northwest to the east via the Minneapolis and St. Louis and the Soo line.

In the absence of action by the commission, the reduced rates would have become effective Aug. 25. They now stand suspended, pending investigation of the commission until Dec. 23.

The proposed cut is opposed by practically every grain market other than Minneapolis, as well as by the eastern roads.

Seek to Regain Place.

Back of the proposal for a reduction in rates is an effort on the part of Minneapolis millers and grain dealers to regain the relatively favorable position with respect to rates that they held prior to the war period.

At that time the difference between all rail rates, on the one hand, and the rail and lake rates, on the other, from Minneapolis to the east was 3 cents a hundred pounds in favor of the latter.

At present the difference is 16 cents via the cheaper lake and rail lines and 12 cents via the more expensive rail and lake lines. This widening of the advantage in favor of the lake and rail routes was caused, Minneapolis millers allege, by the disproportionate increases in all rail and the lake rates. If the 6 cent reduction becomes effective, the difference between the all rail rates and the lake and rail rates will be reduced to 10 cents via the cheaper lake and rail rates.

Under the prevailing rates, the tendency has been for grain to go through Duluth to Buffalo for milling, rather than to Minneapolis for milling and reshipment beyond. The Minneapolis and St. Louis would benefit from the reduction, because under such a reduced rate, grain, products would move from Minneapolis over its rails via Peoria, Ill., to the east and the Soo line would get similar business over its line via Chicago.

Eastern Roads Opposed.

The eastern railroads asked the commission to suspend the proposed reduction of six cents. They declared they advised the Minneapolis and St. Louis and the Soo line that they were unwilling to concur in the proposed change.

The Rutland-Lake Michigan transit company advised the commission that if the six cent reduction became effective, it would cease operation on Lake Michigan at once. This protestant claimed that the all rail rates proposed would be lower than the rail and lake rates.

SESQUI IS OPEN TODAY PENDING FINAL DECISION

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—(AP)—The sesquicentennial exposition, with its gladway features, will be open tomorrow as usual, pending a decision on the open Sunday question by the directors Monday night.

After the opinions by Judge Edwin O. Lewis and Thomas D. Finletter that operation of the sesqui with its paid admission and gladway was a violation of the law of 1794, Mayor Kendrick announced that the question was of such vital importance that the decision would be left to the 55 directors.

Officials of the exposition's administrative building said today there was some sentiment in the board to close the gladway, where most of the amusements are concentrated, on Sunday as a concession to the opponents of the Sabbath operation.

They felt, however, that the majority of the directors would decide to keep the gladway open until the proceedings brought by Attorney General Woodruff in Harrisburg were decided.

This 60 Line Want Ad Proved 57% Cheaper Than a 20 Line Want Ad

("The More You Tell, The Quicker You Sell!")

Mr. W. E. Macfarlane,
Classified Advertising Manager,
Chicago Tribune,
Tribune Tower,
Chicago, Illinois.

My dear Sir:

I feel that you would be interested in knowing just what splendid results we have had from the use of Classified Advertising of "the more you tell the quicker you sell" type.

For a number of weeks we ran small twenty line ads of the usual bromidic type concerning a number of charming small homes of various kinds which we built at 6001-31 Navarre Avenue, Norwood Park, Illinois. I was very dissatisfied with results for two reasons;--one--that the ads did not seem to be pulling, and the other--that the small number of people that did come out were usually looking for typical bungalow type homes, rather than architecturally designed houses well under the $10,000 price class. It was then that I decided to enlarge my ads to about sixty lines, making them more personal in nature and giving a complete description of the houses, their construction and beauty, their cost and the surrounding property.

From the first large ad we ran we drew pretty nearly three hundred prospects that day. We sold one-half the houses and secured the names and addresses of sixty-four other good prospects. This was phenomenal, inasmuch as it rained until noon of that Sunday.

I was very surprised to find that our sales costs had dropped considerably since the discontinuance of our small ads. It goes without saying that we shall never return to the old idea in this office that a cheap ad is good policy. When the final sales costs are figured, the small ads are about 110% more expensive in actual dollars and cents.

My belief is, that the quickest way in which you can convince your advertisers in "the more you tell the more you sell" theory, is to have them try it just once.

In closing let me add that all our prospects were not Chicago people, as we have received letters concerning the above homes from Des Moines, Kansas City and South Bend, Indiana. The party who wrote us from Des Moines made a special trip to Chicago to see the houses on Tuesday and bought one for his occupancy in July.

Very truly yours,

Philip Crowen

IT is sometimes more economical to spend money than to save it. This principle applied to Want Advertising, could be stated thus:—"It is cheaper in dollars and cents to buy space for a Want Ad of the 'Tell More' type, even though that ad may be higher in price than the smaller, less effective type." For cost equals price divided by returns.

Time after time the truth of this principle is forcibly demonstrated to us by grateful advertisers who write in to The Tribune relating the comparative results they have had from Want Ads of both types.

"The More You Tell, the Quicker You Sell!"

The letter on the left tells the story of results received by Philip Crowen, builder, who recently changed his advertising policy, making all his Want Advertising conform to the Tell More principle. Following is a brief summary of results received by him from one of his first Tell More ads:

Summary

The Old Type Ad— 20 Line Sunday Want Ad:	The "Tell More" Ad— 60 Line Sunday Want Ad:	Comparative Costs:
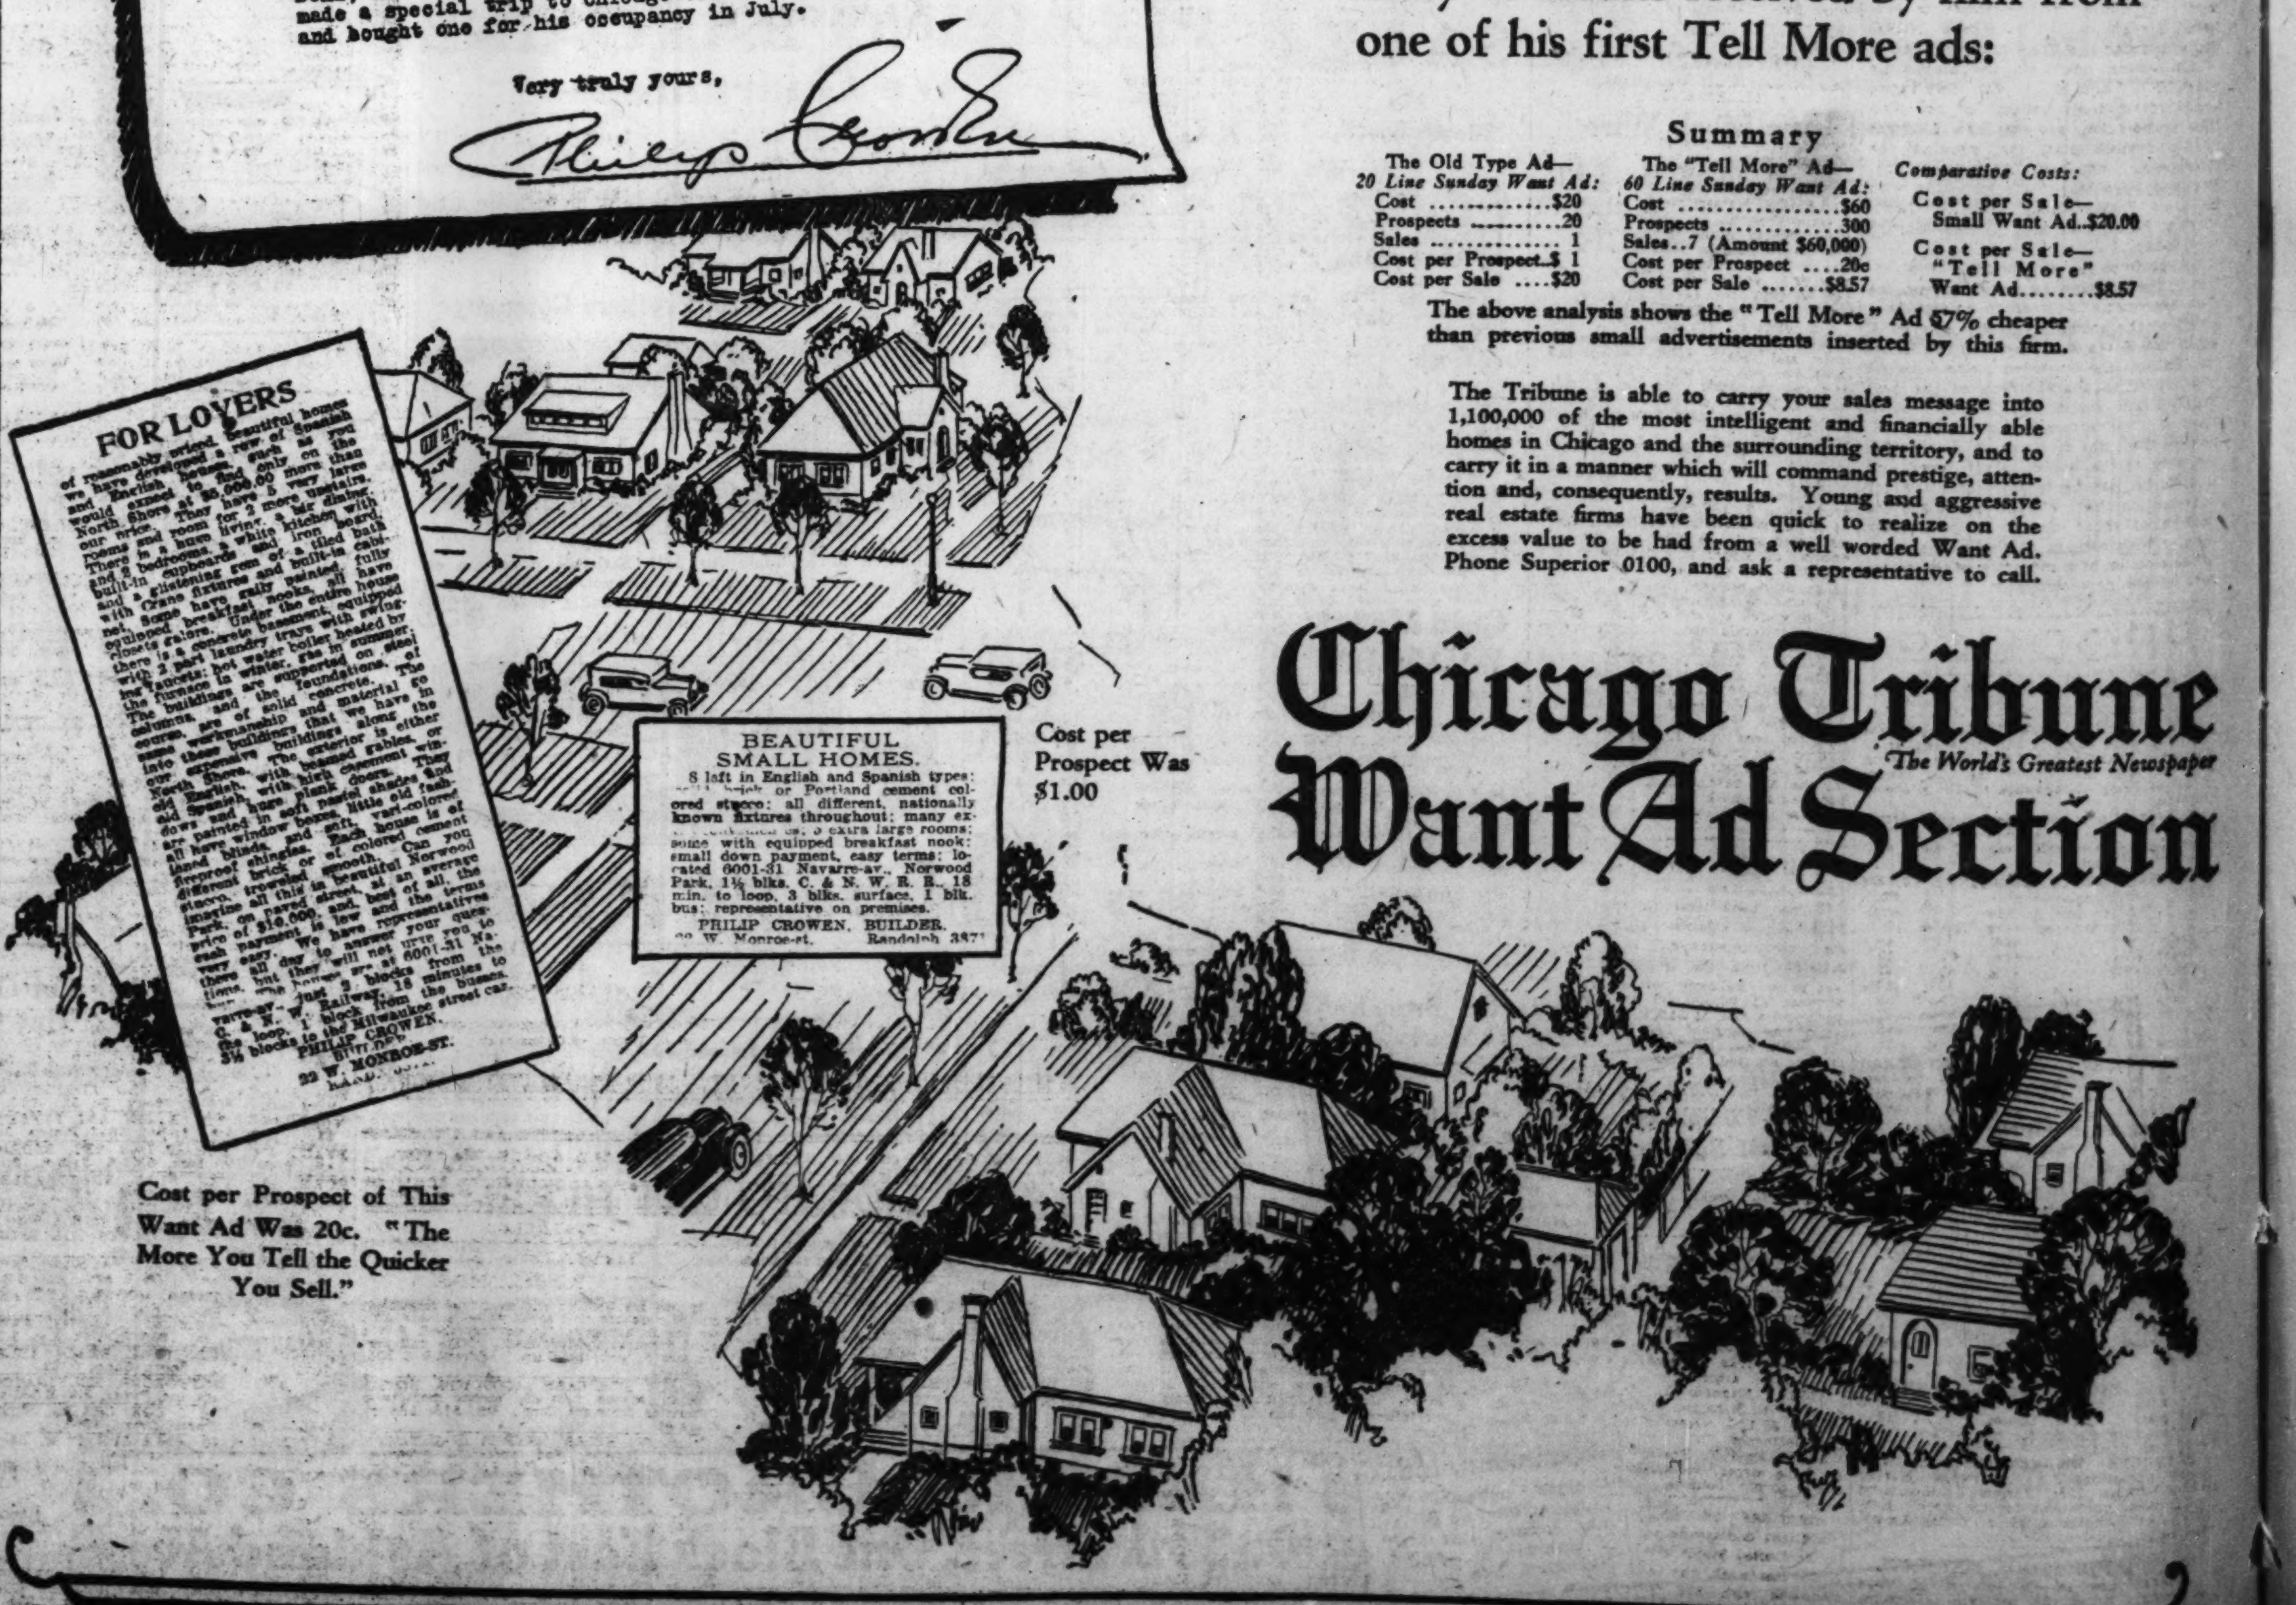
Cost $20	Cost $60	Cost per Sale— Small Want Ad..$20.00
Prospects 20	Prospects 300
Sales 1	Sales..7 (Amount $60,000)	Cost per Sale— "Tell More" Want Ad........$8.57
Cost per Prospect..$ 1	Cost per Prospect 20c
Cost per Sale $20	Cost per Sale $8.57

The above analysis shows the "Tell More" Ad 57% cheaper than previous small advertisements inserted by this firm.

The Tribune is able to carry your sales message into 1,100,000 of the most intelligent and financially able homes in Chicago and the surrounding territory, and to carry it in a manner which will command prestige, attention and, consequently, results. Young and aggressive real estate firms have been quick to realize on the excess value to be had from a well worded Want Ad. Phone Superior 0100, and ask a representative to call.



FOR LOVERS

of reasonably priced beautiful homes we have developed a row of Spanish and English houses such as you would expect to find only on the North Shore at $5,000.00 more than our price. They have 5 very large rooms and room for 2 more upstairs. There is a huge living, a big dining and 2 bedrooms, a white kitchen with built-in cupboards and iron board, and a glistening gem of a tiled bath with Crane fixtures and built-in cabinet. Some have gaily painted, fully equipped breakfast nooks, all have closets galore. Under the entire house there is a concrete basement, equipped with 2 part laundry trays with swinging faucets; hot water boiler heated by the furnace in winter, gas in summer. The buildings are supported on steel columns, and the foundations, of course, are of solid concrete. The same workmanship and material go into these buildings that we have in our expensive buildings along the North Shore. The exterior is either old English, with beamed gables, or old Spanish, with high casement windows and huge plank doors. They are painted in soft pastel shades and all have window boxes, little old fashioned blinds, and soft, vari-colored fireproof shingles. Each house is of different brick or of colored cement stucco, troweled smooth. Can you imagine all this in beautiful Norwood Park, on paved street, at an average price of $10,000, and, best of all, the cash payment is low and the terms very easy. We have representatives there all day to answer your questions, but they will not urge you to buy. The houses are at 6001-31 Navarre-av., just 3 blocks from the C. & N. W. Railway, 18 minutes to the loop, 1 block from the Milwaukee street car, 3½ blocks from the busses.

"The World's Greatest Newspaper"

BUSINESS, SPORT FULL OF COLOR; RADICALS FADE

BY HARPER LEECH.

If good advice would make all men rich, there is no need for one to remain poor today.

The persistence of some poverty in the face of the present day barrage of economic information, is slightly puzzling. A new library list of commercial information services daily, weekly and monthly, received by the Crerar library, reveals that there are 252 such services, ranging in price from a few dollars up to $1,000 a year.

Then there are hundreds of trade association bulletins, scores of government information services, to say nothing of the trade press and the labors of us reporters of the financial pages.

People certainly are reading about business. That is first hand evidence that it retains its dramatic quality, and proof that it remains highly competitive. The close attention paid to sports, the deserved popularity of sporting pages, the wholesale building of race tracks, golf courses, and swimming pools, which strikes the traveler as the most characteristic American development today, all testify to the soundness of the breed, its hunger for conflict, which is the basis of all dramatic interest.

If sports of all sorts are in the aggregate becoming one of the greatest, if not the greatest of industries, we should be duly thankful, but the evidences of reader interest in business and economics are assurance that this quest for drama in sports is not due to a loss of interest in business life, or any drying up of the springs of enterprise becasue of overorganization, routine, or dullness due to machine methods.

Right now we seem to be living in an era marked by a loss of interest in politics and public affairs, because of the increased dramatic attractiveness of business and sport.

A public library crowd frequently gives interesting clews. At the Crerar, a notable feature is the large number of calls for scientific and technical texts by young men employed by great corporations. This is a result of the increased importance of research work in industry.

Another feature is the large number of steady students of the economic and statistical bulletins. Many of these readers are constant, year after year, and while some evidently are speculative gamblers of similar type to those who follow so religiously the racing form charts, others are evidently small investors and managers of small, independent enterprises.

The sociological, labor, socialistic and radical publications do not seem so eagerly read as in years past, and many deeply engrossed in such publications are of alien type, including some who appear to be students from the far east. Some years ago any public library reading room disclosed many young Americans, especially young women of the social worker type, devouring the literature of the uplift or the upheave.

Chicago's soap box center on the north side seems to have been stricken also by the anemia that has made the "tired radical" such a commonplace. There is still no lack of words, and Niagaras of disjointed ideas are in play every night—but, somehow, the old fire is lacking.

Even in this former lair of the flaming proletariat, one gets the hunch that the old spirit has been drowned in gasoline or smothered under deferred payments.

Nickel Plate Preferred to Get Vote in New Plan

New York, Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Concession of limited voting power to preferred stockholders in the new Nickel Plate Railroad company and elimination of the voting trust, as the means by which O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen would retain their control of the Van Ness corporation, are two new features in the revised plan for merging the Chesapeake and Ohio, Hocking Valley, Erie and Pere Marquette railroads with the New York, Chicago and St. Louis [Nickel Plate] railroad, it was learned here today.

As approved by the boards of directors of the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Pere Marquette, and as it awaits final action by the board of the Erie, the present Nickel Plate company, and the Hocking Valley the modified plan would give preferred shareholders of the new Nickel Plate company the right to elect three of the directors and common stockholders the right to name the remaining majority of the board. Only when and if dividend payments are defaulted for one year on the preferred stock are the holders of those shares to participate equally with owners of the junior stock in the election of a majority of the directors of the new company.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Fruit and melon trade on Saturday was fair, with good supplies and little change in prices. An average Saturday's trade was on in butter, eggs, and poultry, the only change in values being an advance of 1c in spring chickens.

In the potato market there was a firmer tone in cobblers, while Ohios were sold at recent figures. Arrivals were 117 cars, with 190 cars on track.

During the first seven months of 1926 the company each month has shown a considerable increase in sales over the record of 1925.

WALL STREET NOTES

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Aggressive buying in a large number of issues, which resulted in brisk advances ranging upward to 3 and 5 points, gave the curb market an unusually broad and active opening for a half holiday session at this season.

General Motors new, as would be expected, assumed leadership, opening with an overnight gain of 3⅜, at 142. The quotations then fluctuated from 141 to 143⅞. Celotex improved 3 points and pronounced strength appeared in most others of that group. Baking shares were inclined to falter after early advances. Stanley company rose to a new peak.

Oil shares were also in better demand and quotations in most instances approached the week's high figures. Vacuum moved up 1⅞ points, to 103⅞, and Standard Oil of Indiana rose steadily ½ of a point, selling to 64⅞. Gains ranging from 1 to 2 points were well distributed throughout the list. Engineers Mining slumped to a new low level, selling to 6⅛. Newmont Mining was a strong feature, selling up 2 points.

Bond trading was steadied by indications that recent increase in the federal reserve bank rate had caused no serious liquidation of investment obligations by banks and other large holders. Some encouragement was derived from the spectacular recovery of the stock market after the initial flurry of selling which followed the rate change.

Railroad liens shared to a limited degree the continued improvement in stocks of the carriers, based on the current high rate of freight traffic and indications that the northwestern roads were "turning the corner." Delaware and Hudson 5s, Northern Pacific 6s, Missouri Pacific general 4s, and Southern Pacific refunding 4s closed fractionally higher.

Skelly Oil convertible 6½s and Republic Iron and Steel 5½s, both rallying more than a point, were the outstanding strong features in the industrial group. Coincident with an advance of 1¼ points in Peruvian 7½s, to a new high record above par, reports gained circulation that a new loan of $15,000,000 or more would shortly be offered in this market. French, German and other European bonds drifted aimlessly.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ending Aug. 11, 1926, by 269 banks in 37 leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,275,457,000, a decrease of 8.2 per cent, compared with a week ago ($1,389,707,000). Compared with the corresponding week of last year ($1,141,333,000), an increase of 11.8 per cent was shown.

The Southern California Edison company has put in operation the largest steam turbine generator west of the Rocky mountains with a 50,000 kilowatt capacity. The new generator is in the Long Beach station of the company, and its adoption brought the operating capacity of the Long Beach plant to more than 300,000 horse power.

From the viewpoint of those interested in the copper market, Germany is becoming the brightest spot in Europe, says the weekly copper letter of the Mines Handbook Service. German manufacturers have been increasing their purchases for several weeks to meet their needs for expansion of business.

RAILROAD NOTES

Howard Elliott, chairman of the Northern Pacific Railway company, has returned from an inspection tour of the Pacific northwest with an optimistic view of general conditions there. His route took in not only parts of his own line, but also portions of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Colorado & Southern roads. Crops and business are in good condition from Billings to the coast, Mr. Elliott said, but east of Billings crop conditions are disappointing in eastern Montana and part of North Dakota. A hopeful feeling, however, is apparent there as elsewhere in the region.

During the week ended Aug. 13 the Santa Fé railroad handled 43,339 loaded cars, against 37,072 in the same period of 1925.

A reduction of 6 cents per hundred pounds on grain freight rates from Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth, and Superior, Wis., to seaboard points, proposed by the St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway company and the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad company, was ordered suspended by the interstate commerce commission from Aug. 25 to Dec. 23.

LESS COTTON USED

Consumption of cotton in the United States in July was 460,910 bales as given by the Census bureau. It compared with 518,500 bales in June and 485,900 bales for July last year. This induced a little selling, as also did the favorable weather reports.

Liverpool was stronger and higher than expected with net gains of 10 to 11 points. This was due to official reports of boll weevil activities in the cotton belt, which were given out late on Friday.

Shorts were the best buyers and closing trades were at nearly the highest of the day. There were net gains on futures in Chicago of 15 to 20 points and in New York of 14 to 32 points. Spots in New York were 20 points higher at 18c. Prices in leading markets follow:

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—(AP)—During the week there has been a fair outlet for Canton and outing flannels to the cutting up and jobbing trades. Bleached goods have been in steady demand. Sheets and pillow cases continued to suffer from the oversupply of wide sheetings from which they are made. The cloth markets Saturday were quiet, a good many factors being away over the week-end. Burlap situation was quiet and prices for spots and afloats held unchanged. Jute strengthened one pound this week following mill buying of new crop offerings.

RELIABILITY TOUR PLANES AT K. C.; BEACH IS LEADING

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 14.—(AP)—A fleet of airplanes contending for the $7,000 prize in the Ford airplane reliability tour, 21 in number, reached Kansas City from Wichita, Kas., on the eighth leg of the tour today, making the flight without mishap.

Winging his way over the 170 miles in an hour and thirty minutes, Walter Beach made the best time for the distance. Beach was the first to reach Wichita yesterday on the hop from Lincoln, Neb.

The pilots will take part in an aerial circus tomorrow and Monday morning will take the air for Moline, Ill., on the ninth leg.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Cromwell's report from Storm Lake, Ia., to Lamson Bros. & Co. said: "Northwest Iowa crops are spotted. Oats here average 30 bu and run 7 to 45 bu. Permanent injury to corn is seen in all sections. Lyon, Sioux, Plymouth, and part of Osceola counties are very poor. Lots of failure to 20 bu and may average 10 bu per acre. Clay, Cherokee, and Palo Alto have good prospects, possibly 30 to 40 bu except they are late. Buena Vista and Pocahontas are very disappointing. Sac and Calhoun are reporting the same. They look at this time like should average only 25 bu. Fields are near failure to 50 bu almost side by side. One can drive four or five miles without seeing a prospective merchantable car. Then for a longer distance some fair to good fields. Locals seeing improvement of fodder value from new prospective nubbins are overly optimistic. These counties are in the heart of the surplus producing sections of Iowa."

Le Count's report from Bradley, S. D., to Stein, Alstrin & Co., said: "Continued rain is delaying harvest and grain in shock is starting to sprout. Very little damage to date; if rain continues loss will be important."

A Canadian report says the wheat crop can be considered as safe. Cutting is almost general in the three prairie provinces and where any thrashing has taken place the yields are fully up to expectations. Late sections have been helped by recent cool weather and light showers. There has been no damage from frost and the crop, however, in the northern district, is too far advanced to suffer any severe damage from that source.

Better grades of cattle maintained a strong position throughout last week, finishing strong to 25c above a week earlier.

Best cows and heifers shared in the strength, 50 baby beef heifers averaging 692 lbs. at $10.50, being the highest ing several months for straight loads of heifers. Top, 864@1,270 lb steers, reached $10.65, and 1,317 lb. averages $10.35. Calves closed strong to 50c higher, fancy vealers up to $14.50. Stockers and feeders advanced 25@40c. Marketward movement of early range cattle are later than a year ago, the week's total at 2,900 comparing with 3,000 a year ago. Prices in this branch closed 25c higher.

General average price of good beef cattle advanced 30c at $9.65, but stands $2.75 lower than the corresponding week in 1925, with the extreme top last week at $10.65, comparing with $16.10 a year ago, when the price range for cattle of beef merit was nearly the widest on record at $6.25@16.10, against $7.25@10.65 last week. Best cuts of beef are selling 5@12c below a year ago, according to late quotations, with some cheaper grades about the same as a year ago.

Hog Prices Better, Too.

Additional advances in yesterday's brief session carried the average price of hogs to $11.75, equal to the highest of the month and 35c above the previous Saturday. A regular week-end supply of 2,000 hogs met early clearance on a steady to 10c higher price basis, the meager showing of light selling at the full strength, with top at $13.75, highest since Monday of last week. Several local packers bought with moderate freedom and less than 2,000 remained in the pens at the close, over half of the packers being out of the market, due to the limited supply. Prevailing quotations are unevenly 20@75c above a week earlier, the maximum gain on mixed and packing grades, with range of prices about the narrowest of the month. A good quota of yesterday's supply consisted of mixed and packing sows, bringing $10.35@11.00. Most medium and weighty butchers brought $11.50@12.50 and light butchers around $13.00. Selected light brought $13.50@13.75, but were scarce and cut little figure in the trade.

While hog receipts last week at 107,100 were second smallest since last September and 23,100 smaller than the preceding week, the average weight promised to reach 270 lbs, and possibly more, being the heaviest for any week in over 30 years and heaviest in over half a century for this time of year. The weekly average weight has advanced steadily for six weeks, from 254 lbs, week ending July 3. Average a year ago was 246 lbs, and two years ago 243 lbs. Last week's extreme top hog price at $13.85 stands 20c above the previous week's peak, with the general average price up 15c at $11.60, against an average of $13.25 a year ago and $9.20 two years ago.

Sheep Receipts Large.

Sheep receipts last week at 84,400 were largest since week ending May 1, showing a 15,900 increase over the previous week. Arrivals included over 50,000 range lambs, principally from Idaho and Washington, and about 4,000 sheep and yearlings from these states, old ewes comprising most of this number. Feeding and breeding stock held to firm price levels, while killing sheep and lambs slumped sharply. Best lambs and light sheep and yearlings broke 25@50c, with cull lambs and weighty ewes off 75c to $1.00. General average price of lambs lowered 35c at $13.75, lowest in several months, against $14.90 a year ago. Top range lambs $14.45 and natives $14.40, with best feeders at $13.90. Fat ewes topped at $7.75. Yearling breeding ewes $12.50 and old feeders $5.50. Feeding yearling wethers, $11.00.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 32,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 16,870 cattle, 23,986 hogs, and 22,223 sheep a week ago and 22,037 cattle, 26,688 hogs, and 22,999 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 60,000 cattle, 115,000 hogs, and 77,000 sheep, against 53,156 cattle, 99,277 hogs, and 78,856 sheep a year ago.

FOREIGN CALL FOR WHEAT LIGHT, BUT PRICES RISE

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Foreign demand for cash wheat was materially less active, but the market showed a firm undertone throughout the day. The finish was at the top, with net gains of 1⅜@1¼c, with September $1.36⅞@1.37, December $1.41¼@1.41½, and May $1.46½.

Corn was weak and ⅛@⅜c lower, with September 81¼@81⅝c; December, 85¾@35⅞, and May, 92⅛@92c. Oats closed ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower, with September 39⅞@39¾c, and December 43¼c, while rye was 2@2¼c higher, with September $1.01@1.00¾, and December $1.05⅝.

Grain markets showed considerable irregularity the past week, with wheat closing ⅝@1¼c lower than a week ago, while corn was 1½@2¼c lower, oats ⅝@1¼c lower, and rye ⅛c higher to ¼c lower. Provisions were heavy and lard lost 15@35c, ribs 75c, and bellies 32½@35c for the week.

Lighter Trade in Wheat.

There was less activity in the wheat market than on Friday, with commission houses fair buyers. Local traders were inclined to the bear side, but toward the last there was fairly aggressive buying which started short covering and made the closing advance.

Less was heard regarding export demand at the seaboard, and no totals were given, but at the same time there was a fair business, and premiums in the western spot markets were generally unchanged, and it was understood that Omaha had some grain to exporters. Liverpool wheat closed ¼@⅜d lower coming about as due based on the action of American markets late Friday.

The trade look for a good increase in the domestic visible supply for the week, with probably some increase in supplies on ocean passage. Rains were reported in the American and Canadian northwest with the weekly forecast for showers and threshing is being delayed in some sections. Winnipeg closed 1¼c higher with Minneapolis ⅞@1¼c higher and Kansas City 1¼@1⅜c higher.

Heavy Tone in Corn.

Scattered liquidation was on in corn, with September breaking 1½c to a low of 80⅝c, showing 6c under the high on Tuesday, while December at 85c was 6½c under the best figure of the week. The September-December corn spread widened out about ½c, and was 4¼c at the last. No improvement was shown in the cash demand, and while crop reports from Iowa were spotted, those from Illinois were somewhat more favorable. Indications are for good weather for the new crop to continue.

Resting orders gave oats considerable support, but there was scattered liquidation by longs in the deferred deliveries, and the average for the day was somewhat lower. Wet weather over the west unfavorable for threshing operations. Demand for cash oats was only fair, with No. 3 white sold as low as 2c under September at the last. Rye showed independent strength, advancing rather sharply toward the last on moderate buying which found offerings light.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

There was a moderate export demand for wheat at the seaboard, and sales in all positions were finally estimated at 300,000 bu, while Friday's business was said to have been in excess of 2,000,000 bu. Premiums at the gulf were again firmer.

Chicago handlers sold 40,000 bu wheat, 55,000 bu corn and 51,000 bu oats to the domestic trade with 10,000 bu wheat and 250,000 bu oats sold to go to store. Charters were for 150,000 bu wheat and 50,000 bu corn to Buffalo.

Demand for cash wheat was better with millers taking some of the low grades. No. 2 red sold at September price to ¼c under; No. 3 red, 2@3c, under and No. 4 red, 6@9c under, with No. 2 hard ½@⅝c over; No. 3 hard, 1@2c under, and No. 4 hard, 5@8c under. Basis in western winter wheat markets was unchanged.

Offerings of cash corn were light, and the basis ½c lower to 1c higher with No. 2 grades ⅝@2¼c under September; No. 3 grades, 2@5c under, and No. 4 grades, 4@9c under. Outside markets were 1@2c lower.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 178 cars; corn, 59 cars; oats, 174 cars; rye, 8 cars; barley, 41 cars.

BEANS AND POTATOES HAVE FAIR PROSPECTS

Michigan raises 75 per cent of the bean crop of the United States. Its prospects this year as given by the government report are for 6,134,000 bu, a little short of last year. For the United States it is 19,116,000 bu, against 19,500,000 bu last year, and an average of 14,600,000 bu. Colorado and New Mexico have a higher percentage this year, as they raise no white beans, while Michigan leads in the latter.

This year's potato crop for the United States is 345,569,000 bu, compared with 326,000,000 bu last year and 396,000,000 bu as the average. Michigan has prospects of 27,564,000 bu, the third largest in the country. Last year it raised 24,411,000 bu, while the five year average is 31,810,000 bu. Minnesota has a smaller and New York and Maine larger crops than last year. These two states lead all others in potatoes.

PRESSURE ON LARD

Pressure on yard from packers' brokers with limited buying support despite the carried prices down and made a tame close despite the higher prices for hogs, wheat, and cottonseed oil with losses of 7½c to 12½c with January showing the most strength. Estimates on lard stocks due late Monday are for an increase of around 4,000,000 lbs in the last two weeks. Short ribs were nominally 15c lower and bellies off 5c to 15c. Lard in Liverpool was unchanged to 6d higher.

Lard exports from the seaboard on Friday were 2,581,475 lbs, and bacon, 351,580 lbs. Hogs were higher with receipts larger than a week ago, but under last year's. Prices follow:

PRIMARIES FOR WEEK

Primary receipts of grain last week were 28,875,000 bu, a decrease for the week of 167,000 bu, and an increase over last year of 449,000 bu, with a reduction from the five year average of 329,000 bu. A feature was the heavy reduction in the wheat deliveries, and an increase in oats and corn. The wheat movement, however, was largely in excess of last year's. Details follow:

CANADA'S WHEAT FORECAST SEEMS FAR TOO SMALL

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 13.—[Special.]—Canada's official report, which shows that the 1926 wheat crop of the entire dominion will be 316,960,000 bushels, fails to harmonize with the figures gathered in THE TRIBUNE survey covering Manitoba, Alberta, and Saskatchewan, where the bulk of the grain is raised.

Official figures indicate that there will be only 296,000,000 bushels of wheat produced in those three provinces. That is 28,000,000 to 54,000,000 bushels lower than the estimate made by reliable unofficial crop observers who represent railroads, marketing agencies, elevators and newspapers, viewing the wheat situation from various angles.

Far Over Official Estimate.

Calculations made from figures given me by provincial officials, showing the acreage and average yields of wheat expected in the different provinces, indicate that growers in Saskatchewan will have at least 172,000,000 bushels; Alberta, 113,000,000 bushels, and Manitoba, 40,000,000 bushels, or a total of 325,000,000 bushels, compared with the government's total of 296,000,000.

Optimistic crop observers believe that the wheat yield in the three provinces alone will reach 350,000,000. They add another 20,000,000 for the smaller wheat growing provinces, which brings the total up to 370,000,000, or about 41,000,000 short of last year's crop. The official report from Ottawa, Ont., indicates a shortage of more than 94,000,000 bushels.

Even the most conservative think the government report is too low. The Canadian wheat situation has become a guessing game since the estimates were released last Tuesday.

It is significant that many crop observers who have made detailed surveys to get at the facts concerning western Canada's crop closely agree on their independent estimates.

Offers Conservative Figures.

J. N. Sternberg, a veteran crop expert for a company that owns a string of country elevators in the western wheat belt, has just returned from a trip covering several thousand miles and estimates that the three big provinces will have a wheat crop running from 324,000,000 to 340,000,000. His lowest figures for the different provinces are: Saskatchewan, 180,000,000; Alberta, 110,000,000 and Manitoba, 34,000,000 bushels. Many Winnipeg grain experts accept Mr. Sternberg's figures as reliable conservative estimates. He also says that the percentage of contract grades will be greater this year than usual because of the early ripening of the crop.

It is questionable whether enough allowance has been made for the enormous acreage of new land that has been plowed up and put in wheat, especially in northern Saskatchewan. W. James Thomas, Saskatoon, Sask., an authority on crop statistics, says there was an increase of 25 per cent in new lands broken up last year and used in growing wheat in the northern and central parts of the Saskatchewan and Alberta provinces.

Stabilizing Wheat Prices.

The price of wheat and the stabilizing influence of the farmers' coöperative wheat pools are important economic factors that stimulated wheat production this season, he says. Wheat values this year will be the largest, he thinks, of any crop ever taken out of western Canada.

Favorable weather during the last ten days, particularly since the recent rains, comparatively light damage from hailstorms, and the fact that grain was too far along to be seriously damaged either by rust or sawflies, are all factors that favor a higher yield than was indicated two weeks ago and the result is expected to bring about an upward revision of the figures when Canada's grain is all weighed into the bins.

STEEL MARKET.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Steel prices unchanged.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Absorption of wheat by commission houses with seaboard connections were sufficient to take the surplus of the market early in the day and cause a covering movement and advance later. This made the technical situation a little bearish, but the impression prevails that there is a large short interest that will not stand much punishment, and a further advance of ½c to 1c would bring most of them in. There is a great deal of bearish sentiment expressed by local operators who are disposed to sell on all bulges.

Traders who bought corn on the recent bullish government crop report have sold out in the last few days on an improvement in crop conditions over the northern central section of the corn belt, due to recent rains. There has also been more short selling by the pit element, most of whom are said to be bearish.

About one-third of the wheat crop in the southwest has left farmers' hands, said a Kansas City cash grain handler. He says wheat is a sale on every bulge.

Primary receipts of wheat since July 1 aggregate 117,000,000 bu, against 64,000,000 bu last year. Kansas City has received 40,000,000 bu, against 15,000,000 bu last year, Chicago, 16,000,000 bu, against practically 10,000,000 bu last year.

Indications are for another large increase in the visible supply of wheat for the week and for an increase in stocks at leading primary markets. Wheat is moving from the southwest to the northwest for storage purposes, especially to Duluth. World's shipments for the week are estimated at 11,600,000 bu, compared with 8,452,000 bu last year.

Mill stocks of wheat on June 30, 1926, as reported to the Millers' National federation, were 53,477,648 bu. This compares with the government's report estimating the carry over for the country at 60,205,000 bu. The mills reporting operated at the rate of 55.7 per cent of capacity. The federation has no data for previous comparisons.

"The feed situation and the demand for corn from quarters that seldom buy corn in this market does not warrant too much confidence on the short side on breaks," said one of the oldest corn specialists. "The trade here looks at the eastern cash situation and the large stocks and is largely bearish. Later in the season, corn will do to buy."

A Winnipeg message to William Eaton said a crop expert estimates Saskatchewan at 225,000,000 bu wheat. Commenting on this report, Bruce McBean of Winnipeg said: "If this is true, Western Canada can produce 370,000,000 bu. The Canadian pool has been a heavy seller of October wheat all day. A year ago exporters had considerable wheat sold ahead. This year no business has been done as yet."

Weather in Argentina has been favorable for the movement of grain, but interior reserves are not heavy, says Broomhall's cable. There has been 72,000,000 bu exported so far out of the official estimates of 121,000,000 bu, of which Broomhall's agent thinks 30,000,000 bu will be held over for mixture with next year's crop, owing to its poor quality. Deduction is that at the present time there are some 20,000,000 bu left for export by Dec. 31.

Weekly weather forecast is for occasional showers with mostly moderate temperatures throughout the Great Lakes, Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri valley and northern central great plains.

A BIG BOOM IN RAILS?

Twenty years ago, no more prosperous than they are now, the rails were 20 points higher on the average. In every year from 1904 to 1912 they sold above present prices. Are they now destined to sell considerably higher?

New York, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Extreme buoyancy characterized today's brief session of the market.

With speculative confidence, which had been shaken by the unexpected increase in the New York federal reserve bank rate, restored by the sharp rally late yesterday, operators for the rise assumed control of the upward movement at the outset and succeeded in lifting scores of stocks 1 to 15 points above yesterday's final quotations. Total sales were 1,127,200 shares.

Establishment of a new high record for all time by United States Steel common at 156⅝, an extreme overnight gain of 3⅝ points, was one of the outstanding features of the session. Buying of this and other high grade industrials was believed to be predicated on the speculative belief that other large corporations will follow the lead of the General Motors corporation in making a generous distribution to stockholders before the end of the year.

Du Pont de Nemours Jumps 12¾.

Du Pont, directors of which are expected to pass on to its stockholders at least part of the "melon" received through the stock dividend on its large General Motors holdings, soared 14½ points to a new high record at 314½ and then eased to 313. American Smelting opened 2½ points higher at 150, the highest price in about two decades, but slipped back later to 149. Among the other industrials which attained new peak prices for the year, or longer, were General Electric [new], Gotham Silk Hosiery, United Cigar Stores and Vanadium Steel.

General Motors again changed hands in large volume at advancing prices. The first sale was a block of 10,000 shares at the "spread" price of 210 to 211½, subsequently, it moved up to 214, and then back to 211, where it showed a net gain of 3 points on the day. Total sales in that issue were 112,800 shares. Hudson sold as high as 70¾ but slipped back to 68¾ at the close for a small fractional gain.

Rails Also Higher.

A good demand was noted for the railroad equipment shares in response to increasing railroad inquiries for rolling stock, track material and signal apparatus. Railroad shares also participted extensively in the upswing, Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake and Ohio, and Rock Island all breaking through into new high ground. The statement of Howard Elliott that the roads in the northwest had "turned the corner" attracted fresh buying into the shares of carriers traversing that region, St. Paul preferred touching a new high for the year at 23½.

Foreign exchanges held steady in quiet trading. Demand sterling ruled around $4.85⅝ and French francs were quoted just under 2¾ cents.

Loans, discounts and investments of the New York clearing house banks this week decreased $40,840,000, despite the activity and new high price records established on the stock exchange. Net demand deposits fell off $54,192,000, while time deposits increased $17,237,000. Excess reserve declined $39,193,190 to $6,282,820.

Collateral Value of Bonds.

In planning your vacation have you ever been confronted with a shortage of ready money which has prevented you from going on the kind of outing you had hoped for?

Has your inability to collect your salary in advance for the period of your vacation interfered with your plans to make an extended trip that otherwise you could finance?

If you have met with such a situation or any similar one requiring ready money in advance you have been made to realize the advantage of being able at such times to borrow the money needed.

It is not always easy or kind to borrow from a friend, who may need the money as much as you do.

If, however, you have something valuable and negotiable to put up as collateral for the loan any bank will be glad to advance you the money as a purely business proposition.

One of the many advantages in owning good bonds is their collateral value in just such emergencies.

It is not necessary to sell them to raise money that is needed to tide you over a crisis.

If the bonds are high grade and have a fair degree of marketability a bank will loan you often as high as eighty per cent of their face or market value.

Such loans may be made for thirty, sixty, or ninety days, or for whatever period you may desire.

The bank holds the bonds until the loan is repaid, simply taking your promissory note for the period and charging the current rate of interest during that period.

All coupons maturing during the period belong to you and the money received for them is sent you or credited to your account.

This coupon interest frequently takes care of or exceeds the interest you pay the bank for the borrowed money.

When the note has been paid the bonds are returned to you and are available as collateral for any future loan you may wish to make.

The convenience and power that the bondholder experiences through this ability instantly to raise money to meet some emergency is by no means the least of the advantages of holding high grade bonds.

When you acquire good bonds with the purpose of building for future independence you have also the means at your disposal of enjoying present independence.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Saturday, Aug. 14, 1926.

Day's sales............11,000 Year ago..............15,000 Total, 1926........7,041,800 Year ago..........8,224,852

Chicago stocks presented the usual lack of interest in the week's closing session yesterday and with the exception of about two issues trading was confined to small sales. Morgan Lithograph jumped a point to 61 on the renewal of interest in the stock by a syndicate, and Yellow Truck gained ⅝. On lesser trading, Great Lakes Dredge moved up 3 points to 150, and gains of a point each were registered by Auburn Automobile, Kraft Cheese, and South Colorado Power "A." Southern Cities Power "A" dropped 4 points. Reports were current that Stewart-Warner is about to announce a stock purchasing plan for employés, entailing partial payments, with a bonus for holding stock purchased. The plan is understood to enable employés to purchase the stock a point lower than the previous day's close, and $1 a share will be paid for each year the stock is held up to five years. Second quarter earnings of the Yellow Cab company, which are to be made public this week, are understood to show net earnings of about $526,682, which were the figures for the same period last year.

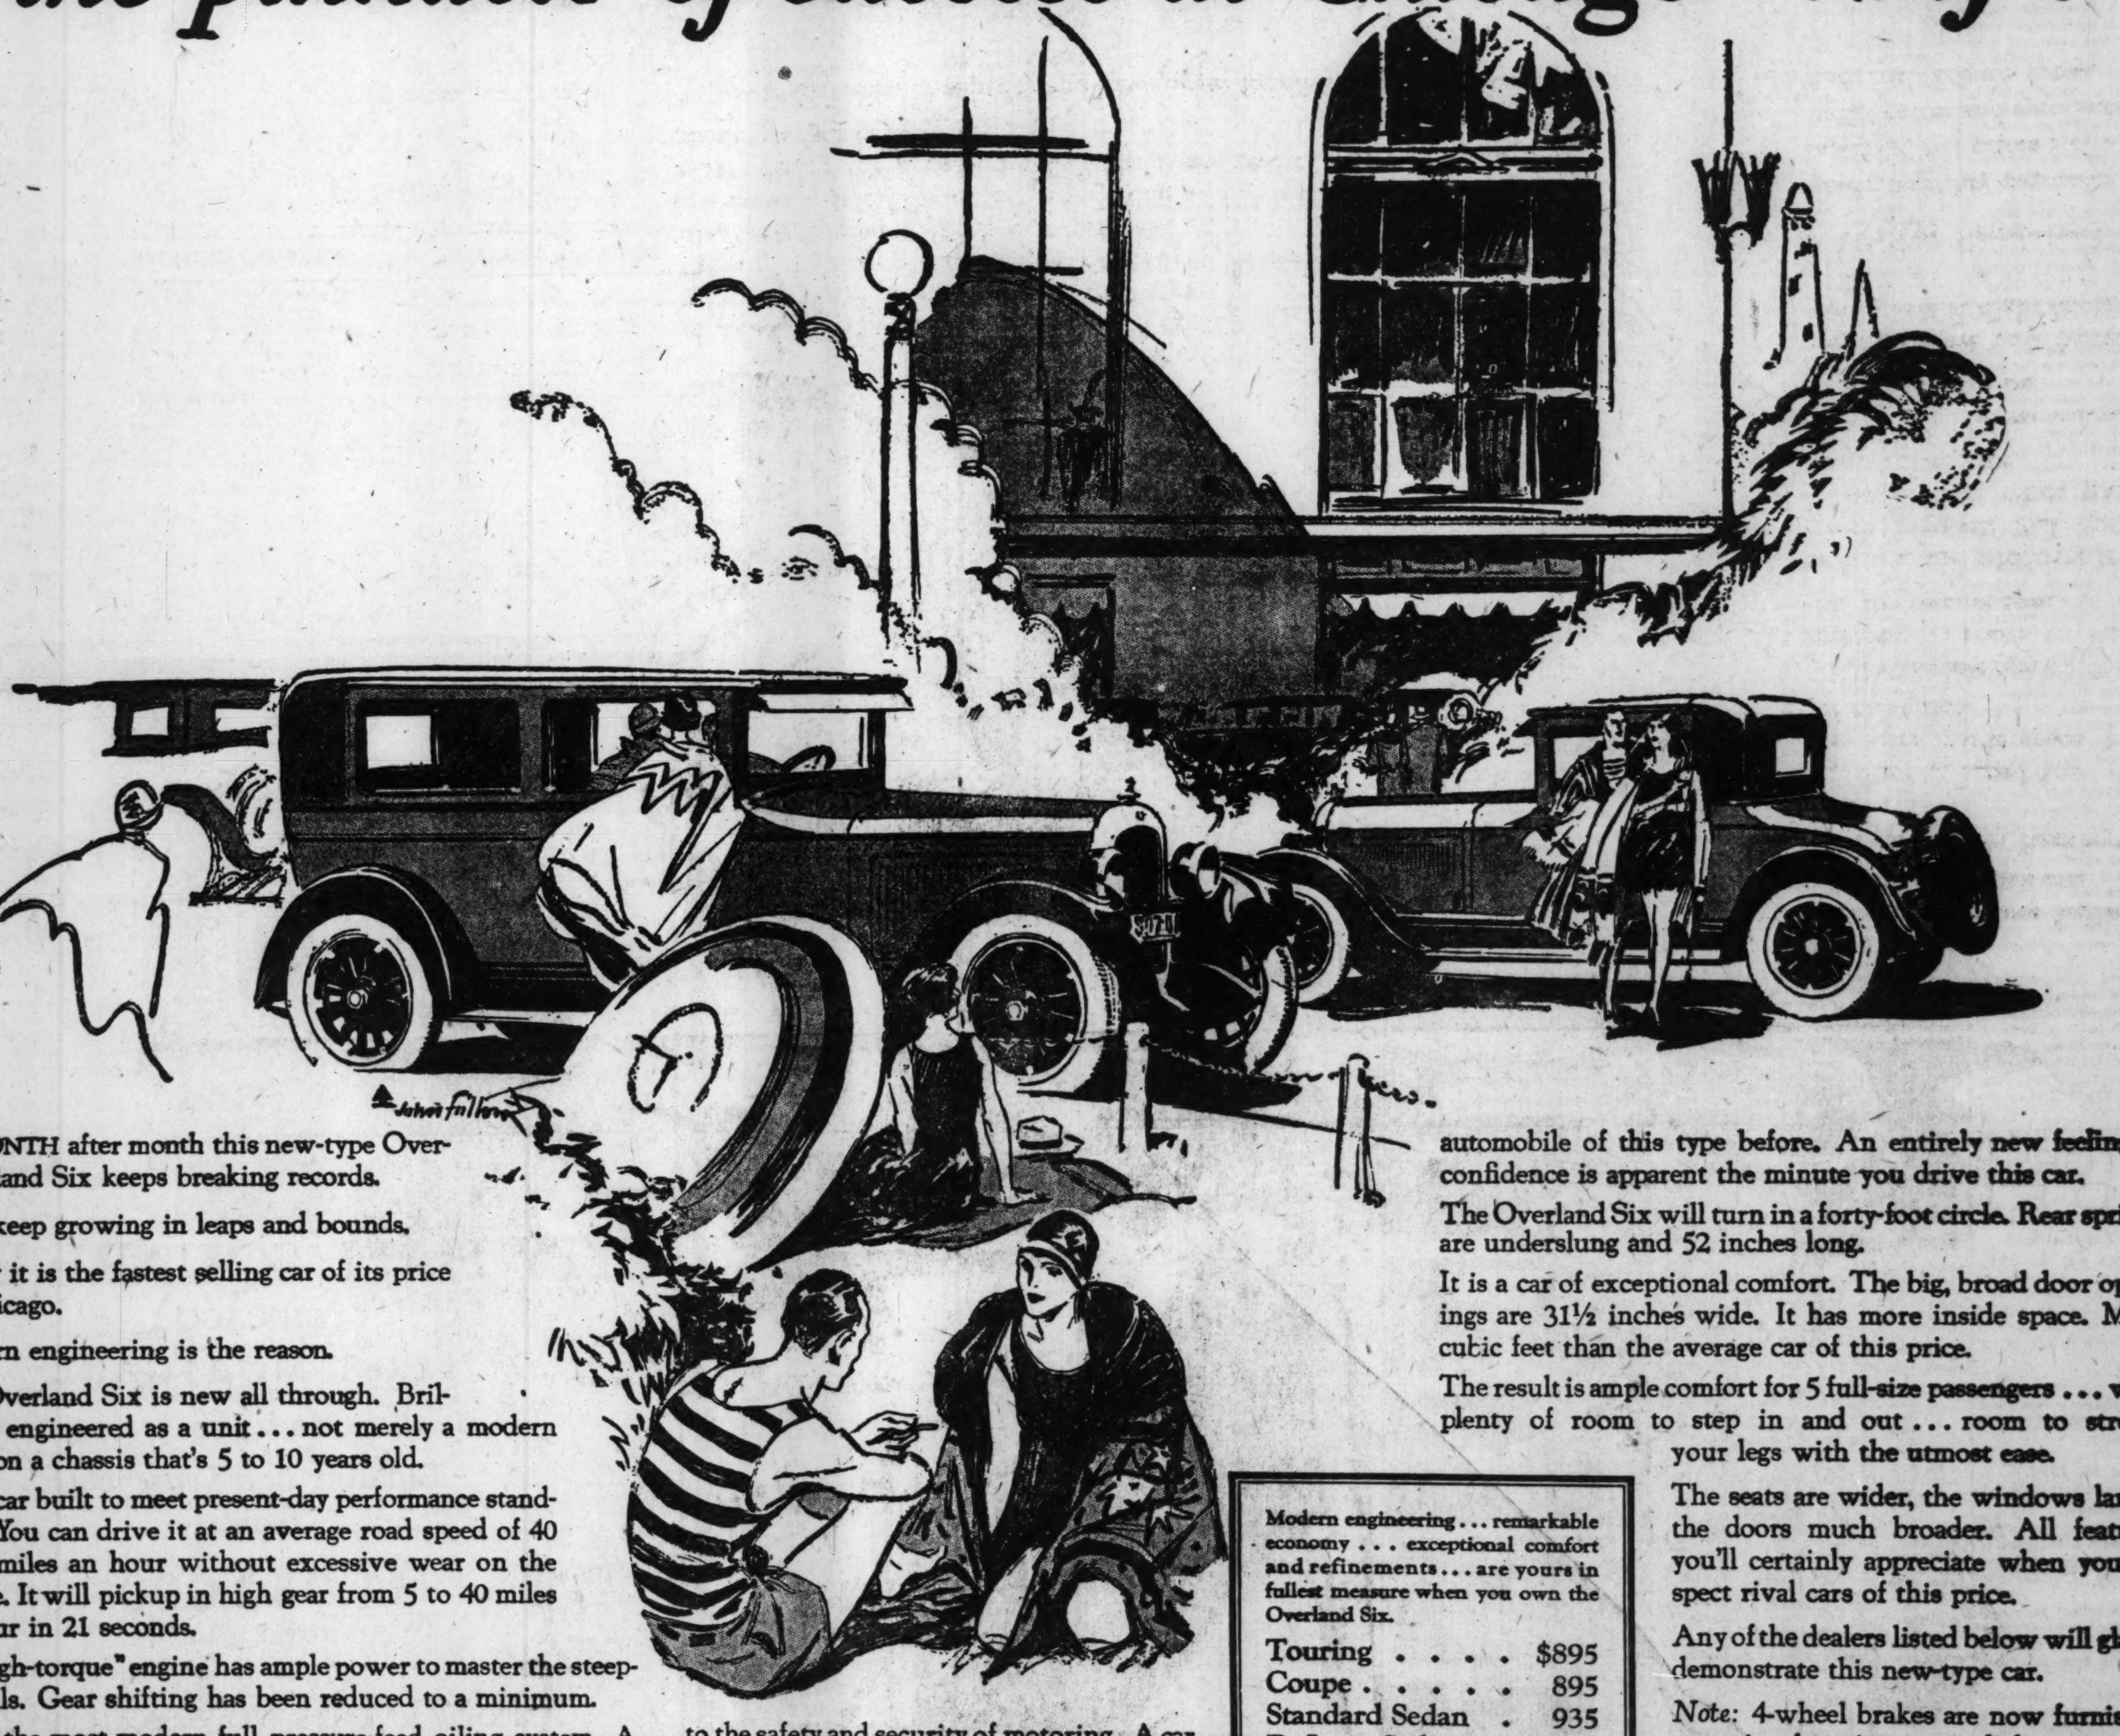
Dramatically -

this new type Overland Six has reached the pinnacle of success in Chicago - Why?



MONTH after month this new-type Overland Six keeps breaking records.

Sales keep growing in leaps and bounds.

Today it is the fastest selling car of its price in Chicago.

Modern engineering is the reason.

The Overland Six is new all through. Brilliantly engineered as a unit . . . not merely a modern body on a chassis that's 5 to 10 years old.

It is a car built to meet present-day performance standards. You can drive it at an average road speed of 40 to 55 miles an hour without excessive wear on the engine. It will pickup in high gear from 5 to 40 miles an hour in 21 seconds.

Its "high-torque" engine has ample power to master the steepest hills. Gear shifting has been reduced to a minimum.

It has the most modern full pressure-feed oiling system. A positive water pump circulation . . . and scores of other engineering features that stamp it as a car of modern design.

It is an actual fact that this big, sturdy Overland Six will out-pull, out-run and out-perform anything else of its size, or weight, or price-class.

Here in this remarkable new-type Six is a real contribution to the safety and security of motoring. A car built low to the ground . . . a car that hugs the road at every turn . . . and banishes slipping and sidesway, which is so frequently the cause of skidding and serious accidents. The low center of gravity in the Overland Six is the direct result of this modern engineering.

It provides a sense of security you have never found in any automobile of this type before. An entirely new feeling of confidence is apparent the minute you drive this car.

The Overland Six will turn in a forty-foot circle. Rear springs are underslung and 52 inches long.

It is a car of exceptional comfort. The big, broad door openings are 31½ inches wide. It has more inside space. More cubic feet than the average car of this price.

The result is ample comfort for 5 full-size passengers . . . with plenty of room to step in and out . . . room to stretch your legs with the utmost ease.

The seats are wider, the windows larger, the doors much broader. All features you'll certainly appreciate when you inspect rival cars of this price.

Any of the dealers listed below will gladly demonstrate this new-type car.

Note: 4-wheel brakes are now furnished as optional equipment at slight extra cost.

2 BIG BUILDINGS FOR LOOP AND THE NORTH SIDE

Klafter Is Architect for Both.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

David Saul Klafter informs us this week of two important projects for which he is the architect. One is to be a skyscraping store and office building that will brighten the southwestern portion of our somewhat crowded loop. And the other will be an eight story apartment building in the gayest and most sprightly section apart from the loop—the Wilson avenue district, of course.

The loop being the older of the two sections, we'll respect age and tell about its newest offspring first. It's to be a sixteen story structure and it will be located at the northwest corner of Wells and Van Buren.

About a year and a half ago a tall building was announced by this department for the corner but, as is often the case, "the best laid schemes o'mice and men gang aft a-gley."

However, everything came out all right in the end, for a new syndicate bought the property and the present project is the result.

Of Gothic Design.

The new syndicate is headed by Isaac M. Mills and S. A. Frankenstein and it secured title to the property from the Van Buren Building corporation. Frankenstein & Co. were brokers.

Joseph G. Ludgin was associated with Mr. Klafter in planning the structure which will be of modified Gothic design. Its beauty will be enhanced through the use of perpendicular lines, giving it a tall and graceful appearance.

The building is to front 100 feet on Wells street and eighty-six feet on Van Buren. It will be of steel construction. The exterior is to be of face brick with terra cotta trim with the exception of the first floor which will be of granite.

An attractive lobby is planned. The walls and ceilings will be of travertine marble, while there will be bronze elevator doors and trimmings.

A $1,500,000 Investment.

The project is to represent an investment of $1,500,000 upon completion. This includes the site which was purchased for $425,000. The name is to be the Wells-Van Buren building. Work is expected to start within sixty days, with completion set for next spring.

I. B. Perlman of Perlman, Goodman & Scolnik, attended to the legal details in the deal, while Frankenstein & Co. were the brokers in the purchase of the property. The latter organization will also be the renting agents and will manage the property.

And having finished with the loop we shall return once more to the cheerful north side. The apartment building will stand at 4539 Sheridan road on a site purchased not long ago by the 4539 Sheridan Road Building corporation. The frontage measures 83 feet.

From Sunny Spain.

Mr. Klafter's mind traveled to Spain in producing the design, so if you have ever been in that country perhaps you may know where he got his inspiration. There are to be two large stores on the first floor and the seven upper ones will contain 150 one and two room apartments. The exterior will be of face brick on all four sides, with terra cotta trim in the front.

There will be a spacious lobby on the second floor. Two automatic elevators will serve the building, and a complete refrigerating plant will help to furnish tears for the iceman over loss of business.

It is expected that work will start within sixty days, with completion next spring. The project will represent an investment of $850,000, it is stated. James A. Bidderman is president of the building corporation.

CHICAGO FINNS WORK TO OBTAIN A COUNTRY CLUB

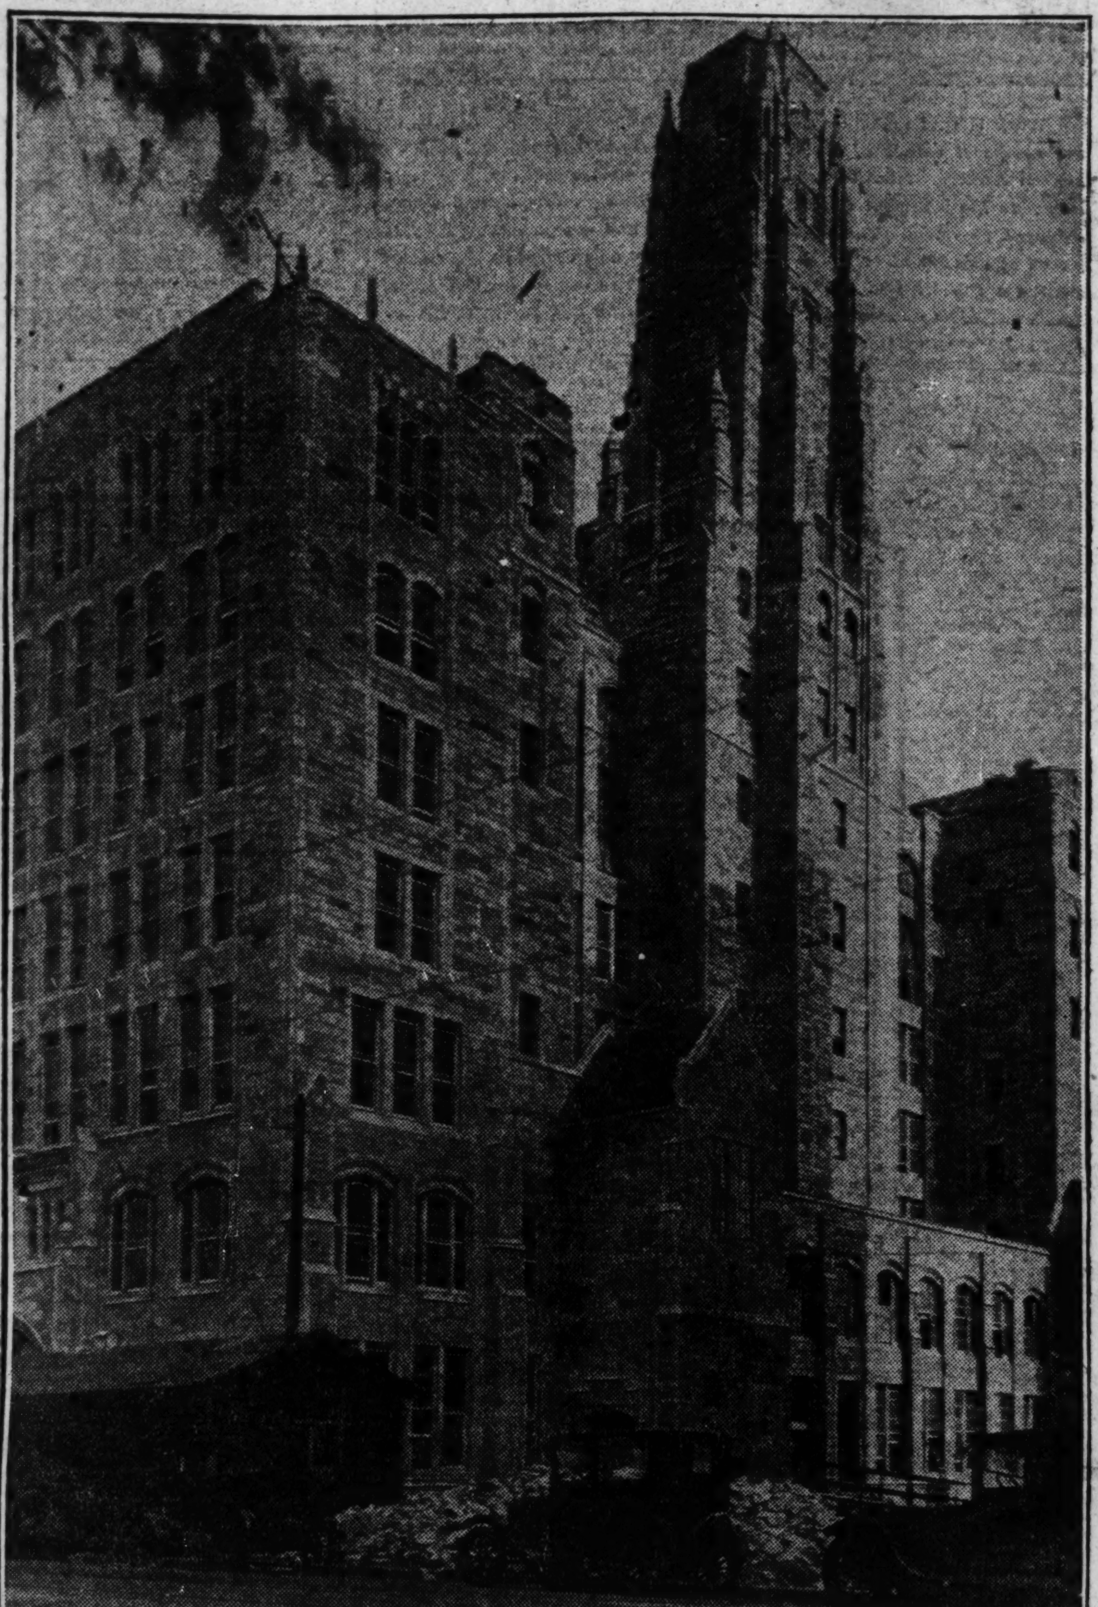
With members of practically every other nationality and association here forming country clubs, the Finns of Chicagoland, the pat new word coined by our friend James O'Donnell Bennett to describe this part of the country, are uniting to have a country retreat of their own.

And Miss Aili K. Houvinen, 4246 Sheridan road, is the energetic young Finn who has been put in charge by a number of her countrymen of an organization to make this dream a reality. Miss Houvinen is to select a site, preferably north or northwest, at once. It is hoped that the location may be chosen in time for a Labor day celebration on the property, after which plans for a clubhouse will be worked out.

SELLS INTEREST IN WACKER SITE FOR $70,000

Theodore B. Prescott of G. H. Schneider & Co. has sold for a New York syndicate a fifty-seventy-seconds interest in the property, 20x70 feet, at 103 West Wacker drive to Washington Porter II. for a reported price of $70,000, all cash. The property adjoins on the west the Cuneo building at the southwest corner of Clark and Wacker. Tinsman & Blocki were attorneys for the seller. Mr. Porter was represented by Lester Furth as broker and by Silber, Isaacs, Silber & Woley as attorneys.

CHICAGO'S MOST BEAUTIFUL SMOKESTACK



Smokestacks and roof tanks, which most architects still seem to think are invisible when stuck on top of what otherwise would be an attractive building, are conspicuous by their absence in the new Wieboldt Hall of Commerce, shown above. Of course, there is a smokestack, though you'd probably never guess where. It's inclosed in what we believe will become known as one of the world's most beautiful towers, about 200 feet high, a lovely bit of Gothic, designed by James Gamble Rogers, former Chicagoan, and Childs & Smith of Chicago, associate architects.

"CORNED BEEF" JOHN PLANS HIS 7TH LOOP CAFE

"Corned Beef John," more seriously known as John P. Harding, restaurateur, golfer, realty investor, etc., whose chief bid for fame, however, is in having made the corned beef sandwich what it is today, has leased space at 160 West Monroe street, just west of the Northern Trust company's bank building. Here Mr. Harding will open his 7th loop eating place shortly. The rental has not been disclosed.

Mr. Harding four years ago answered in the affirmative the momentous question: "Is the corned beef sandwich mightier than the movies," at least so far as one film theater was concerned, by paying Jones, Linick & Schaefer $100,000 for the leasehold and Star theater building at 68 West Madison. He promptly converted it into a "make 'em before your eyes" sandwich shop.

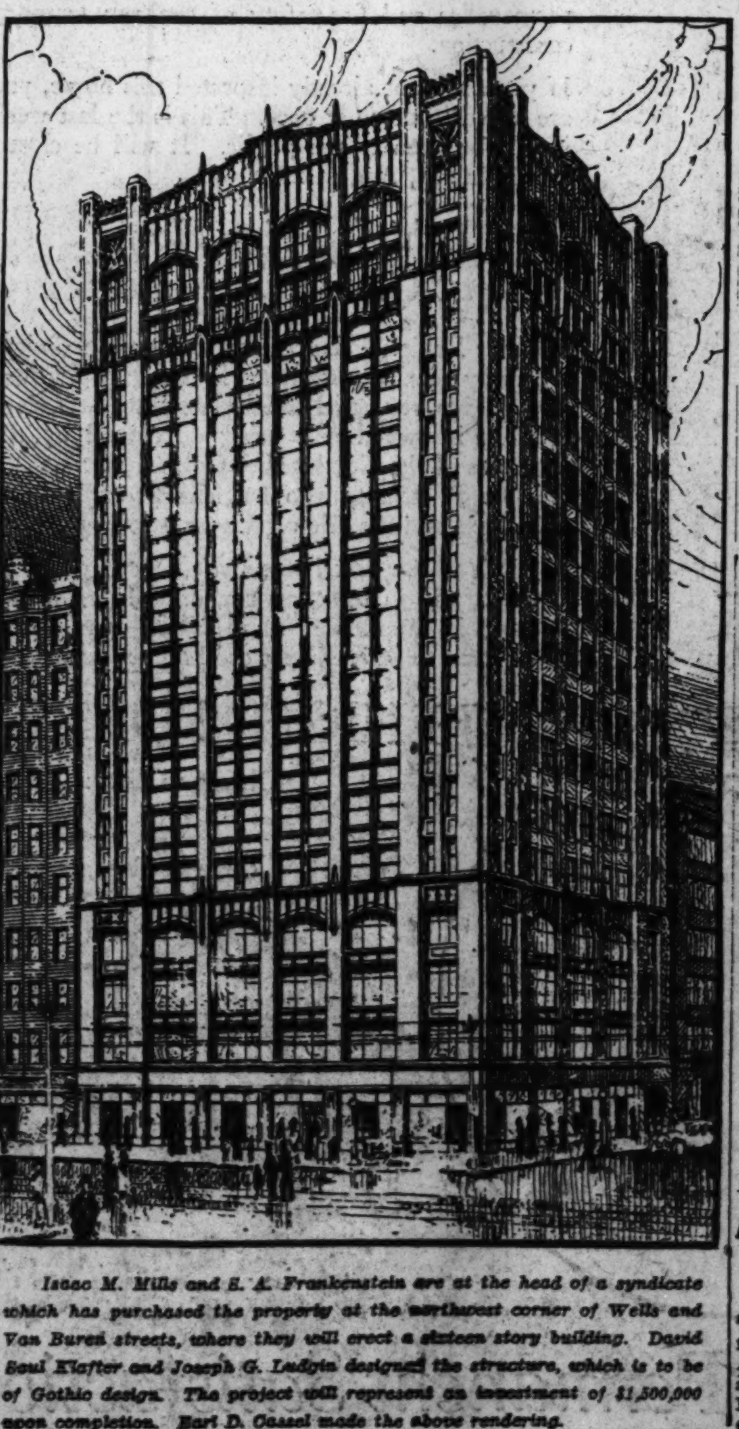
TRINZ LEASES THE CHATEAU; MOVIES AGAIN

"Trinz and associates" have leased the Chateau theater at Broadway and Grace from Albert Fuchs, now living at Santa Monica, Cal., for ten years, beginning Sept. 1, at a term rental reported to be $420,000. Arthur L. Kane and Joseph D. Roderick of Roderick & Co. were brokers. Michael B. Roderick was attorney. The playhouse is to be redecorated and opened early next month with films and specialties. The theater has been in operation by Ascher Bros. as a stock company house.

SELLS NINETY-SIX FLAT BUILDING ON BELLE PLAINE

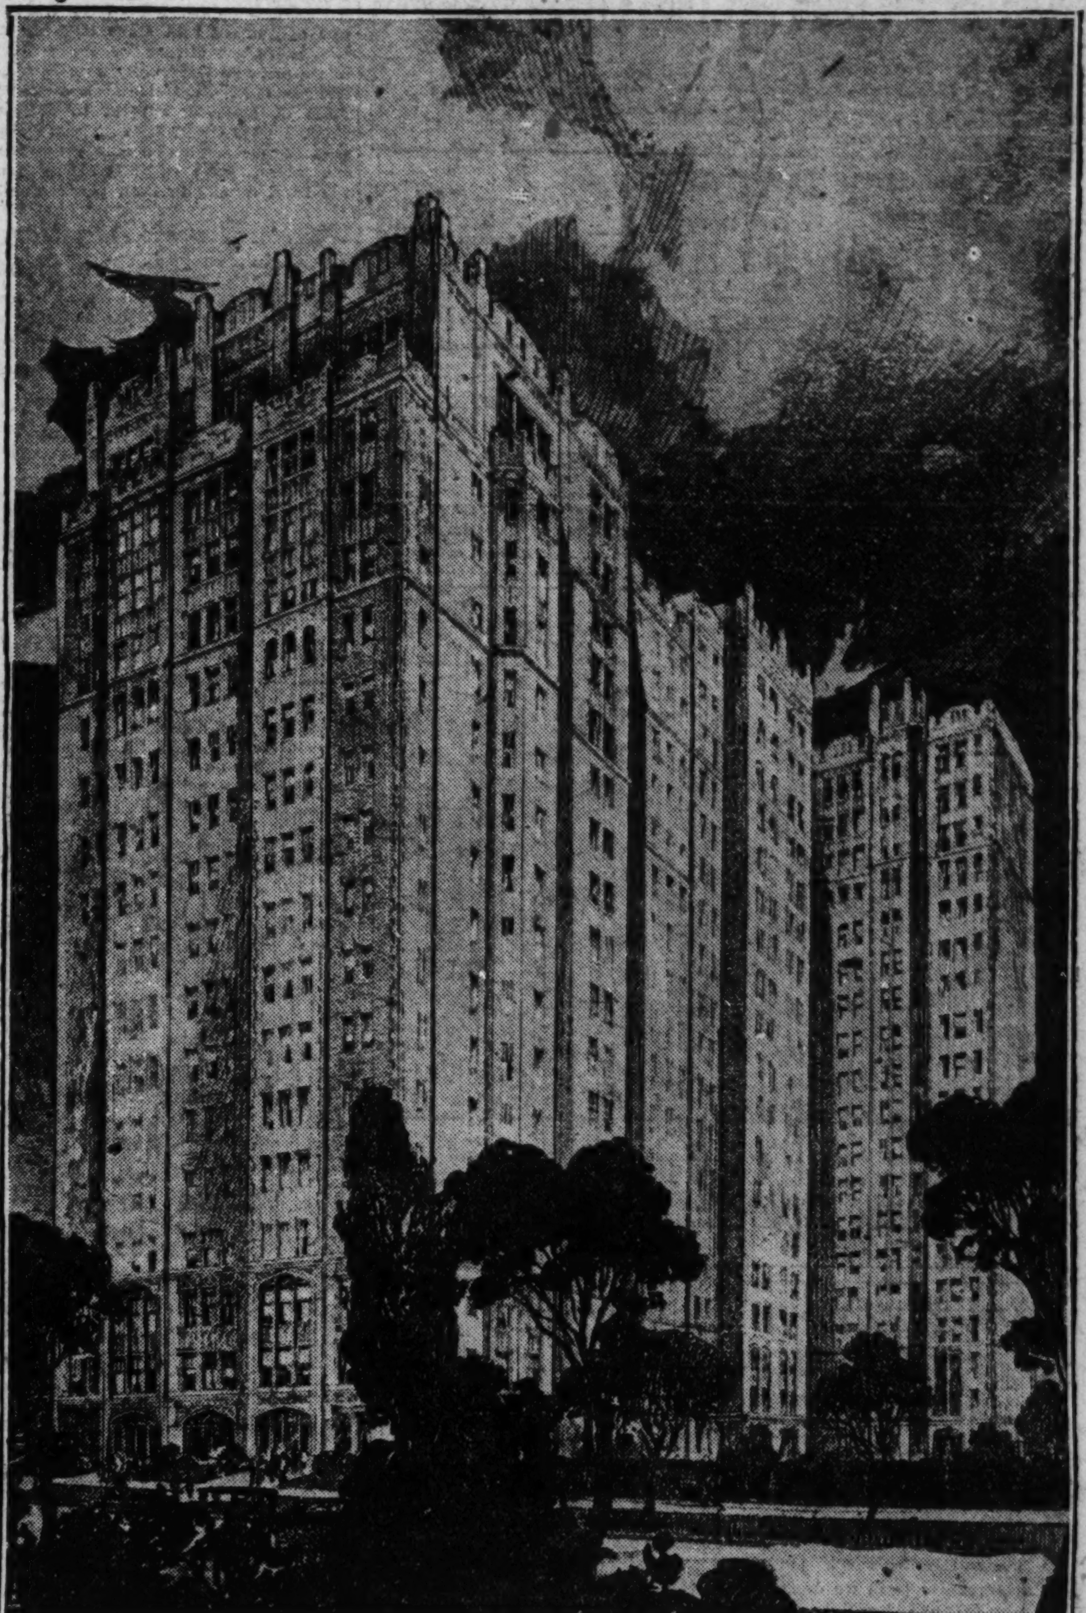
George W. Sheppley has sold to O. Wilbrand the ninety-six apartment building on a lot 222x173 feet at the southwest corner of Belle Plaine and Keystone avenues. The price was not disclosed, but the building is subject to an incumbrance of $282,000.

ON FRINGE OF THE LOOP



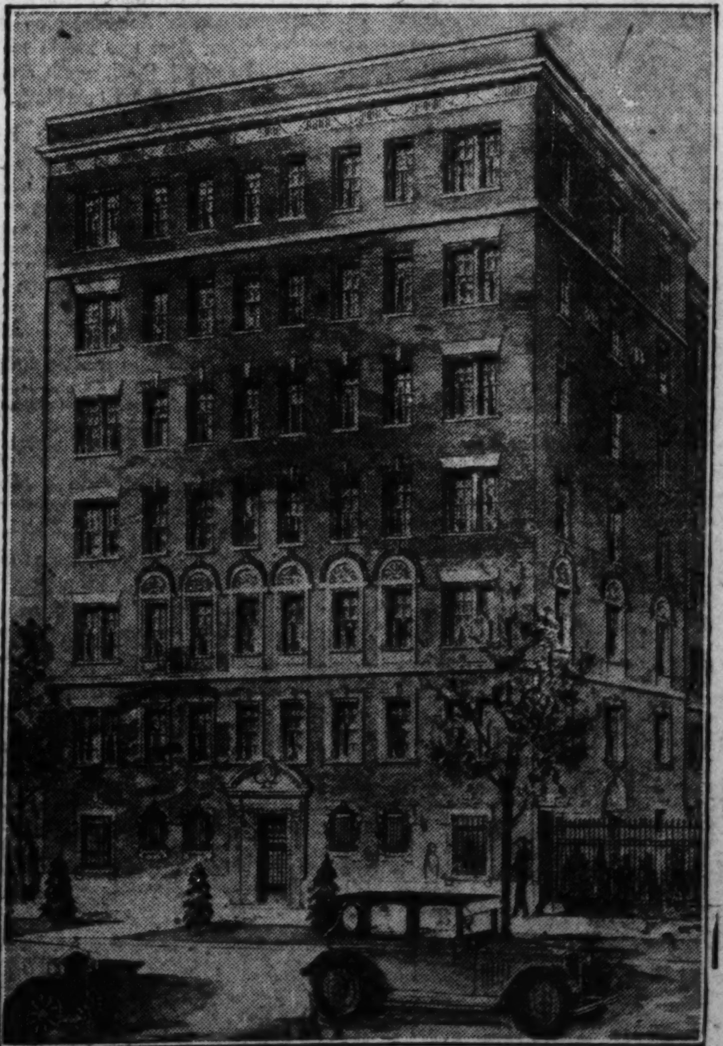
Isaac M. Mills and S. A. Frankenstein are at the head of a syndicate which has purchased the property at the northwest corner of Wells and Van Buren streets, where they will erect a sixteen story building. David Saul Klafter and Joseph G. Ludgin designed the structure, which is to be of Gothic design. The project will represent an investment of $1,500,000 upon completion. Earl D. Cassel made the above rendering.

"2440 LAKE VIEW AVENUE"



This is the $4,000,000 semi-coöperative apartment building to be erected at 2440 Lake View avenue by the Lake View Avenue Building corporation, of which S. E. Mittelman is president and chief stockholder. The site is 122x240. Rissman & Hirschfeld have designed a structure in Tudor Gothic style, with all the usual roof paraphernalia, such as tanks, pent houses, etc., hidden in the set-back stories. It'll be of reddish-brown face brick, with terra cotta and cut stone trim on all sides. There'll be a large front court, 110x140, which will have an old Englist sunken garden. Completion is set for April 1, 1927. The building will have 107 apartments, some of which will be sold and the balance rented.

THE SHERIDAN-BRIAR



Work is under way on a seven story apartment building at 424-30 Briar place designed by R. B. Kurzon. The structure will contain fifty-six apartments of from three to five rooms. The exterior is to be of face brick on all sides. Features are a landscaped garden, 21x60 feet, and a playground for children. Completion is expected about Nov. 1. Cochran & McCluer have underwritten a $400,000 bond issue on the project. L. B. Sugarman made the rendering.

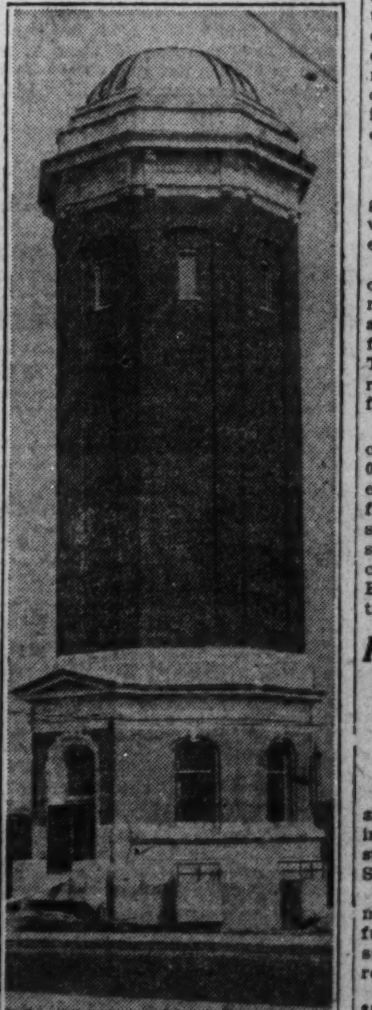
Make 5 Per Cent $300,000 Loan for Felician Sisters

McMahon & Hoban have negotiated a ten year, 5 per cent, $300,000 loan for the Felician Sisters Convent and Academy secured by a bond issue against their $1,000,000 high school at Peterson and Crawford avenues. The entire issue of bonds has been sold.

Rents Bungalow on Roof of Sheridan Road Building

Otto C. Kraemer reports that the fourteen room bungalow on the roof of the building at 3400 Sheridan road has been leased to Aaron Sapiro. Howard L. Willett of the Willett company has leased a ten room apartment on the fifth floor of the same building.

O! WILMETTE!



Yes, and "O, Lombard!" and "O, Wheaton!" and a lot of other suburban towns which are disfigured by sky searing tank atrocities. Here's what Manistee, Mich., has done to solve this problem. Of course, Riverside and several other Chicago suburbs beat Manistee to this tank camouflage game years ago, but it's worth while showing the above. Details are given on page 3.

Kolin Avenue Apartments Change Hands; $75,300

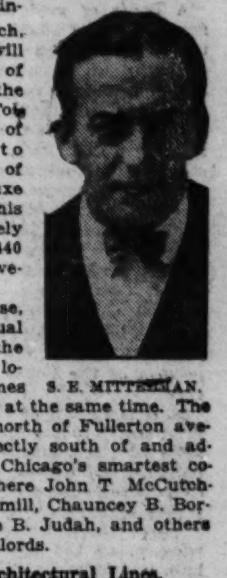
Ben Silver has sold the thirteen apartments 1537 South Kolin to Max Perplitzik for a reported $75,300. Jacob Diamond was attorney.

TO BE LARGEST OF ITS KIND IN MIDDLE WEST

Will Be 19 Stories, Have 107 Flats.

BY AL CHASE.
(Real Estate Editor).

Work has started on another huge semi-coöperative apartment building overlooking Lincoln park, which, it is claimed, will be the largest of its kind in the middle west. Following the fad of the moment to number instead of name de luxe structures of this kind, it'll merely be known as "2440 Lake View Avenue."



S. E. MITTELMAN.

This, of course, eases the usual strain on the memory, for it locates and names the big building at the same time. The site is a little north of Fullerton avenue and is directly south of and adjoining one of Chicago's smartest co-ops, "2450," where John T McCutcheon, E. A. Hammill, Chauncey B. Borland, Col. Noble B. Judah, and others are tenant-landlords.

Smart Architectural Lines.

The new "No. 2440" will make many of our newest Chicago type buildings look as old fashioned as a last year's straw hat, for Rissman & Hirschfeld's plans call for the modern set-back style of architecture, now almost universally used in Manhattan and popular throughout most of the other big cities outside Chicago.

To the top of the last set-back will be 198 feet, or as high as the zoning law permits for that neighborhood. This will give the building nineteen stories. The cost is placed at over $4,000,000.

"No. 2440" will have 662 rooms, divided up into 107 apartments of five, six, eight, ten, and up to sixteen rooms. There'll be studio duplex apartments, having two story living rooms in the upper stories.

Larger Suites to Be Coöp.

The larger apartments are to be sold coöperatively. About 20 per cent already have been sold, it is announced. Separate entrances and lobbies are planned for the coöp owners and the renting tenants.

The owners, the Lake View Avenue Building corporation, of which S. E. Mittelman is president and principal stockholder, will use face brick, with terra cotta and cut stone trim, on all the exterior walls. In other words, it'll not be a "shirt front" building. Mittelman Bros. are the builders of "2440."

Of course, the new building will have the usual imposing list of luxuries which, we assume, arouses the envy of the average flat dweller. Some of these include colored tile in bathrooms, tiled glass inclosed showers, cedar closets, wood burning fireplaces, individual mechanical refrigerators, etc.

Garage for Tenants.

Mr. Mittelman further states: "The gallery in every apartment is to be vaulted and groined, carrying out the effect of an old English castle."

There are to be extra maids' and chauffeurs' quarters in the lower stories. Each set of two apartments on a floor will have their individual freight and passenger elevators. There'll be a concrete garage in the rear providing garage accommodations for the building's tenants.

The Greenebaum Sons Investment company has underwritten a $2,500,000 fifteen year bond issue on the project, which, by the way, is to be ready for occupancy April 1, 1927. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson were attorneys. Samuel Klein is consulting engineer and the Avery Brundage company the general contractor.

PLAN $500,000 FLAT BUILDING FOR OAK PARK

Architect Louis C. Bouchard has designed a five story apartment building which is to be erected at 839 Lake street, Oak Park, by the "839 Lake Street Building corporation."

It will be called the Scoville apartment hotel and will contain seventy furnished apartments, all two room suites. Mr. Bouchard says it'll be ready for occupancy by next April.

The cost is placed at approximately $500,000. The Bond and Mortgage company will underwrite a bond issue on the project. Work is to start at once.

CLOSE 99 YEAR EVANSTON LEASE; BRINGS MILLION

Robert L. Leffingwell has given a ninety-nine year ground lease at a term rental of slightly in excess of $1,000,000 to John G. Anton and Harry Ropinski on the property at 821-25 Chicago avenue, Evanston. The lessees purchased outright the two two-story buildings on the site. The lease gives the lessees the option to purchase the property any time after twenty years. The option price for the land is $200,000. George J. Cyrus represented both parties to the deal as broker. Joseph H. Landes was attorney for the lessees.

CHARM OF DAYS OF OLD FOUND IN THIS HOUSE

Colonial Design and of Moderate Cost.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Chambers Photo.]

Architectural styles come and go. Period homes enjoy a vogue and pass. But the house fashioned after the gracious dignity of colonial days still holds its own in the heart of many a lover of the dignified and the simple.

Another example of the never failing colonial restfulness and charm is evidenced here in this house designed by S. M. Seator, architect, 19 South La Salle street, Chicago.

A home of moderate size, with a floor overall of 26x36 feet, which contains seven rooms. This does not include the sun porch on one side, which is gracefully balanced by the attached garage on the other.

In this instance the exterior is carried out in red brick, with rough cast stucco on the dormers and a vari-colored roof of bronze and gray shingles. The entire side walls are of frame studding and the house is thoroughly insulated.

An Inviting Entrance.

A flagstone walk leads to an inviting colonial entrance, and once inside you find the true colonial central hall, with staircase in view, dividing the service portion of the house from the living room.

This is known as the "open" plan in contrast to the "shut" plan, with little of the house visible from the hallway. Of course, in the latter design there is more privacy, and many people prefer it on that account.

There is a dining nook, with outside window, at the extreme end of the hall, and lavatory adjacent to it. Besides this a generous closet for wraps.

The long living room, which dominates one entire side of the house, opens through French doors to a glazed in sun porch with wood floor lined with brick. Double hung windows prevail throughout the house, but on the sun porch the windows are casement, swinging out.

On the second floor there is a sizeable hall, with spacious closets, bedrooms with windows on two sides, effected without too much sacrificing of wall space, and an additional small room, reserved for sewing purposes.

Floors are of oak, with gum trim throughout. The gum trim is stained slightly to give it a finely polished finish. The bath has cement plaster walls and tile floor. The garage has a cement floor, and its exterior is carried out in the same manner as the house.

Cost About $11,675.

As it stands, with suggested finish, this residence was built in Chicago territory for $11,675. This does not mean, however, that by certain quantity and quality reductions this same house cannot be built for less.

It often happens that when a prospective builder studies a house plan which approximates closely what he wishes to build for himself he asks, on hearing the cost:

"How can I build it for less?"

This question is so vitally important in so many cases that when a house is shown, with the estimated cost of building it, a man should be able to check off in his mind a number of possible ways by which he could lower the price.

Point Way to Save.

Right here is where an architect can often save you many hundreds of dollars. Or a contractor of long experience. They know values and where you can afford to economize without sacrificing on durability or essential substantiability.

There are two kinds of economizing: One is in quantity and one in quality.

Quantity economy is often preferred as additions can always be made later when they are perhaps much more easily afforded.

Several examples might be cited in possible quantity saving in this house. One would be in the elimination of the sun porch. Such a living room as this, exposed on three sides, is virtually a sun room in itself and, unless the house were to be built in the south, by no means a necessity. A charming accessory rather, to be added later.

Then again many people do not own a car the first few years when they are paying for their home. Many hundreds of dollars would likewise be saved if the building of the garage were postponed for a time.

Other Ways to Save.

Still a third saving lies in the elimination of mechanical devices such as electric refrigeration, modern kitchen cabinets and built-in cupboards, china closets, built-in bookcases, etc. All these easily run into hundreds of dollars.

Reducing in quality is more hazardous and should be done only under expert advice. All plumbing equipment, fixtures, paints, enamels, floorings and trim are to be purchased at widely varying prices and there can usually be found medium priced materials to select which are neither too expensive nor too cheap.

You sometimes hear people say "If I can't have just what I want, I won't have anything." But the time passes and never arrives when they are able to convert their dreams into actualities. And so because they are unwilling to temporize a little and limit their wants as far as the unessentials go, they never achieve their own home, with sunshine and air and open grounds which they can enjoy with their children.

So much is possible these days to the man and woman who are building their home and so much depends on their own powers of discrimination. It isn't lack of money which makes a house commonplace. It is lack of ideas.

"Good taste," it has been said, "builds a house for peasants to live in."

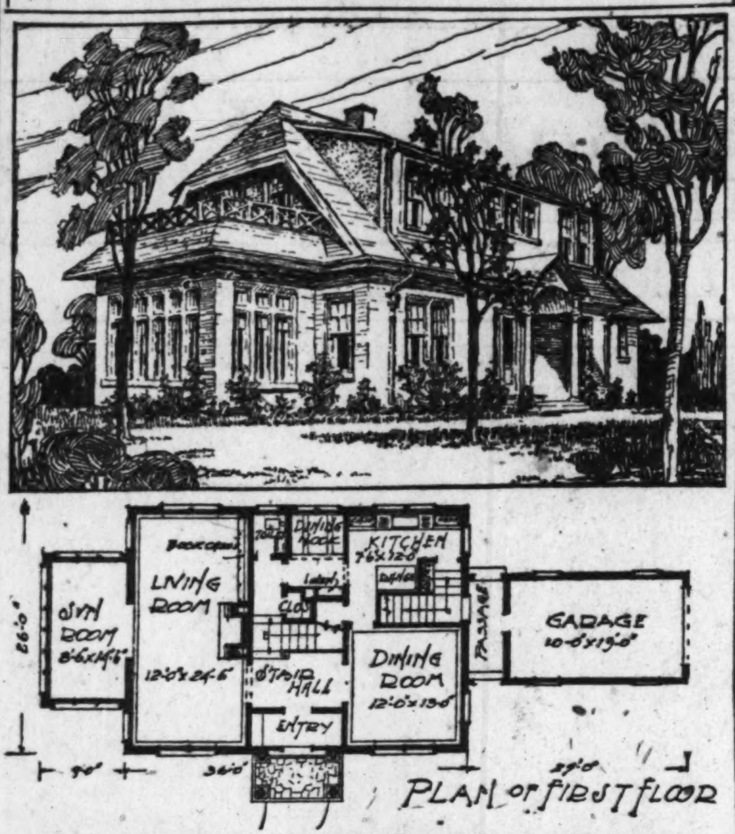
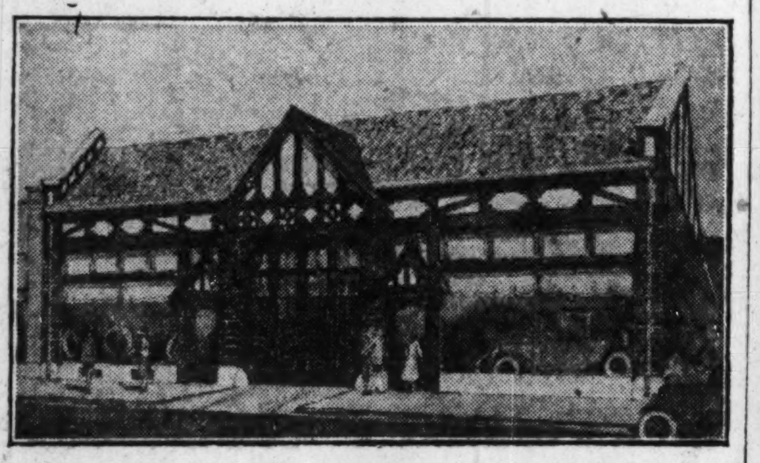
SERENELY RESTFUL



A serenely restful example of a small colonial home, with few pretentions but many charms. Seven rooms, not including a sun porch and attached garage. Estimated cost around $11,000.. S. M. Seator architect.

Aurora's Garage Gorgeous



Frederick G. Walker and Austin Angell of the architectural firm of Walker & Angell, Glen Ellyn, designed the above garage for Frank H. Riddle, Aurora realtor. How Mr. Riddle came to erect something different than the ordinary factorylike garage is told in another column on this page.

BEAUTY PAYS IN GARAGE DESIGN, AURORAN FINDS

Good Architecture Is Worth While.

To show the influence picturing good architecture [and we don't ment by that that all architecture pictured in this department is good—a lot of it is far from it] has on prospective building it is interesting to look at the adjacent picture of a garage and learn how Frank H. Riddle, Aurora realtor, came to build it.

Months ago A. C. Hoy erected one of the most attractive real estate offices in the country on Crescent boulevard, Glen Ellyn, from plans by Walker & Angell, Glen Ellyn architects.

Recalled Realtor's Office.

With the idea of showing what could be done architecturally with such a tiny structure, a picture of it was shown in this section. Mr. Riddle saw it and liked it. Months later he decided to build a garage at 88-90 South Broadway, Aurora. He told Frederick G. Walker and Austin Angell he wanted a garage designed along old English lines that would make the neighborhood sit up and take notice instead of standing up and yelling murder as neighborhoods usually do when a garage is announced.

Calls It Asset to Neighborhood.

"I believe I've got one of the most attractive garages in the country," said Mr. Riddle. "Walker & Angell's design has caused a tremendous amount of friendly comment by neighbors and business men of Aurora. Instead of being a detriment to the neighborhood, as the usual garage is, it's a real asset.

"To show that architectural beauty pays in a garage just as much as in a theater, an Aurora resident recently remarked that he'd rather have his car in a garage like this than in one that looked liked a boiler factiry."

Mr. Riddle also is building a chain of oil stations, for Aurora, designed by Walker & Angell, which will be as distinctive architecturally as the garage, he says.

Material Is 60 Per Cent of 1926 Building Cost

Sixty cents of every dollar expended in the construction of new buildings in 1926 represents the cost of labor and forty cents the cost of materials. These figures were obtained from Washington bureaus by the research department of the Greenebaum Sons Investment company. In 1920 materials represented fifty-four cents of each dollar and labor costs forty-six cents. In 1914 the ratio was forty-four cents for materials and fifty-six cents for labor.

Over ten-thousand people have visited these homes

The Lehigh Prize Home in Winnetka, Illinois, has been open to the public only three weeks, yet over ten thousand people have inspected it. A large number of these visitors, many from distant towns, have never before had an opportunity to see how beauty and comfort can be combined with the permanence and fire-safety of concrete masonry construction.

If you have not already inspected this home, you are urged to do so at once. This is the last week it will be open to the public. It will be closed Sunday night, August 22nd.

Lehigh Prize Home at Glenview, Illinois

Another Lehigh Prize Home, of Spanish design, is rapidly nearing completion in Glenview Borders. This highly restricted subdivision near Glenview, Illinois, is owned and being developed by the members of the North Shore Golf Club.

Mr. C. P. Evans, who has charge of building operations and the sale of this property, says:

"This is the first home built on our development, and in selecting one of the designs secured in the Lehigh Prize Home competition, we hope to help educate the home-seeking public to the many advantages of concrete masonry construction. We expect to have the home completed by September 1st, but a visit now, while it is under construction, should prove of interest to prospective home-builders."

The Lehigh dealer can help you

When you decide to build, go to the dealer in your community who displays the Blue-and-White Lehigh Sign. He handles Lehigh Cement because it is dependable. Is it not reasonable to expect such a dealer to protect your interest in other ways by handling a line of thoroughly Dependable Materials?

A competent contractor can save you money

Make sure to secure Competent Workmanship. A good contractor will save you money through skillful building economies.

An architect's supervision

A good architect will invariably save you more than his fee in correct planning, in accurate estimates and specifications.

How to reach the Lehigh Home in Winnetka

WILMETTE TANK TO BE INCLOSED, WRITES MAKER

Tells What Michigan City Has Accomplished.

Residents of Wilmette especially, and those of Wheaton, Lombard, Glen Ellyn and a score of other Chicago suburbs in general, which are inflicted with landscape marring water towers, erected with no attempt at beautification, may be interested in a letter from the Chicago Bridge and Iron works to THE TRIBUNE.

It explains the Wilmette situation, and M. E. Smith, who wrote the letter, sends this department a picture of how Manistee, Mich., solved the tank problem by inclosing it in an ornamental tower.

Riverside a Pioneer.

Of course, Riverside and other Chicago suburbs have done likewise, but it's worth while to point out what is being done in a neighboring state, and maybe some day Glen Ellyn, Wheaton, etc., will wake up and do what Kenilworth, it seems, intends doing later on, that is, inclose its water tank in an ornamental tower.

"In the Aug. 4 issue of your paper you carried a news item regarding the unsightliness of the elevated steel tank which is now being built at Kenilworth. Undoubtedly, you expected a defense from this organization, since our field forces are erecting the Kenilworth tank," writes Mr. Smith.

To Be Inclosed Later On.

"The only point that we want to bring out is that the 200,000 gallon Horton tank which we are now erecting at Kenilworth is not a standard steel tank but a special design which the citizens of Kenilworth purchased. In the development of standard Horton tanks over a period of approximately thirty-five years our engineers have attempted to make them as neat appearing as possible. When the citizens of Kenilworth specified a straight post tank of special dimensions they lost everything that has been accomplished along the lines of improvement in appearance of steel tanks.

Tells of Manistee.

"The design of the tank which Kenilworth purchased was specified in order that it might be inclosed in an ornamental tower later. The citizens ought to reserve their comments until such plans have been carried out.

"Several years ago the city of Manistee, Mich., decided to follow approximately the same plan as that which has been instigated at Kenilworth. The attached picture shows the ornamental tower at Manistee, which incloses a 200,000 gallon Horton self-supporting bottom steel tank.

"We believe that the tower which will be placed around the steel tank at Kenilworth will be as good or better looking than the one at Manistee, Mich., and that when it is completed the citizens will have no objections to it."

ROY KNAUER TO CHEER LUNCHES OF COUNTY BOARD

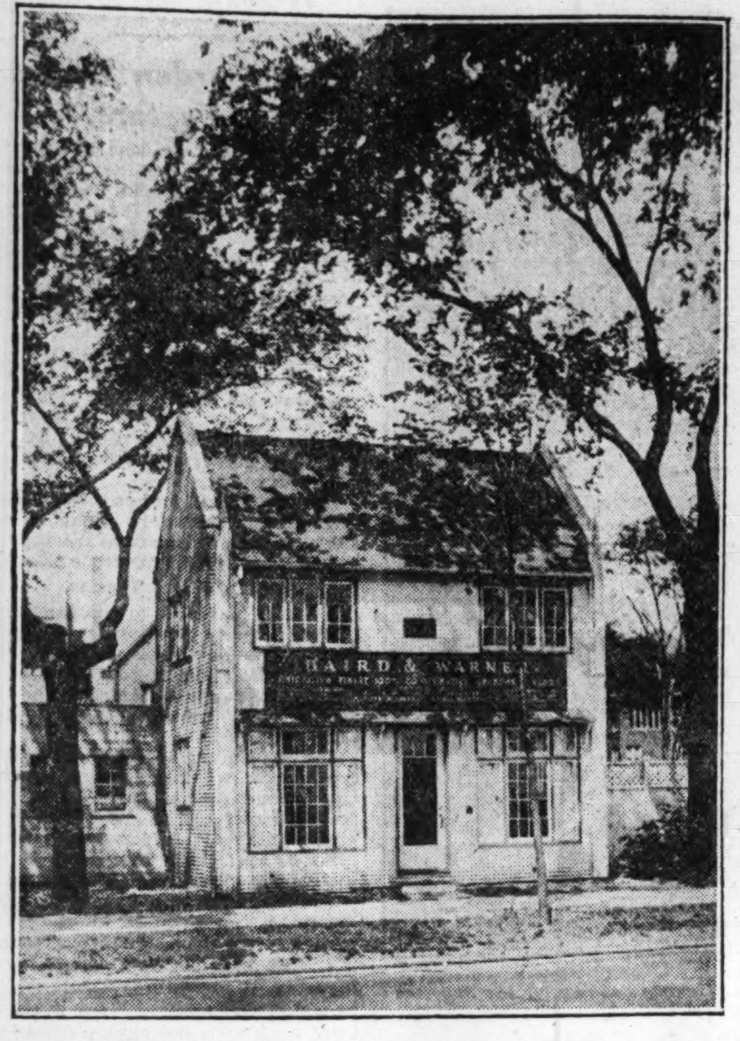
ROY E. KNAUER.
[Tribune Photo.]

Roy E. Knauer has been appointed chairman of the luncheon committee of the Cook County Real Estate board to act for the rest of the year in the place of A. J. Brockman, who is touring Europe. Mr. Knauer has planned in cooperation with Joseph K. Hall, chairman of the taxation committee, a series of discussions before the weekly luncheons. These discussions will be on the subject of the proposed revenue amendment to the constitution and they will be directed by able speakers. It is expected that the board will take a definite stand on this question and make its recommendation to the public accordingly. The first luncheon will be held on or about Sept. 15.

IMPORTANT DEAL CONSUMMATED IN HIGHLAND PARK

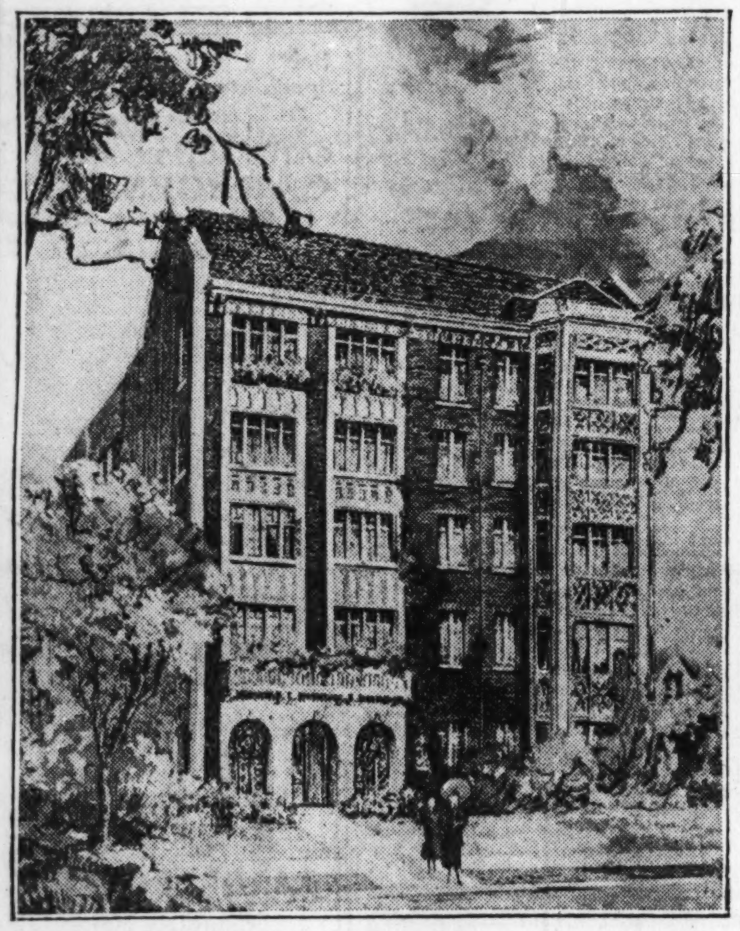
William T. Woodley has sold a large piece of vacant property in Highland Park, fronting 1,600 feet on Sheridan road and extending through to Lincoln avenue, to the Highland Park State bank, trustee. The tract lies between Cedar and Beach streets. It is stated that the property has been given a valuation close to $200,000. Murray & Terry represented both parties in the deal and will have charge of the resale of the land in 100 foot lots.

AT 1448 LAKE SHORE DRIVE



Here's what Elmer A. Claar of Baird & Warner says he believes to be a new idea in the construction of large apartment buildings in Chicago. It's the attractive office of the coöperative homes department of Baird & Warner, erected directly in front of 1448 Lake Shore drive. Of course, it's a temporary affair, but it's as attractive architecturally as some of its more imposing permanent neighbors. It'll remain till "1448" is completed. Mr. Claar says Oliver M. Burton, James R. Baker, Mrs. Helen W. Scott, and James Miksak already have bought apartments in the building now under construction.

OAK PARK APARTMENTS



The above five story Scoville apartment hotel is to be erected at 839 Lake street, Oak Park, from plans by Architect Louis C. Bouchard. The Bond and Mortgage company will finance the project. Details are given in another column.

LEASES MADISON STREET STORE.

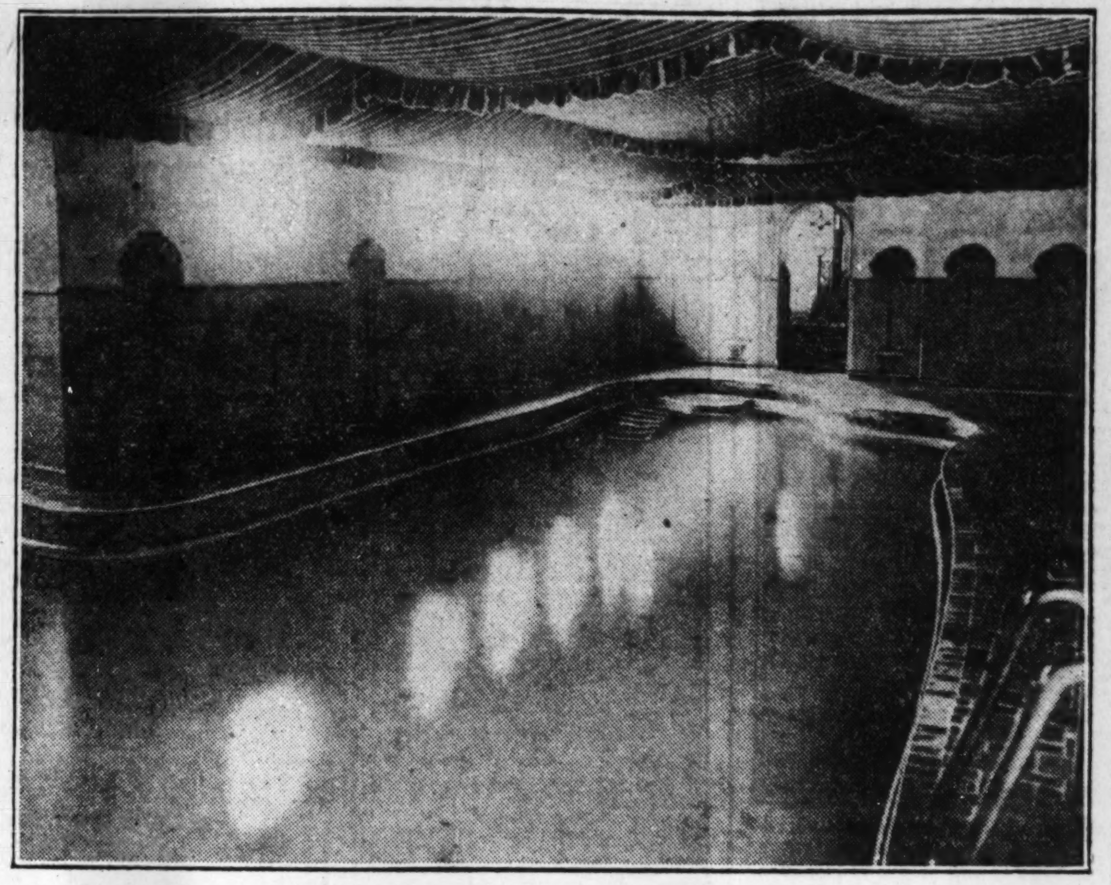
Glenwood Avenue Flats Change Hands: $58,000

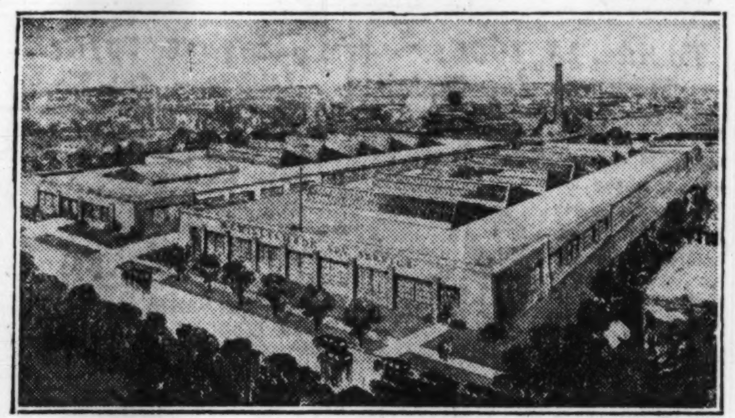
A reported $58,000 was paid by Emil Toorwald to Emerich Schwarz for the six flats at 6337 Glenwood. John J. Kern & Co. were brokers.

ALL THE LUXURIES OF A CLUB IN THIS CO-OP



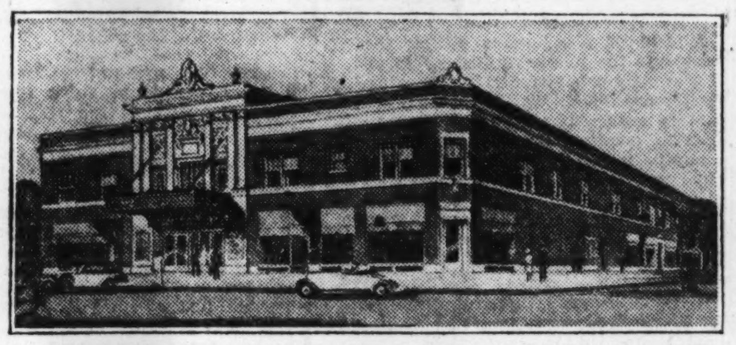
Here's a bit of August lure to the co-op flat owner of apartments in Park Castles at 2416 Greenleaf avenue, overlooking Indian Boundary park. It's a gorgeously hued and attractively designed swimming pool where the tenant-owners may splash away their dog day lassitude and cool heated bodies in emerald depths whenever they feel so inclined. It would seem to the writer, just now glued to a sizzling typewriter, that this would be a selling point for flats in Park Castles, yet to date we've never seen mention of this attractive feature. James Denson was architect of Park Castles. According to Gubbins & McDonnell a third of the apartments have been sold.

WILL HELP IN SALES



George G. Elmsley is the architect for the new plant which is nearing completion for the W. F. Williamson Advertising Service at 3501-19 West Addison street. The building to the right in the above picture is just about finished. The one to the left will be erected next spring, according to present plans. Charles Morgan made the above rendering.

A LAKE FOREST MOVIE



Vincent Quarta has had plans drawn by Elmer F. Behrns for an 800 seat moving picture theater and commercial building at the northwest corner of Westminster avenue and Bank lane, Lake Forest, Ill. The building is to contain five shops and five apartments. The exterior is to be of brick and cut stone. The design is in the Italian renaissance. It is stated that the project will cost $150,000. Work is expected to start within three weeks, with completion some time during the winter. Lawrence Momberg made the above rendering.

BUYS FACTORY BUILDING.

John A. Weber has bought the three story manufacturing building at 4311 Ravenswood avenue, lot 50x162, from Raymond H. Garman for an undisclosed price, subject to $59,000. The E. E. Stults Realty company was broker and will manage the building.

NEW WOODBRIDGE GOLF CLUB OPENS ON SEPTEMBER 4

We have opening on Sept. 4 the eighteen, or is it nineteen, hole course of the Woodbridge Golf club, located one mile south of Lisle, Ill., on the Joliet road, in Du Page county. And if you have been so fortunate as to have had a friend take you for a motor ride in this county nothing further need be said about the beauties of the club's locale.

But golfers, we suppose, are more interested in the course than in the surrounding adornments of nature. So we tell them that the promoters of the club say they have as brisk a field as is to be found in this part of the country. The total yards for the eighteen holes is 6,193 and none of the holes will be parallel.

The organization has a club house with locker, bathing and dining facilities. A bridle path will surround the club's 300 acres and there will be a shooting trap for those interested in that sport. The club's address is Lisle, which is on the Burlington railway.

CATHOLICS BUY SITE IN CICERO FOR NEW CHURCH

The Catholic bishop of Chicago acquired from Joseph Hribal and others the property located at the southeast corner of 23d street and Clarence avenue, Berwyn, 299x125 feet, as a site for a new church and school. The property is now improved with four residences. It is understood that the price was approximately $46,500. McMahon & Hoban were the brokers in the transaction.

Warrenville Lots to Be Marketed by Subdivider

George P. Jochum, head of the Reliance Realty company, has acquired 412 lots north of Warrenville, and announces his intention of placing on the market, with all improvements in, including paving. He intends erecting fourteen new homes by next spring. The lots formerly were part of the Manning estate.

EFFICIENCY IS KEYNOTE OF NEW SIGN FACTORY

Under Construction on West Addison.

A manufacturing plant where scientific management is to be given a thorough tryout is nearing completion for the W. F. Williamson Advertising Service at 3501-19 Addison street, just west of the property of the Ferguson Coal company. Patrons of the Northwestern elevated may remember the firm's former plant in Orleans street, near the turn at Sedgwick street, which was profusely ornamented with vari-colored signs.

The new factory will represent an investment of $250,000 upon completion and it is proposed next spring to start work on another unit adjoining which will cost $100,000.

Makes Advertising Signs.

George G. Wamsley planned the present structure and his design is said to be reminiscent of the style of Louis Sullivan in the latter's treatment of buildings of this class. This unit measures 120x260 feet, while the one proposed for next year will be 75x132 feet in the front and 120x150 feet in the rear.

The Williamson company manufactures advertising signs of all kinds. So the plant will contain wood working, metal working, lithographing, sign painting and complementary departments. The various departments have been arranged to give a maximum of efficiency. For instance, the entire plant is arranged in light zones. When a worker is assigned to a certain task he is provided with light just as he is given proper tools for his task.

A Research Laboratory.

In the designing of the plant especial attention was given to the matter of light so that day and night workers will be given the best of care. Then there will be a chemical research laboratory which it is said will be one of the finest of its kind in the city. The laboratory will be used in checking up and studying materials.

W. R. Williamson was consulting engineer in the designing of the plant and it is being erected by the Austin company. The firm employs between fifty and 100 workers.

Beg Your Pardon

Winston & Co. are to be agents of the new sixteen story Franklin-Adams building. It was incorrectly stated in this section last Sunday that another realty firm had been made agents.

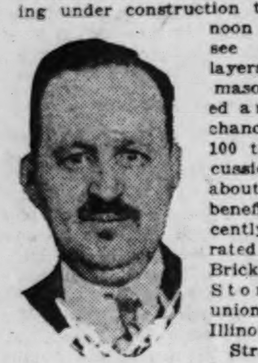
MEDICAL BENEFIT PLAN STIRS ROW IN UNION RANKS

Bricklayers Fear Offer Gives Too Much.

BY THOMAS WREN.



DR. E. THOMAS BRAND.

Perchance you should pass a building under construction this week at noon hour and see two bricklayers or stone masons in a heated argument, chances are about 100 to 1 the discussion centers about a medical benefit plan recently inaugurated by the Bricklayers' and Stonemasons' union No. 21 of Illinois.

Strange to relate, the chief complaint of the bricklayers and stonemasons lies in the belief that they are getting quite a large package at more than reduced rates. Considerable speculation centers on the latter matter. One faction of the union maintains that no doctor or group of doctors can render full medical attention to a bricklayer and his family for the fee of seventy-five cents a month.

On the other hand, officials of the union point to the established fact that the plan was subjected to an acid test for an eighteen month period and came through without any flaws or blemishes.

Doubtful of Plan.

The recalcitrant faction of bricklayers, who have shown a tendency not to go along with the plan of the medical association, set forth the following facts to substantiate their position. They claim there are about 8,000 bricklayers and stonemasons in Chicago who hold union cards. They say the average family of each bricklayer runs between four and five children and to make it conservative they estimate the total at 32,000 men, women, and children, whose medical wants will be supplied by the medical association at the rate of 75 cents a month.

Something is mentioned about blue sky laws and the bona fide organizations of medical men.

The recalcitrant faction contend that the only bricklayers who approve of the medical plan are men whose wives and children are in urgent need of major surgical operations. This faction maintains that visits from the stork to homes of Chicago bricklayers will alone keep two doctors busy.

Agree on One Point.

However, virtually all the malcontents agree on one point and that is the union leaders of the bricklayers' union, led by Peter S. Shaughnessy, president, wouldn't have undertaken to sponsor the medical association unless they believed the idea feasible and the plan a benefit for all members of the union.

The association to which the bricklayers and stone masons belong is called the Union Medical Benefit association. Dr. E. Thomas Brand, who gained some fame when he treated Evelyn Nesbit last winter when she tried to commit suicide in her north side apartment, is the director of the association. Dr. Andrew M. Roman is second in command. Offices are maintained at 162 North State street.

According to the rules of the association every member of the Bricklayers' union automatically became a participant in the benefits of the organization by virtue of a resolution adopted by the union last June. This resolution avers that the association deposited $50,000 in securities with the union as an assurance that it will carry out its obligations with every individual member.

Report Gives Results.

It points out that the annual report of the organization shows beyond a doubt that it has accomplished the desired results whereby bricklayers and their families may obtain competent medical and surgical care in case of sickness.

Another point stressed in the union resolution avers the association offers the opportunity to every bricklayer to be treated by his own family physician in case of sickness, the association paying the bill.

A few rules taken from the association's rules and bylaws follow:

"If the sickness is such that the patient is able to go to the physician's office, he or she shall call in person at the medical director's office at 162 North State street, where he or she will receive such medical or surgical treatment as may be needed. If a member has a regular family doctor, the medical director will, upon request by the member, immediately communicate with the family doctor and arrange consultation. The member is not required to pay anything.

Pays All Bills.

"In case the sickness is such that it requires a surgical operation or obstetrical attention, the medical director, will, upon request of the member, personally authorize the chief surgeon or the member's regular family surgeon to perform such surgical or obstetrical work. The association pays all bills. The member is required to pay nothing."

Then there is provision made for free medical certificates, or medicolegal testimony in court, physical examinations for the purpose of health preservation, and arrangements in hospitals whereby the member gets a discount of 50 per cent in hospital rates.

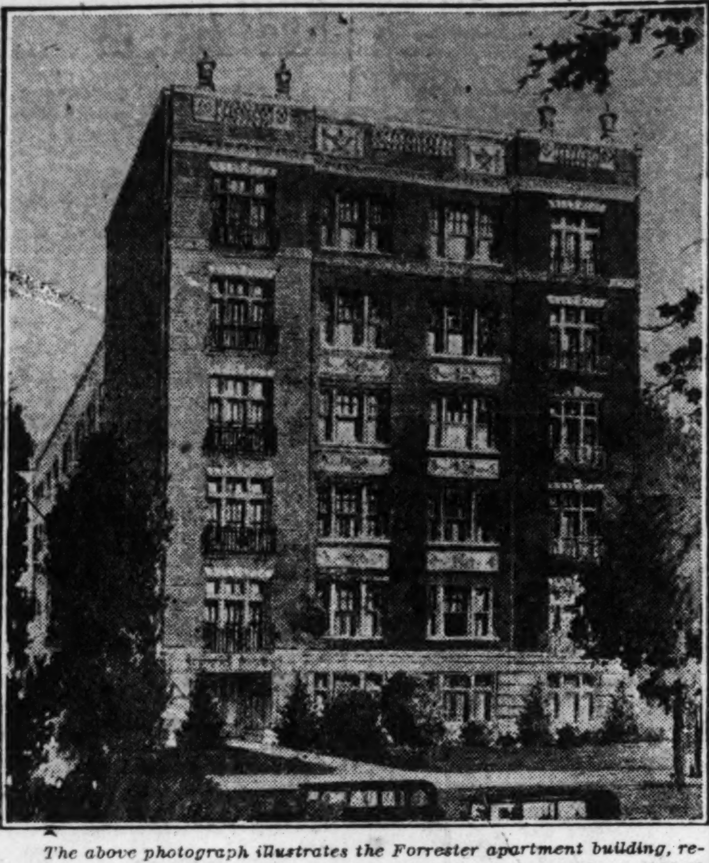
Even dental laboratory work is guaranteed to be given at actual cost.

The committee appointed to look after the association's medical activities are Robert Fitzgerald, treasurer; Albert E. Vorkeller, financial secretary, and Charles L. Wilde, assistant financial secretary.

Flats at Marshfield and 81st Street Sold: $125,000

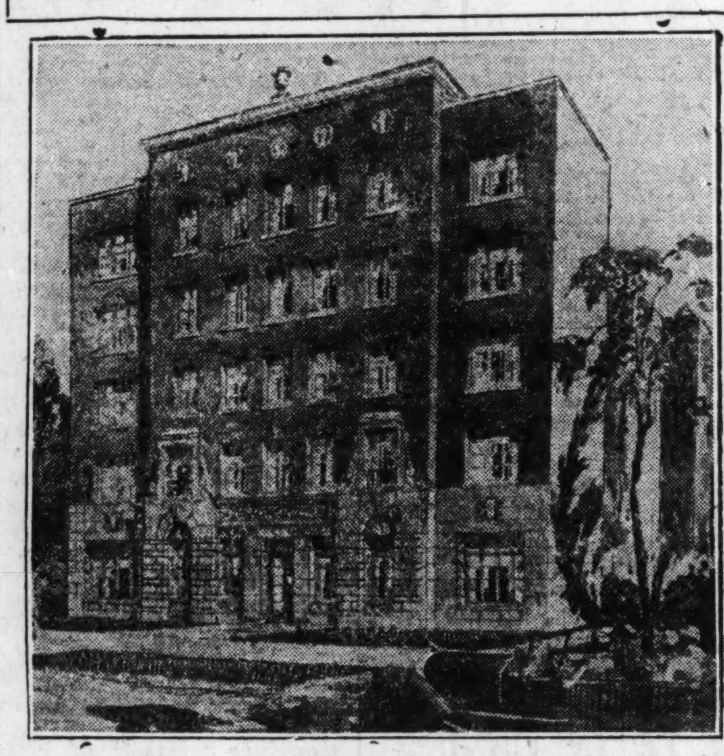
The nineteen flats and six car garage at the northeast corner of 81st and Marshfield, lot 89x125, was sold by O. W. Billson and E. B. Flynn to Walter Mueller and others for a reported $125,000. E. B. Flynn was broker.

THE FORRESTER



The above photograph illustrates the Forrester apartment building, recently described in this department, which is being erected at 1310-12 Lunt avenue on a site 50x172 feet. The building will be five stories high and will contain fifteen three-room, thirty-four two-room and six one-room apartments. Edmond Grossman is the architect. Richard W. Forrester is president of the Forrester Apartment Building corporation, the owner. A. E. Pearson & Co. are the builders. The Acro studios made the above rendering.

NEW WILSON AVENUE HOTEL



This is the "909 Wilson Avenue" five story apartment hotel, to be erected diagonally across from the Sheridan Plaza hotel by John and Elizabeth Gregori from plans by Raymond Gregori. It'll have sixty-seven furnished suites of one and two rooms each, with hotel service. The architecture will be Italian, with red brick and terra cotta trim elevation. The cost is placed at $300,000 and completion is set for May 1, 1927.

'Hearst Square Hotel' May Be New Name of the Gault

Harry and Irvin Cassman, who operate the Savoy hotel, at 30th and Michigan, have leased the New Gault house, at the southwest corner of Market and Madison, for twenty years from Albert Pick. They are remodeling it and are considering renaming it. It has been suggested they call it the "Hearst Square hotel."

STEEL FIRM LEASES.

The Donahue Steel Products company will pay an annual rental of $6,700 for the one story building containing 29,000 square feet located at 1107 South Washtenaw avenue, which it has leased from the Walworth Manufacturing company. William Kaplan arranged the lease.

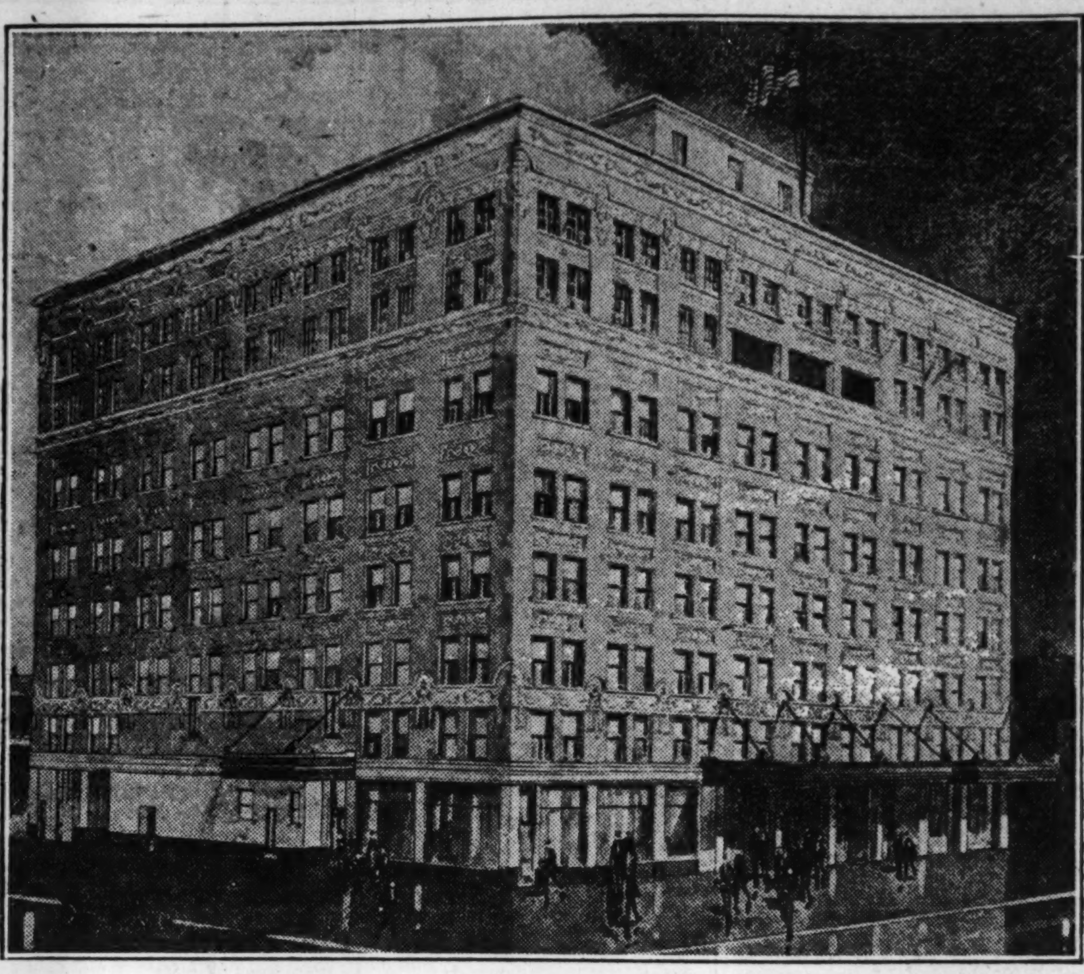
Brokers' Notes

C. E. Corcoran is moving from 811 North Clark street to Lobby 103, Clark-Chicago building, 800 North Clark street, formerly the Bush temple. Mr. Corcoran first had an office in the building sixteen years ago, moved out five years ago and is now back. His phones are Superior 2751 and 8245.

Hincamp & Co. announce the removal of the sales division headed by G. A. Dittman from 724 West 63d street to the Conway building.

Hinkamp & Co., Inc., announce the appointment of A. R. Schuttler as a divisional sales manager with headquarters at 1230 East 63d street.

FOR LODGE MEMBERS



W. T. Bailey is the architect for an eight story structure, the national temple building for the Supreme lodge of the Knights of Pythias, a colored organization, now being erected at the southeast corner of South State street and 37th place. The project will represent an investment of $1,500,000 upon completion. A 1,500 seat theater and a roof garden will be features.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To Aug. 15, 1906; 20 Years Ago Today

A feature of the week's realty business was the exceedingly large volume of cheap lot and house trades and the large amount of buying by the foreign element of the west side. A case in point is the experience of W. D. Kerfoot & Co. with their new subdivision near Morton Park. It was placed on the market only last week, but on the second day afterward eleven lots were sold to Poles and Bohemians, who made no secret of the fact that they had withdrawn the money from their savings banks to buy the property.

A deal of significance during the week was the purchase of the George C. Newbury property at 186-186½ Custom House place. The purchasers are said to represent the Monon railway and the acquirement of the Newbury property is said to remove the principal obstacle in the way of the road's plan for the establishment of a great freight terminal extending from Polk to Taylor streets on the west side of Custom House place.

Georgia Powers bought from Charles D. Clark the property at the southeast corner of Dearborn and 17th streets for $70,000.

Helen L. Booth and her husband, W. Vernon Booth, sold to Harry C. Bannard the residence property in Bellevue place, 238 feet east of Rush with 26x129 feet of ground, south front, for $25,000. William A. Bond & Co. sold for Winnifred L. Turner to Mrs. William D. McIlvaine the residence property at 73 Bellevue place for $18,000. The lot is 30x129 feet and the house is a three story stone front.

Silas H. Strawn purchased from Speed S. Goodloe et al. the property at 173-75 North Michigan avenue for a reported consideration of $125,000. The lot fronts thirty feet with a depth of 130½ feet and is improved with a five story building. It is just north of Randolph street.

The property at the northeast corner of Kenwood avenue and 64th street, on a lot 100x165 feet, containing twenty-four apartments, has been sold by Albert Silverman to Theron P. Cooper for an indicated consideration of $55,000. James A. McLane & Co. represented the purchaser, and R. B. Woolf & Co. the seller.

Record has been made of the transfer by the Greenebaum Sons' Bank and Trust company to the Harvard School Building company of the property at 4731 Ellis avenue, 67x291 feet, for $20,500. This is preliminary to the construction of a new home for the Harvard school. The building company is composed of many prominent Chicagoans who will finance the construction of the new building which is expected to cost about $70,000. The school, which had its start about fifty years ago on 16th street, near Indiana avenue, has for a number of years occupied the old Warren Leland homestead at the northeast corner of Drexel boulevard and 47th street.

To Aug. 15, 1896; 30 Years Ago Today

W. B. MUNDIE.

Jenney & Mundie have designed and let the contracts for a residence for Dr. Joseph Haden, to be built in Gordon terrace, on the lake shore, in Buena Park. It will be thirty-nine feet front by fifty-one deep, two stories, basement and attic high, and will be constructed of pressed brick, with a slate roof. The residence will cost $13,000.

The Northwestern Mutual Insurance company has loaned to Warren Springer the sum of $80,000 for five years at five per cent, secured by a part of lot seven, block fifty-one, school section addition. The lot is located on the west side of Canal street, 128 feet north of Jackson street.

The Lincoln Park "Palace" apartments, located at Diversey boulevard and Park avenue, at the northwest corner of Lincoln park, will be completed in September, after a variety of vicissitudes. The building, costing $300,000 and to be one of the finest in the country, was projected by B. Edwardes. A strike at a quarry which Mr. Edwardes had leased to provide stone for the structure caused one delay. Then the hard times of 1893 were responsible for further trouble. And last year Mr. Edwardes was killed while inspecting the work. His estate is finishing the project. E. Hill Turnock is architect.

COLORED K. OF P. ERECT 8 STORY HOME ON STATE

Roof Garden Will Be a Feature.

Anything can be done in Chicago. And to prove it the folk out South State street way, despite the fact that no one could accuse them of having been born with gold spoons in their mouths, are putting up a handsome building that would be a credit to the resourceful and ambitious people who congregate about State and Madison streets.

Which is to say that work is progressing nicely on the $1,500,000 national temple building for the Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, composed of colored people, at the southeast corner of South State street and 37th place.

An ambitious project is the new structure. It's to be eight stories high, a slight change from the original plans which called for ten stories.

A 1,500 Seat Theater.

On the first floor is to be a handsome theater to seat 1,500, which probably will be used as a movie house, though there is talk that it may serve as a home for the spoken drama. The upper floors will contain offices and lodge and meeting halls.

And on the top floor there is to be a roof garden which will provide a place for many festive days. Although called a roof garden there is to be a covering over this playground so it may be used when the wintry blasts arrive as well as now. The garden is to be arranged with two wings with space between them for an orchestra, giving a maximum of dancing room.

W. T. Bailey Is Architect.

W. T. Bailey is the architect who designed the building. It's to be of buff brick with terra cotta trimming. According to present plans there will be a mechanical ventilating plant and artifical cooling plant to provide fresh, cool air for the theater and garden in the summer months. The Western Iron Construction company is the contractor. Completion is set for next spring.

LA GRANGE PARK GIRDS FOR WAR ON WESTCHESTER

Wants Property Occupied by New Town.

The dogs of war may be loosed right here in Cook county. It's this way. Broad, rich lands, lying along 22d street, south of Maywood, adjoined the village of La Grange Park, which is north of La Grange. These fields were coveted by the inhabitants of La Grange who wanted them under their flag. And then on to the horizon came the powerful and wealthy promoters of Westchester.

With the first hint of the intentions of the Westchesterites, the sturdy members of the La Grange Park village board filed claim in the County court for the land from their northern boundary to 12th street.

They based their claim on a statute enacted by the Illinois legislature in 1921 giving the zoning commission of any village or city the right to extend jurisdiction over unoccupied territory within a mile and a half of its limits. La Grange Park is zoned, the board members forming the commission.

The Westchester hosts retaliated by incorporating and then they notified their rivals that they "could beat the law." La Grange Park filed suit and the case went to the Supreme court and then back to the Appellate court where it will be heard this autumn. The case is of importance as a test of the constitutionality of the state zoning law.

And, according to scouts, the La Grange Park forces are not going to give up without a bitter struggle. The villagers are a proud people, and not without reason—for they have a great record in this somewhat impetuous metropolitan area of ours.

Here some one remarks, "Why, I never heard of La Grange Park." Of course you haven't, because the town has never had a murder, even a third class one, and the most serious crime in its criminal annals was the theft of a piece of cheese in the Jones residence by a mouse three years ago Christmas eve.

NEW ZONING BODY TO GUARD BEAUTY OF WASHINGTON

Will Watch Development of Suburban Area.

The territory contiguous to Washington is feeling the effects of the remarkable growth of the suburban areas of the great American cities in the last few years, and now officialdom of the capital is taking steps to see that the development shall not be out of keeping with the desire to make Washington the world's most beautiful city.

With this end in view President Coolidge has appointed the national capital park and planning commission which is composed of four members. The members are J. C. Nichols of Kansas City, Mo., director of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and a member of his city's planning and zoning committee; Frederick Law Olmstead of Brookline, Mass., landscape architect and city plan authority; Frederick A. Delano of Washington, president of the American Civic association, and Milton B. Medary Jr. of Philadelphia.

An Important Step.

The new Washington commission was recently created by congress under a plan which reorganizes the old national park commission. Its object is to see that the development of the capital's metropolitan area harmonizes with that of the city proper.

The creation of the commission is looked upon as the most forward move in the development of the capital since Peter Charles L'Enfant, French engineer, drew the original plans for the city.

Mr. Nichols is one of the leading figures of the real estate world on the subject of city planning. He is a vice president of the American Civic association and a director of the National conference on city planning.

Gives His Aims.

Recently at the request of the senate committee of the District of Columbia he laid before that body a sketch of a possible comprehensive system of city planning aimed to make Washington the most beautiful capital in the world. In his sketch he stressed the coördination of beauty, utility and efficiency as the objective of city planning and he made a plea against the sacrifice of the city to commercial vandalism.

Mr. Nichols pointed out that in the recent growth of the capital's metropolitan area there has developed a misfit park plan, inartistic buildings and checkerboard streets. He stated that the growth of this territory makes the enlargement of the city's plan imperative and he predicted that the population of the district would be 1,000,000 in twenty years.

CHICAGOAN BUYS GOLF CLUB SITE IN LAKE COUNTY

John J. Rink, a prominent figure in the north shore and northwest acre markets, reports two important deals as having been closed last week.

In one deal Mr. Rink took title for a Chicago syndicate to a tract of 82 acres located in Vernon township, Lake county, adjoining the hamlet of Long Grove on all sides. The reported price was $40,000. Mr. Rink represented all parties as broker.

Mr. Rink also sold a tract of 120 acres on the Volo-McHenry road, Lake county, for a Chicago syndicate to O. Mullenbach for a reported price of $70,000. This property adjoins the one mentioned in the paragraph above. It is stated that Mr. Mullenbach is assembling a site for a golf club.

Percy Wilson & Co. bought 113 acres of land near Barrington, Ill., from E. N. Heggie, which it is proposed will be subdivided shortly. The property fronts 900 feet on Northwest highway and extends north to Dundee road, facing Deer Grove forest preserve.

Mr. Wilson states that the land will be divided into acre and five acre estates, with high grade building restrictions. There will be business frontage opposite the park on Dundee road and the Northwest highway.

MISSION HILLS NEW CLUB JUST WEST OF GLENCOE

Modesty, a virtue seldom found among the numerous golf and country club impresarios of our town, seems to form an important part of the characters of the promoters of the new Mission Hills Country club. For instead of the usual array of adjectives of the superlative degree in advance literature telling about the organization we find a moderate announcement of the club's attractions.

So while Mission Hills may not have the "most sporting" and "beautiful" course in the state, it will have a snappy eighteen holes that ought to satisfy the most particular. The club now owns 140 acres of rolling land on Dundee road, six miles west of Glencoe.

Nine of the eighteen holes are expected to be ready for play in 1927 and while the entire eighteen may be ready by next year this is not counted on. Buildings on the ground will be remodeled for use as a club house and later an attractive structure to cost about $50,000 is to be erected.

The officers of the club are: C. A. Nash, president; R. H. McElroy Jr., vice president; R. C. Taft, treasurer, and L. J. Beauvais, secretary. The club's offices are in the Wrigley building annex.

Buys Site for Apartment Building on Thorndale

Gustaf Zeterlund has bought the 90x125 vacant at 1510 Thorndale from Henry P. Kransz for a reported $27,500, and will erect a three story apartment building at once, according to Walter Wahlquist, of L. M. Ellert & Co., broker.

Woman Pays $152,000 for Apartments on Rockwell

Clara Gruhn bought the twenty-eight apartments at the southwest corner of Rockwell and Schubert, lot 100x125, from Edward W. Reuter for a reported $152,000. Julius Ruben was attorney.

Amazing Lumber

[not cut from trees]

adds new comfort ... saves money

It builds homes Summer-cool ... Winter-warm ... Costs little or nothing more ... and year after year will save from 25% to 35% of your fuel money!

A RADICAL, drastic change is taking place in the building of homes today!

Already more than 90,000 homes have been built with an amazing lumber. A lumber that shuts out both the discomforts of sweltering Summer heat ... and the biting cold of Winter ... that keeps every room at a healthful, unvarying temperature the year 'round ... that cuts fuel costs by about ⅓.

These houses have set a wholly new standard of American building practice. Now that insulation has been made practical, heat-leaking houses are a poor investment. The authorities agree such houses are becoming obsolete: harder to sell, rent or borrow money on.

This amazing lumber is Celotex, developed five years ago to meet the urgent need for a building material that would resist the passage of heat and cold better than wood lumber, masonry and other wall and roof materials.

Celotex is not cut from trees, but is manufactured from the long, tough fibres of cane. It is enduring ... scientifically sterilized and waterproofed. Celotex is stronger in walls than wood lumber, because of the greater bracing angle of the broad boards, and many times better as insulation. Wood and moisture can not penetrate Celotex. It quiets noise.

ACTUALLY saves money. Thus, unlike ordinary insulation, Celotex is not an extra item in building. It replaces wood lumber as sheathing (see the illustrations) eliminates building paper, gives greater wall strength and adds the insulation needed back of wood, brick and stucco exteriors at no extra cost.

Under plaster, replacing lath, Celotex costs a few cents more per yard at first, but is a great economy. It means less upkeep expense because of no lath-marks ... fewer cracks. Plaster bonds with Celotex far better than it keys to lath.

Because Celotex helps deaden noise it makes your home more quiet and restful.

Moreover, with Celotex in the walls and in the ceilings or roof of your home, a smaller, less expensive heating plant and smaller radiators will keep you comfortable.

And year after year, Celotex will save from 25% to 35% of your fuel money!

NEW COMFORT for old homes. In houses already built, a big measure of this comfort and economy is being secured by lining attics and basements with Celotex. That helps a lot and costs but little. There are dozens of other places where Celotex is the ideal material for building and remodeling.

If you are going to build, talk with your architect, contractor or lumber dealer about Celotex. Leaders in these lines advise its use. All lumber dealers can supply it.

If you are going to buy see that Celotex is used before you put any money into a house. Now that Celotex has made insulation practical, heat-leaking houses are a poor investment. Also ask your contractor or dealer about the $200.00 gold bond now issued on every Celotex-insulated house.

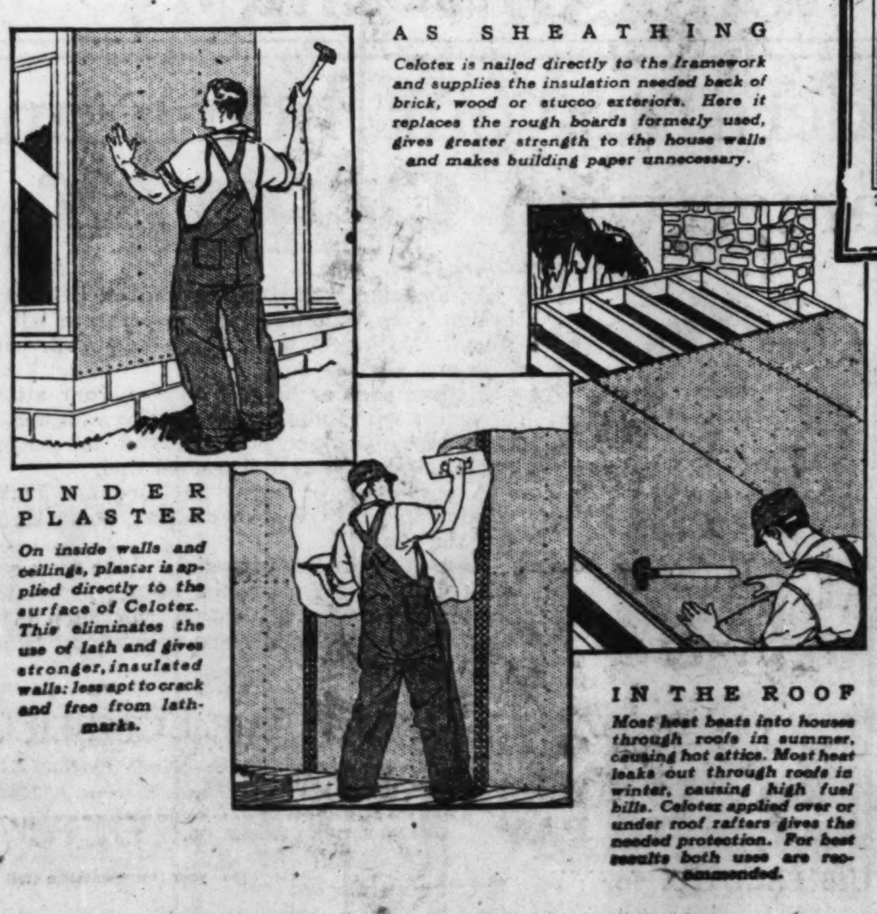
Chicago Builder Saves Fuel

B. Cimaglio & Company, progressive Chicago builders, recently made an interesting test of Celotex.

Careful records were kept of the cost of heating two apartments—the Newcastle, located at Newcastle and Altgeld Street; and the Wrightwood, located at Neva and Wrightwood Avenues. These buildings are identical in design, cubical content and construction—with the exception that Celotex Insulating Lumber was used throughout the Newcastle apartment in place of lath.

At the end of six months, the Wrightwood apartment had cost on the average of $31.25 for fuel per flat per month—the Newcastle, insulated with Celotex, had cost only $19.00 per flat per month.

The Newcastle Apartments, Newcastle and Altgeld Streets, Chicago, where this test was made. This apartment was insulated.



AS SHEATHING

Celotex is nailed directly to the framework and supplies the insulation needed back of brick, wood or stucco exteriors. Here it replaces the rough boards formerly used, gives greater strength to the house walls and makes building paper unnecessary.

UNDER PLASTER

On inside walls and ceilings, plaster is applied directly to the surface of Celotex. This eliminates the use of lath and gives stronger, insulated walls: less apt to crack and free from lath-marks.

IN THE ROOF

Most heat beats into houses through roofs in summer, causing hot attics. Most heat leaks out through roofs in winter, causing high fuel bills. Celotex applied over or under roof rafters gives the needed protection. For best results both uses are recommended.

FOR OLD HOUSES

In homes already built, a big measure of Celotex comfort and economy may be secured by lining attics and basements with it. In the attic an extra finished room can be made by nailing Celotex to the roof rafters. In the basement line ceiling with Celotex.

SAYS ROOF TANK IN TOWER SAVES OWNER MONEY

Architect Lindstrom Tells Why.

ROBERT S. LINDSTROM.

Robert Seth Lindstrom, former vice president of the Illinois Society of Architects and a former architect for the Central Manufacturing district, writes THE TRIBUNE a letter which calls attention to the fact that putting unsightly roof tanks in sightly brick towers is a money saver for the owner in the long run, as well as a safeguard for the tank and the property in general.

He also calls attention to a fact overlooked by many builders and architects, that the inside of parapet walls should be of face brick, rather than common brick. This is from a utilitarian point of view, not from an esthetic one.

Added Protection from Fire.

"The writer has been reading with great interest the various topics from Sunday to Sunday in reference to ornamenting tanks on roofs of buildings.

"The writer was born and raised in Chicago and for many years a practicing architect in the city, therefore, naturally interested in any movement for the beautification of Chicago buildings.

"About sixteen years ago, when the writer was architect for the Central Manufacturing district of Chicago, many of the buildings erected by him were equipped with automatic sprinkling systems, necessitating large water tanks elevated from 25 to 35 feet above the roof, which were not only unsightly, but the cost and maintenance from year to year proved that the first cost of enclosing the tank in brick walls not only saved maintenance, but at the same time served as an added protection from fire. This was due to the fact that a tank inclosed in a tower will not freeze in the winter, nor will the valves and connections deteriorate from climatic conditions.

Free from Dampness.

"The writer also discovered that instead of building tanks with the exterior faced in common brick, that the cost for face brick of the same color and kind as the face of the building was only the difference in cost between common and face brick, and when the face brick were of a vitrous nature the inside of the tower was free from condensate and dampness caused by climatic conditions at all seasons of the year.

"When the water tanks are exposed above the roof a special heating apparatus for eeping the water from freezing was necessary. A tank tower in a manufacturing building was generally the stair tower, so that the heat from the stair hall kept the temperature of the air in the tower at a point where the water in the tank would not freeze.

"Portions of the building above the main roof line, including towers, penthouses and the inside of parapet walls, were faced with vitrified face brick for any brick work exposed to weather above the roof line deteriorates very rapidly if constructed and faced with a soft common brick.

Saving in Structural Steel.

"The facing of the tower with face brick, as well as the inside of the parapet walls, prevented moisture from entering into the wall and creating dampness in the upper floor of the building, at the same time saving fuel that is ordinarily required to keep the temperature of the upper floor to a point where condensate and moisture will not appear on the ceiling of the upper floor.

"In placing tanks in an inclosed tower above the roof line there is a saving in the structural steel frame for suport of the tanks, as the brick walls themselves of the tower will support the tank.

"The writer does not seek any professional honors as a 'Pioneer' in tank towers inclosing water tanks, but wishes to convey his experience to architects, engineers, and the building public."

Evanston Cradle Society Acquires Third Residence

Frank S. Cunningham has conveyed to the Cradle society title to the residence at 2049 Ridge avenue, Evanston. The Cradle society now owns two residences adjoining, which it uses as a home for babies not in the immediate possession of parents. The babies are prepared for adoption and there are usually from twenty to twenty-five at the home. The society, of which Mr. Cunningham is the president, is supported by voluntary contributions. The latest acquisition was made for future expansion.

SELLS EVANSTON HOME.

Herman Olson sold his residece at 930 Hinman avenue, Evanston, to William J. Drucker for a reported $22,500. The size of the lot is 40x175 feet. H. A. Wise represented the purchaser and Smart & Golee represented Mr. Olson.

FARM AND GARDEN

Dakota Refuses to Place All Its Hopes on Its Bumper Crops

Diversified Farming Keeps the Ranchers Solvent.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

ABERDEEN, S. D.—[Special Correspondence.]—Dakotans in the Aberdeen territory are getting ready for the shock that is coming with the crop shortage. Business men and ranchers who have gone through tough years before are heading an unofficial movement to keep calamity howlers out of this part of the country. They have had too much experience to allow a crop failure to scare them.

"If you are coming in here looking for gloom because our crops are slim this year, you have come to the wrong man," said an Aberdeen banker when I went in to talk crops with him. "It will take more than a small grain crop shortage to give us a permanent setback with our diversified agricultural program which is being rapidly developed on our ranches. We have taken an invoice of what we have, and on the whole we are making progress. Crop failures have occasionally happened here before and we have recovered. This state is comparatively new and we are beginning to appreciate that there is reason to be proud of our progress when the situation is viewed over a long period of years. We have plenty of evidence to indicate that our next thirty years will be as good as the last thirty."

The loss this year in this section, leading thinkers say, will be a year's time. They expect to hold their own and be ready to start in 1927 about where they were at the beginning of this year. The financial situation here is pointed to as the bright spot. Aberdeen boasts of no bank failures. The local bank clearings are expected to be $10,000,000 more than in 1924 and $2,000,000 more than last year. Deposits are increasing and loans to farmers are decreasing.

Cash Crops Help.

While the wheat dollar is still the big drawing card, ranchers are depending more each year upon their checks from chickens, eggs, cream, pigs, lambs, wool, potatoes, and other cash crops to carry them through the tight places, all the result of the varied program of farming that most of them are following.

Typical of the way producers are diversifying their interests is the case of a rancher near here who has 400 acres of land where he is growing this year 120 acres of corn, 80 acres of wheat, and a liberal acreage of alfalfa and sweet clover to furnish feed for his dairy cows, fifteen sows and pigs, and a flock of 200 hens and little chickens. It would take more than a small grain crop failure to put a rancher like that out of business.

Ranchers who have tried the diversified plan say they have learned they must have corn, sweet clover, alfalfa, chickens, and hogs so they can grow wheat profitably. Legume advocates say that with sweet clover put into the rotation every fifth year they can grow more wheat in four years than they can in five years without the clover. They now refer to the wild grass pastures as "live stock gymnasiums" in comparison to the luxuriant clover fields where cattle do not have to "run their heads off to get their fill."

Dairying Has Grown.

While the new plan of agriculture in this section is still young, dairying has already been developed to the point where almost every station platform along the railroads is piled high daily with cream and milk cans. In addition to the hundreds of cans of cream shipped out of this district every week there were more than 5,000,000 pounds of butter made at Aberdeen plants last year. Feed shortage is cutting down production on many individual farms this summer, but the output of cream in the territory is up to last year's record, because many grain growers are going into the dairy business, at least temporarily, to carry them through the crop shortage period.

There is one gloomy element entering the situation in this part of the state, as well as every one of the other twenty or more counties where livestock men are already being forced to sell their cattle because of feed shortage. Cattle raisers are threatened with a serious setback if the corn and the emergency crops fail to produce enough roughage to carry the breeding stock through until grass, next spring. Hay and pasture crops are short and the roughage crops that are yet growing are hanging in the balance, depending upon favorable weather during late summer and early fall.

Agriculturists point out that a grain crop failure only gives the ranchers a setback for one year, while if they are forced to sell off their foundation breeding stock they would be handicapped for at least five years.

Cattle Men Nervous.

So the South Dakota cattle men are a bit nervous. They have just restocked their ranches after the hard times they had a few years ago and these animals have not had time to pay their way. Every rancher is doing his best to stay with his breeding herd, for if he has to restock again he would have the double burden of paying for his new herd, as well as the old one. The feed supply this fall will determine what the livestock men have to face. Ranchers say that if the worst comes they will sell their herds before they will pay exorbitant prices for feed, as was done by some of the western cattle men a few years ago when they shipped feed into the range country, paying $40 a ton for hay and fed $80 worth of hay to $60 cows.

There will be plenty of money available for stockmen to buy feed. No. 2 yellow corn, selling here at Aberdeen, is headed for the dollar mark. But ranchers figure they can keep their hogs and make money feeding corn at that price when porkers sell at $12 or $13 a hundred. They expect to make money either raising feeder pigs to ship to feed lots in other states, or fatten them for the market on corn shipped into this territory. With the prospects for a short corn crop in sight there is likely to be an exchange of Dakota pigs for Iowa and Illinois corn.

Sheep Industry Increases.

With plenty of rains to make fall pasture, ranchers will be able to continue increasing the sheep population. There was a heavy clip of wool here this spring and the fleeces brought $2.50 or more each.

All of this is evidence of the way ranchers are going about the development of diversified farming, which has been advocated so strongly for the last five or six years throughout the central west and northwest. South Dakota is finding it an antidote for the troubles that go along with a crop shortage.

The turkey crop has been increased in this section. Last year North Dakota sold more than $25,000,000 worth of turkeys, and South Dakota sold more than half that many. The turkey, which was given a new start as an emergency here a few years ago, has been increasing in popularity. Grasshoppers and other pests were so bad a few seasons ago that turkeys were brought into the Dakotas to protect the crops. There was a time when a rancher couldn't trade a sheep for a turkey in the Dakotas.

Baby Beef Industry Proves Profitable to Western Rancher

VALLEY CITY, N. D.—[Special Correspondence.]—Frank Sanford rocks the cradle for two carloads of baby beeves produced by his herd of Aberdeen-Angus cattle every year and gets $15 a head for his work. He has been at it for twenty years and finds it the best paying proposition in the cattle industry.

On his 2,800 acre farm near Rogers, N. D., twenty-five miles northwest of here, Mr. Sanford keeps about 100 cows and raises an average of 90 calves every year. It costs him approximately $87 a head to produce the calves and within recent years the steer calves sold on the central market have brought a gross return of about $105 a head, or a net return of $15 a head. The best heifers are kept for breeding purposes and when the cows have reached the end of their period of usefulness they are sold.

The cattle are all pure breds. Various families are in the original herd of females, including Prides, Blackbirds, and Heather Blooms. New blood is introduced by using Blackbird sires.

Since the War.

Before the war when the raising of pure bred cattle for breeding purposes was a profitable business, Mr. Sanford sold many of his best animals as foundation stock to other farmers, but in recent years he has turned to the production of baby beeves for the market. He finds that it works in well with the varied system of farming that has been found so profitable recently in this state. The increase of from $35 to $50 a month for help has, of course, added to the cost of raising and fattening the baby beeves but the price has advanced so that his profit today is about the same as it was in 1914.

From the 90 head of calves he usually gets about 45 steers and an equal number of heifers. The steers are ready for the market when they are from 18 months to 2 years old, weighing about 1,050 pounds each.

Pasture breeding is practiced on the Sanford farm and the new calf crop is coming on at various times in the year, the majority of them coming between January and May. The first load is ready to market in April the following year and the next load in July.

How Calves are Raised.

The calves are allowed torun with the cows in the pasture for about five or six months and then weaned. In addition to the milk, the calves when a month old are started on a ration of oats and barley. About the second week in September the calves, along with hogs, are turned into a corn field. Here they are allowed to stay until snow covers the fields, usually about Dec. 1. While in the corn they also have access to sweet clover pasture. They usually get all the corn they want in two hours and then trek back to the clover fields.

When the fields are blanketed with snows the calves are put in a barn and kept in individual stancheons where they can be fed definite amounts of grain and silage. Twenty to thirty pounds of silage with about five pounds of ground barley is given each calf every day. The barley is varied depending upon the amount of corn in the silage. On warm suuy days the calves are allowed free run of a bedded barnyard. Racks filled with flax straw are kept in the yards. They get enough flax seed from the straw to take the place of oil meal that is ordinarily fed. During the last six weeks before the calves are marketed, corn is given in addition to the barley. They are started on a ration containing 20 per cent corn which is gradually increased until it makes up 75 per cent of the corn-barley mixture.

Demand for High Grade Steers.

Mr. Sanford says he finds baby beef raising profitable and a good way of handling beef animals because there is a good demand for the high grade steers. He does not have to carry them through more than one winter.

Mr. Stanford comes from a family of stockmen who have fed cattle in every state from Texas north to the Canadian line and he says that with the same quality of feed, equal or better gains can be produced in North Dakota than in any other state south of here. Winter weather is ideal for feeding here where the air is dry. You can't get the most economic gains on a steer with a wet hide, he said.

It takes less feed to put on a pound in feeding baby beeves than in feeding older steers. As a steer grows older it takes more pounds of feed to put on each pound of meat. Mr. Sanford usually gets from 1 to 1½ cent a pound more for his young steers than for old ones.

CO-OPERATIVE APARTMENTS MANAGEMENT SALE
CHICAGO

Mr. W. E. Macfarlane,
Manager of Classified Advertising,
Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Sir:

The response to a 108-line ad run exclusively in The Sunday Tribune of July 11th was so gratifying that we feel justified in calling your attention to the results. The advertised project is a 17-story apartment building known as "201 East Delaware Place," consisting of three to five room apartments. This building is being sold on the 100% co-operative plan, with the equity per apartment averaging $5,500.

Sixty-eight interested parties responded to this ad. Of this number eight purchased apartments having an aggregate value of $120,250, with a cash equity of $46,600. As a result of following up leads obtained on July 11th, we have since closed five more sales, which brings the total value of the apartments sold to $205,350.

It is interesting to note that the cost per inquiry was but $1.19, the cost per sale but $6.23, and the cost of sales, based upon the value of the apartments sold, was approximately 1-25th of 1% of that value.

With such marked success from this exclusive Tribune ad, we readily anticipate to "Grow with The Tribune in 1926."

Very sincerely yours,
KIRKHAM-BOHNEN, Inc.
Arthur Bohnen.
AB:EH

They agreed to act as agent for Mr. Henry in the sale of equities in the 138 different apartments being offered in this high grade building. On Sunday, July 11th, Kirkham-Bohen, Inc., ran a 108-line Want Ad in The Tribune exclusively. The ad was thoroughly "Tell More" in character. It described in a convincing manner the various advantages and desirable features to be found in the apartments, besides giving the whole ad legibility and good display.

The letter from Mr. Bohnen tells the story of their success. Thirteen apartment equities, representing $205,350 in sales, were consummated by Saturday, July 17th. Sixty-eight good prospects were forthcoming, sixty of whom called in person, and of this sixty ten got away because the salesmen were literally swamped. Remember, these results were from one good "Tell More" ad in The Tribune.

In and out of season The Chicago Tribune has demonstrated its unusual ability to assist realtors in selling co-operative apartments and in renting unfurnished apartments. Now, in the height of the renting and selling season, dealers having contracts with builders or owners should take the fullest advantage of this great selling influence that carries their messages to more than a million readers. Innumerable times The Tribune has proven its ability to sell when well written, detailed, carefully thought out want ad copy is used. Don't wait for some other dealer to reach your prospects first. Get started now. Your profits and the profits of your owners depend upon getting all vacant apartments rented, all co-operative apartments sold. Phone Superior 0100. Ask a Tribune man to call.

The New Bismarck Hotel

and Metropolitan Office Building—New Palace Theatre (Orpheum Circuit)

Another Episode Is Written in the Romance of a Greater Chicago

WESTWARD from La Salle Street to Wells Street, and fronting an entire block along Randolph, an immense structure of masonry and steel stands as a monument to a past chapter in Chicago's history. It is a far cry back to the founding of the old-time Bismarck, but all that was essential to the institution—its very character and personality—survives in its new home.

The quality valued most by many of its patrons was a spirit of intimate friendliness, which they could not associate with a building many times its former size. To them the new Bismarck is a revelation. Much of the former hotel's interior is duplicated in the new; many of the former personnel remain, and the cordial, individual attention received by the arriving guest strikes exactly the same note as in earlier days.

But in appointments and equipment the transformation is complete. The utmost that modern ingenuity can devise is in evidence throughout the building. A conspicuous example is the plumbing fixtures, which realize a precision and efficiency never before attained in sanitary engineering.

As the Watrous installations throughout the entire Eitel Central Block furnish a comprehensive example of these closet combinations, the management has allowed us to suggest them as a subject for detailed study by all who wish to examine their special features.

Watrous

Flush Valves and Duojet Closets

Installed Throughout Eitel Central Block

WATROUS FLUSH VALVE INSTALLED IN COMBINATION WITH DUOJET FLOOR CLOSET

THE design of the Watrous Duojet Closet eliminates the narrow outlet passage which is needed beyond the trap in the usual single jet type to maintain syphonic action, but which often causes clogging and overflowing, making costly repairs necessary.

In the Watrous Duojet Closet, the outlet passage is far wider beyond the trap than at the entrance, so that anything that can enter can escape. Two powerful converging jets effect an immediate and thorough flush.

The Watrous Flush Valve delivers the exact quantity of water needed by the type of bowl with which it is used. And, as the quick flush effected by Duojet action uses far less water than in the usual single-jet type, the maximum saving of water occurs when the Duojet bowl is used in combination with the Watrous Flush Valve.

The Watrous wall type, shown on the right, operates by the same Duojet action as the floor type. It obviously simplifies the work of cleansing the toilet room floor; also, it promotes speed and economy in erecting new buildings by eliminating closet connections in floors.

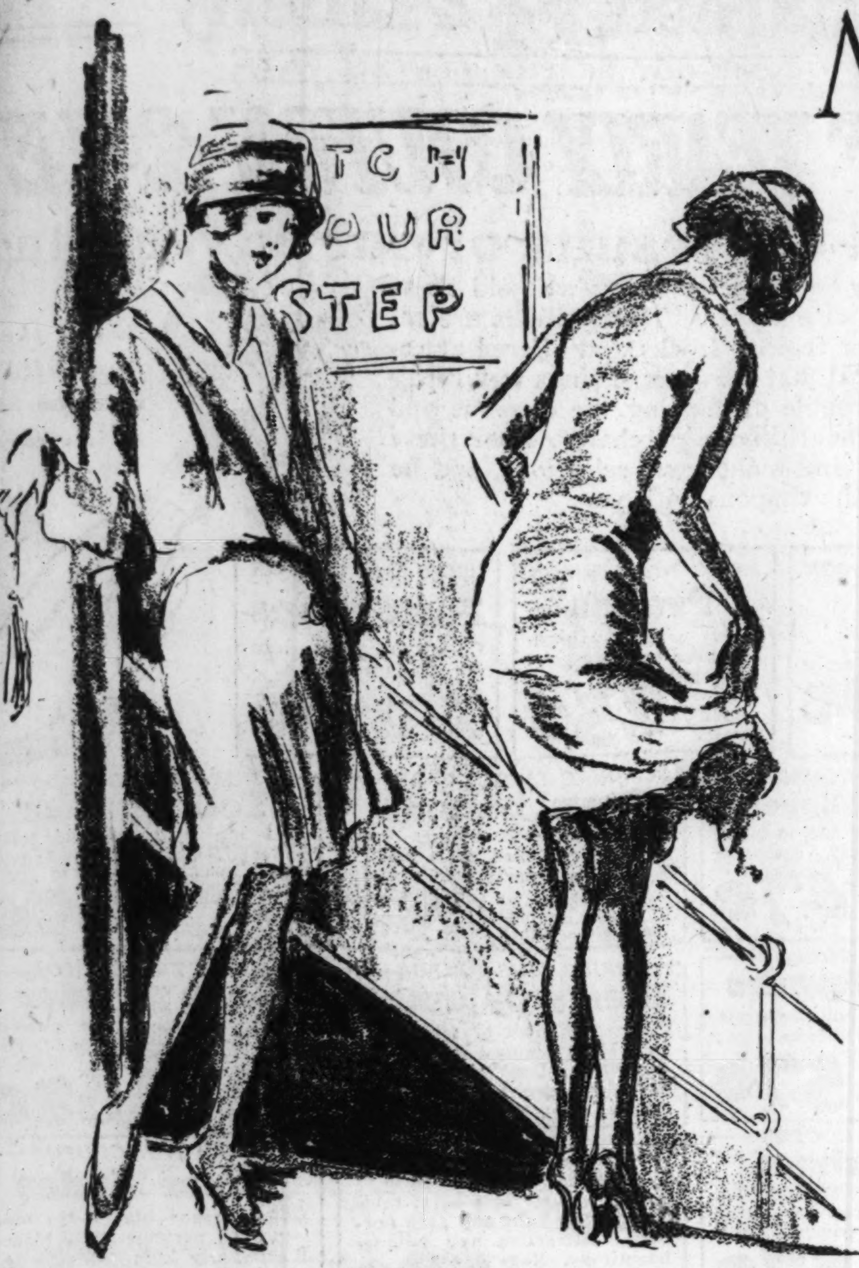
MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

By Sara Moore



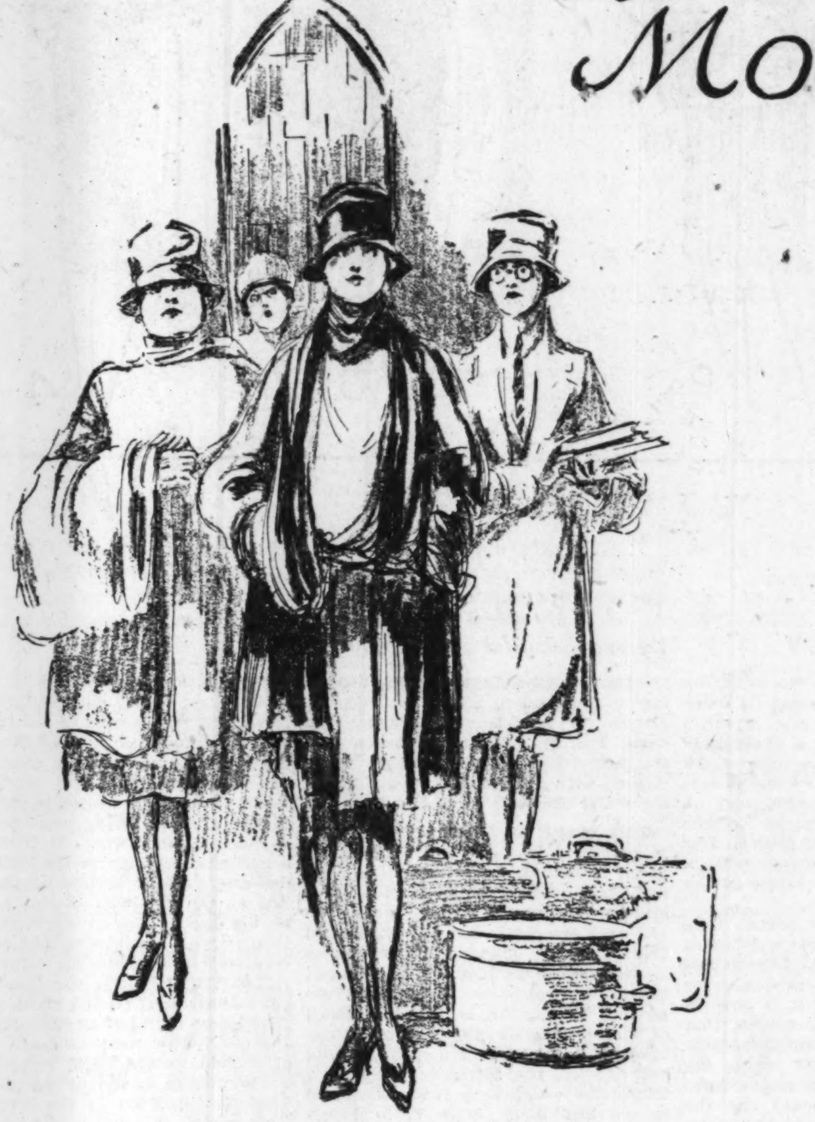
Mamie Hickey Noda at R. K.

The Gentlemen.

"A powder vending machine in the men's washroom! . . . Why didn't some one quietly drown . . . Valentino years ago? . . . Do women like the type of 'man' who pats pink powder on his face in a public washroom? Hell's bells. O, sugar!"—From an editorial in W. G. N.

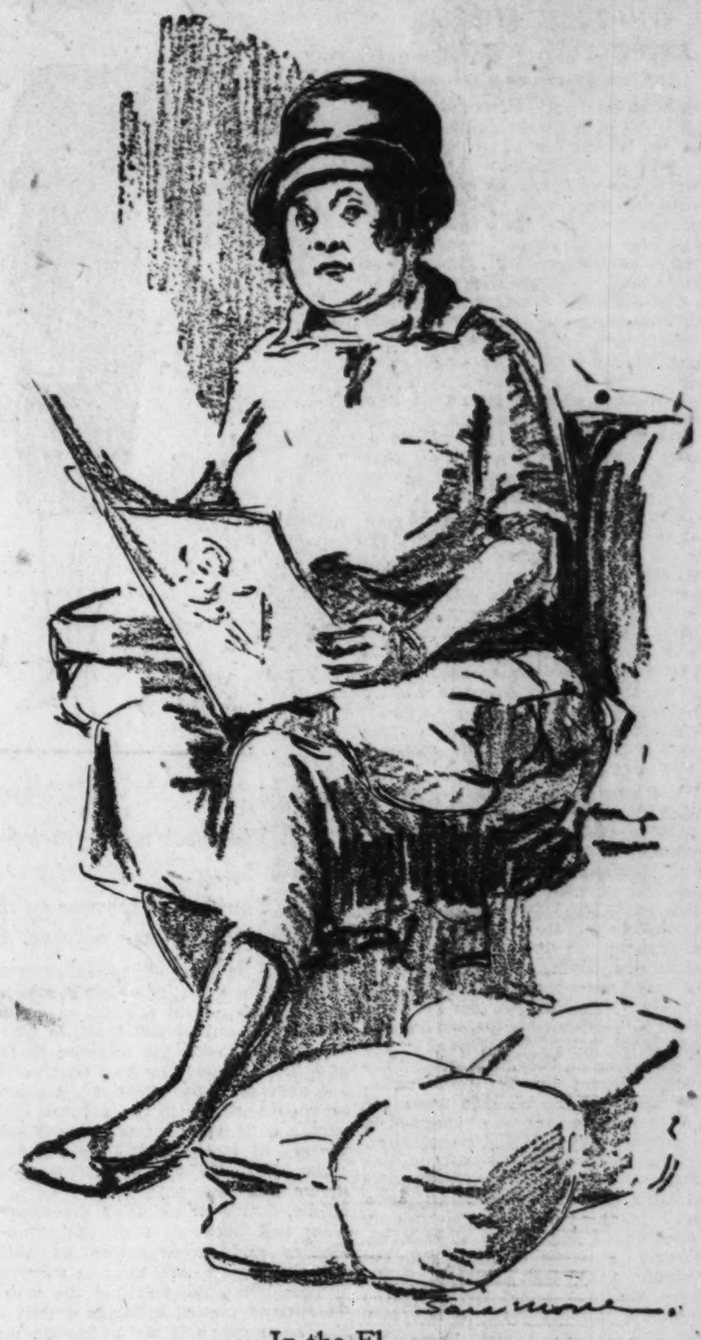
I, too, "take my fun where I find it,"
I've dated some cards in my time;
Call 'em Romeos, panics, collegiates,
But few of the lot seemed "prime."
One was a second baseman,
One was a broker's clerk,
One was a butter 'n' egger,
One of 'em couldn't find work.

I've taken my pick of boy friends—
Second base was the king of the plot;
I loved at first sight when he started a fight
And drove half a team from the lot.
I've taken my men as I found 'em,
The polished along with the rough—
But I shall fight shy of the new dainty guy
Who pinks up his cheeks with a puff.



Because.

I shall be faithful although faithfulness
Is out of style and I'll be thought a nut;
I shall be faithful—nothing more nor less
Unqualified by if or but.
I shall be faithful to the end—ah, yes,
Although you shrug and doubt and shout, "Tut, tut!"
Not that I love you; you're a saltless mess.
I shall be faithful for I'm in a rut.



In the El.

She sat with some one's laundry on her knees
And read a magazine—picked from the seat.
Her flabby face was white with grim fatigue,
Her feet and hands puffed with hard work and heat.
She read: "A woman owes it to herself
To keep her youth; all beauty is her due."
She turned a page. Displayed: "This sable wrap —Twelve thousand dollars—would look well on you."

Our glances met. She eyed my meek best dress;
My unshined shoes and hat just-out-of-style,
And then we almost snubbed the high hat book,
Quite comforted because we BOTH could smile.

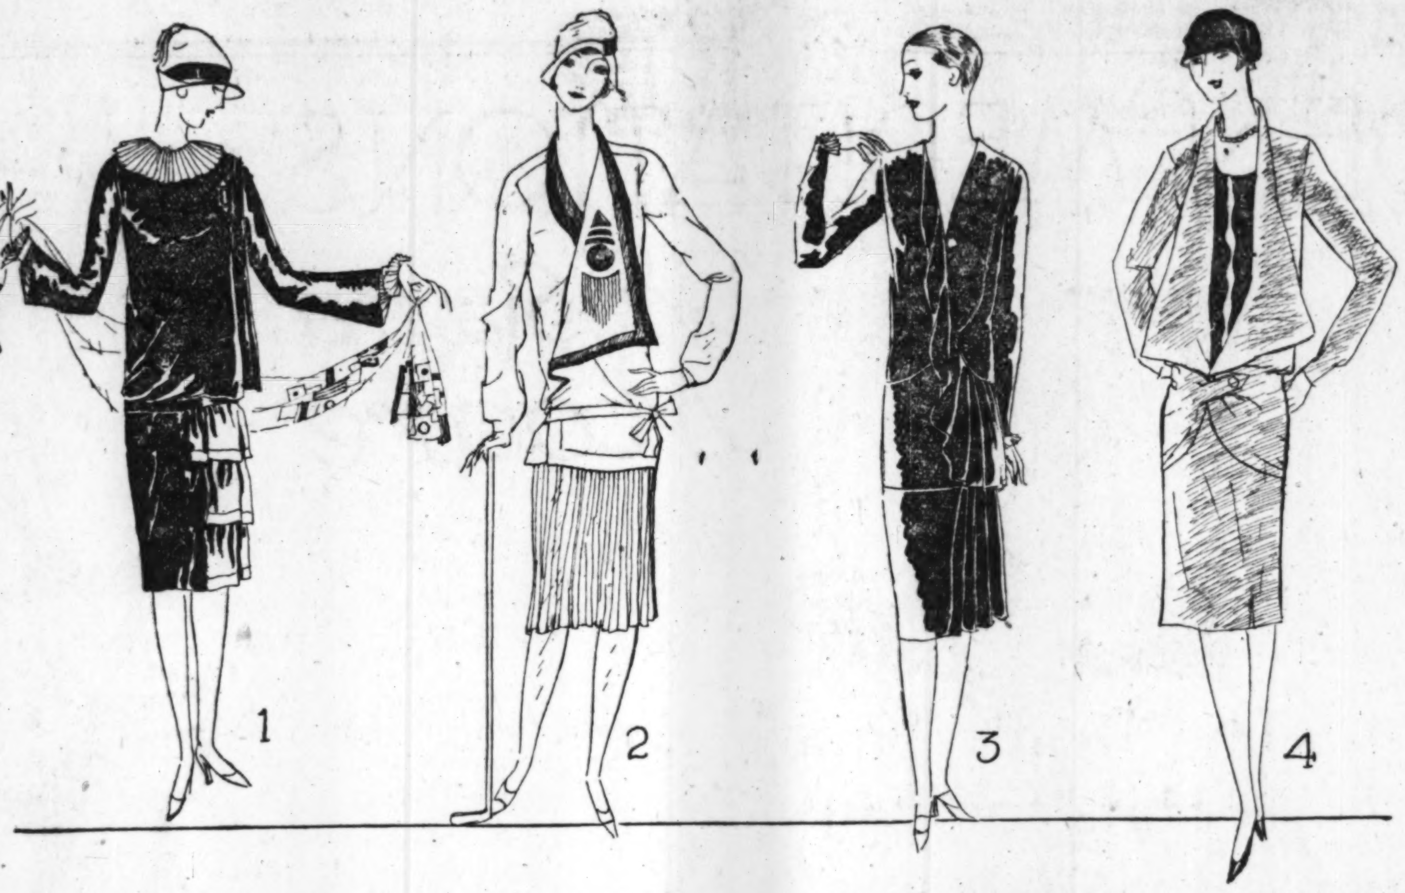
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN FRONT AND SIDE LINES OF THE MODE.

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—Special Correspondence.]—All changes in fashion follow the procedure of a new theatrical production. That is, there is almost invariably a "tryout" of any new style before its grand metropolitan première. In June most of these first appearances occur at the races—Longchamps or Auteuil or Saint Cloud. In July they are to be seen at some resort where fashionable people are gathered, and that generally means Evian, Vichy, or Dinard. Sometimes, but not often, in Deauville. The season there does not reach its height until August, and at that time new fashions are being presented officially in Paris. The value of Deauville is chiefly to "cinch" a new mode that is being shown professionally in the salons of Paris couturiers. If it goes in Deauville that is a pretty good sign that it will be seen later on the Avenue des Champs Elysées and 5th avenue, Michigan boulevard, etc. Sometimes the tryout occurs fully a year before the mode takes hold and becomes a popular style. However, this is not often. In any case the fashion expert has a hard life, forever following up these premières and testing the reaction of the public thereto. Holding a composite wrist to get the pulse beat is a task that taxes the dexterity of the most experienced.



1. This black velvet frock from Doeuillet shows the new "all on the side" flare.

2. The single big rever on the vareuse blouse of this white crepe de chine frock gives a different kind of front fullness.

3. Tempering the jabot to the surpliced line on this black velvet frock and concentrating the flare of the skirt on one side gives a new line of much importance.

4. This model of royal blue crepe presents a novel adaption of the ever beautiful directoire line.

We are presenting today a group of models that are offered after a series of attendances at out-of-Paris first productions, group wrist holdings, and so forth. I want you to consider these examples of changes in silhouette which Paris has offered, because they are already significant indications of the direction in which the ranks of fashion are moving, and you might as well make some mental notes thereon to guide you when you get ready to choose your clothes for the coming season. First take in thoroughly the concentration on side lines that is the novelty offered by our first model. This model is the blossom from the plant of fashion that was expressed in the bolero waist and the tiered skirt. Doeuillet, whose creation this is, has reduced these items to quarter parts and thus given us something really new. Also this particular one-side-only expression of bolero and tiers is becoming to a vastly increased number of women whose lack of height, avoirdupois, and such handicaps prevented them from wearing the straight bolero waist and all around tiered skirt. This new model car carries all of the grace of the stream-line and the youthfulness of the before mentioned bolero and tiers. It is one of the real achievements of the year, for which M. Doeuillet deserves a vast amount of credit.

The material of the frock is black velvet, and, with the increase in the chic of black and the hold that velvet has upon feminine affections, it should be a sure winner in the autumn style contests. Three-quarters of the blouse portion is straight, slightly blousing waist, but the left side front and under arm section is given over to a bolero, which is its chief distinction. The bell sleeves, with their inner sleeves and wrist ruffles of beige crêpe georgette, are ideal in carrying to completion the spirit of the waist. The round plaited collar is a part of this harmony, and the marcasite pin, with its cut out monogram, is also essential.

As for the skirt, it is, on the right side, a plain, rather narrow skirt; on the left side it is composed of three ruffled tiers of black velvet, scantily gathered. The girdle is a three inch tight band. When I saw this model at Dinard the lady who wore it carried a béige crêpe georgette scarf on which were painted Picasso designs in black, Indian red, and brown. Her hat was of beige bengaline, with a black band and a beige tassel at the top of the draped crown.

Our second model is a Jeanne Lanvin design, which presents a different kind of front movement. Lanvin has been working out this one big rever idea for some time, and it is now, in the heart of the summer season, that it begins to loom an an important item of the grand chic. This single big rever that practically covers the front of a simple vareuse blouse has the inestimable advantage of being becoming to both slim and stout figures. Lanvin is famous for dressing the small woman, but in this rever idea she has achieved a line which those women with a surplus of weight above the waist line will bless her for.

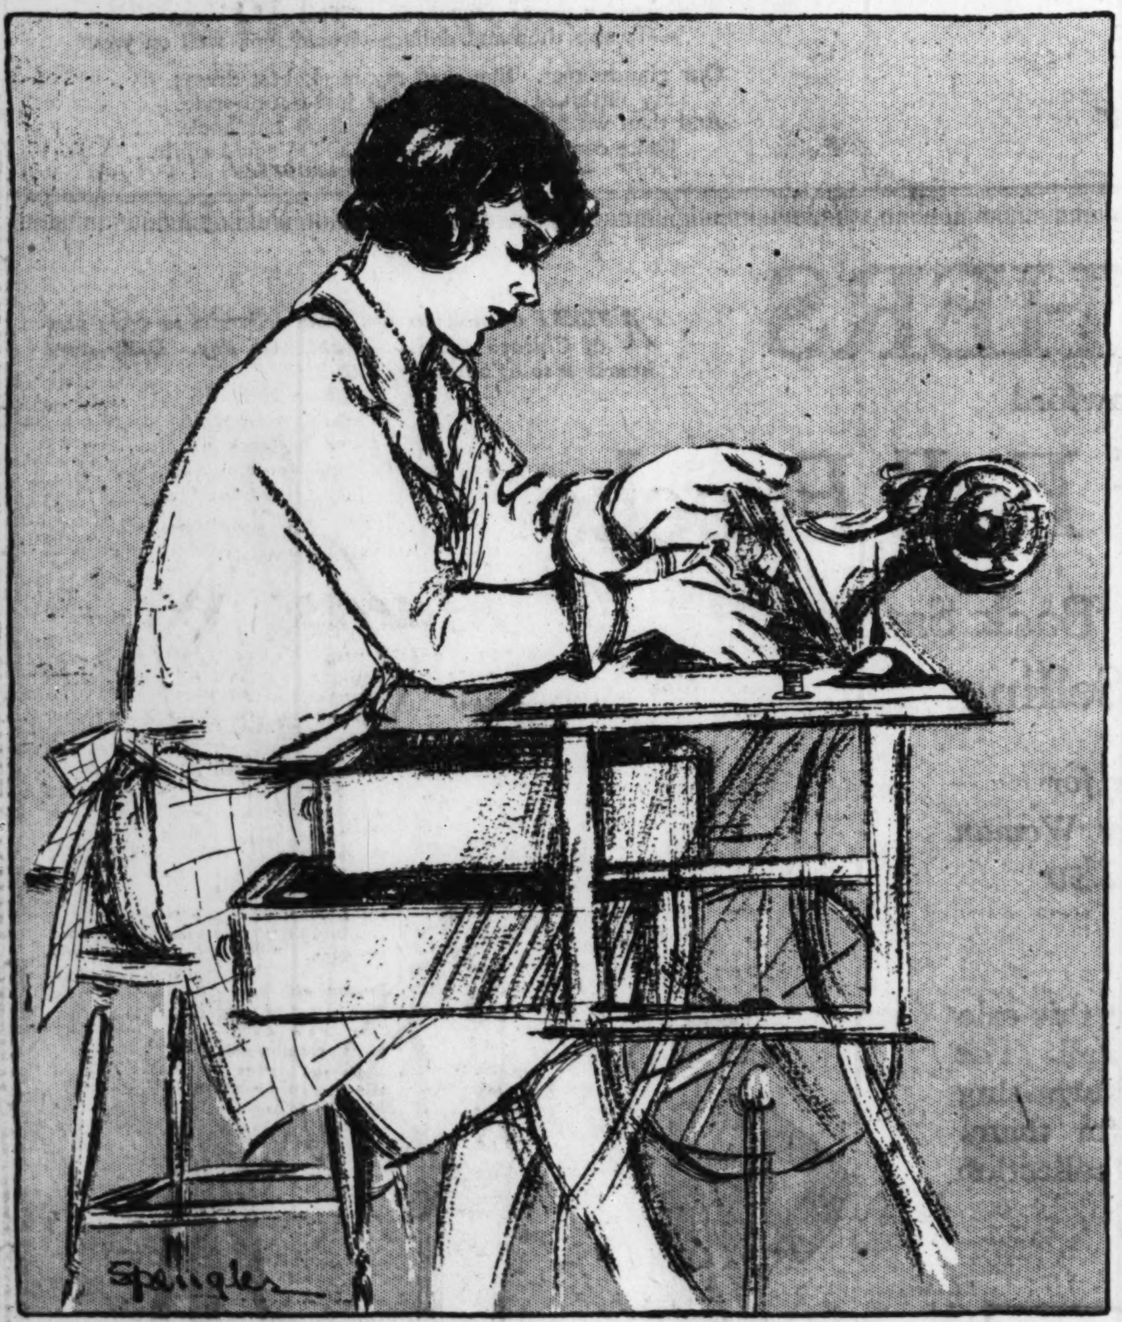
This model, as I saw it at Dinard, is developed in white crêpe de chine, but it is also shown in dark blue, red, and black. The waist has loose bishop sleeves that end in simple band cuffs and that are cut in one with the band that tops the shoulder. The blouse terminates on the hips and is fastened around the waist with a narrow tie girdle. The collar is the big detail of distinction. It passes around the neck in a double band of black and red and on the left side becomes a triangular waist deep rever, bordered in red and black, with an embroidered design in these two colors which covers most of the white triangle center. The skirt is an all around plaited affair with knife plaits about one inch deep. They increase in size at the hem line. The waist is in reality a jacket which is open to the hips in front and is worn over a straight slip of crêpe de chine to which the plaited skirt is attached, so that the set of the frock is as perfect as that of a stiff crinoline bound tailleur.

Another new version of the side line concentration that is coming into vogue is shown in our third offering, a Louise Boulanger creation worn at a garden party given recently at Armenonville, where the small but select group present presented a forecast of future fashions. This interpretation of side fullness seems to me to be one that is altogether irresistible, for it keeps the vareuse blouse to which we are all so attached and yet presents it in a new and exquisite line. The hip length blouse, as you see, has a surplice closing which is trimmed by a ruffle that begins on the right shoulder and extends around to the waistline on the left side. A line of piping on the opposite side repeats this beautiful curve. The sleeves are long and comfortably easy in fit, with plaited ruffles that fall over the hands. The skirt is straight on the right side and falls into a series of circular ripples on the left. The gown is made entirely of chiffon weight black velvet.

The fourth model shows a concentration of fashion in the front lines. This model, of royal blue crepe marocain, has a more than hip length bodice, with two very large revers extending to the normal waistline, a curved and tabbed closing below, with a single button fastening. It was worn by a smart Parisienne at Dinard last Sunday, and attracted a lot of favorable attention from those experts of women's clothes from overseas, who are here using their keen eyes to pick up new ideas in dress before the openings. The sleeves with their fitted wristbands are cut in a single piece and the skirt is straight and quite short, but well below the in-curve that precedes the knees. No shorter skirt can be found in any French group of women where good taste is the criterion.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

By CLOTILDE



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde. The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

AIDS TO SEWING.

EVERY once in so often the family sewing machine should be thoroughly gone over. Work of any kind is made easier, and for that reason liked better, if one understands the value and necessity of taking proper care of one's tools.

If a machine is used every day it will need some attention at the day's end, but if used as the average woman employs it, a thorough overhauling once every two or three weeks will keep it running well.

If you haven't any machine oil sold by your machine dealer, buy pure sperm oil. Once in a while it is a good idea to use kerosene instead of machine oil. Use the kerosene in all the oil places, run the machine to get it circulating freely, and let it stand over night. This will have loosened all the old dirt by morning.

Have a small brush and a cloth and clean every part of the machine. Then oil sparingly, run the machine, and wipe away any oil that may spread around. Most of us oil it too lavishly. When it is possible, let the machine stand over night before using.

Pay attention to directions that come with a sewing machine, telling the right sized needle to use with thread of a certain number, the right length of stitch, etc. In most machines the tension never has to be touched, but where adjusting is necessary, try the stitch first on some scraps of cloth, using the material you are to sew on, and the usual number of thicknesses. Then if the stitch isn't perfect you can try on the scraps instead of injuring whatever you may be making.

A real sewing room is a wonderful convenience to women who sew much, but if you can't spare space for that, you can arrange everything conveniently for a day's sewing when the time comes. Set up an ironing board, get out your sleeve board and iron, tracing wheel, French chalk, cutting board or table, and everything else you will need. The dining room table is often used for cutting on, and a piece of white oilcloth is fine to cover it with, and when not in use it will keep for years if rolled on a stick.

Don't be discouraged if you have to take out and put away the many things required for a successful day's sewing. It will repay you and the chances are, if you will try these suggestions you will find the work fascinating, because it will be so much easier and consequently better done.

Never cut or sew on material that is not smooth (you can see the necessity for the ironing board). Most work requires that bastings be removed and pressing done as it progresses, else it will not look well.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Long Enough.

I had purchased a new dress and tried it on to show my husband.

"Is it long enough?" I asked.

"Yes, it will be long enough before you get another one," he replied.

MRS. D. C. G.

Perfectly Logical.

He—Why do you say such hard things about Bridget to our callers? She's a treasure; the best cook we ever had.

She—How little you men understand your wives' problems. If I told the truth about her those women would be falling over themselves in their efforts to get her away from us.

S. F. H.

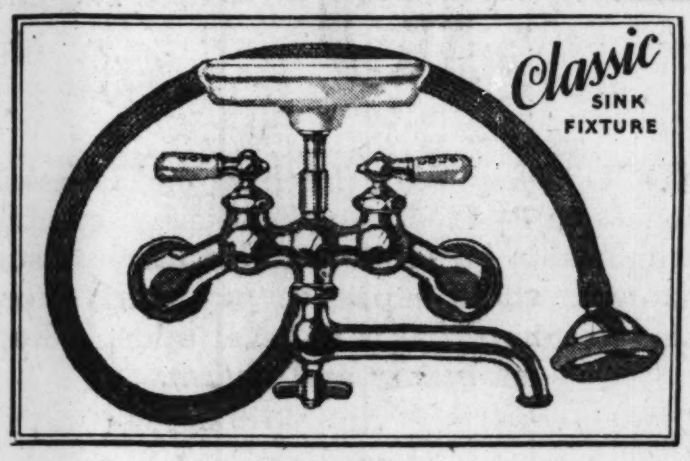
One Hot Day.

One hot day my husband was getting ready to go over to the corner drug store. When I learned where he was going I cried eagerly, "Take me with you; I want a soda."

To which he replied, "Well, 'sodas' your old man."

MRS. J. M.



Find the woman who wouldn't like one

IMPOSSIBLE! For the Classic Sink Fixture is a shining example of everything that women want a kitchen faucet to be. It is a combination of all the ideas and suggestions that have occurred to women during years of struggle with unhandy, old-fashioned faucets that were mere faucets and nothing more.

Long swinging spout; handy hose and spray permanently attached; drip-free nozzle; self-draining soap-dish; adjustable to fit any arrangement of piping; easy to attach.

With the working unit that's changed as easily as a light bulb

But best of all, it's a Chicago Faucet—made with the standardized renewable unit that can be taken out as quickly and easily as an electric bulb. The "seat" is replaceable same as the washer, being separate from the fixture itself. This means it will outlast the building.

Get a Classic from your plumber. The price is only $15.00—less than a first payment on most household conveniences used much less frequently. For further information—call, write or telephone

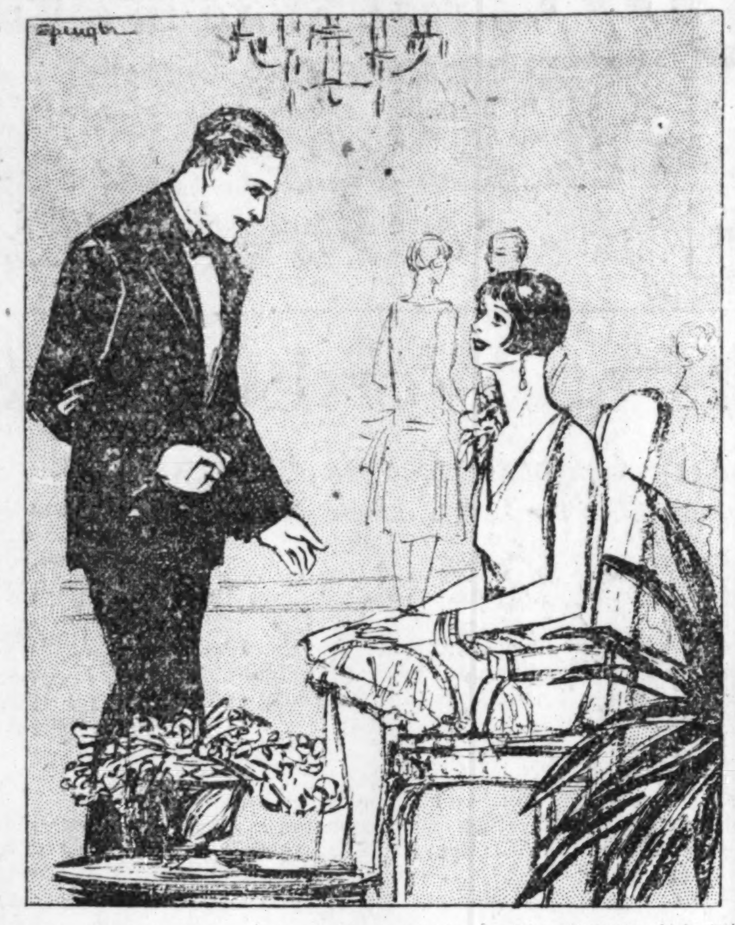
MAKING FRIENDS - - - by Doris Blake

Reg. U S Pat Off

No Girl Need Be Lonely If She Will Interest Herself in Others.



TO ALL you young women who write me complaining about being lonely, about receiving no attention from men, let me offer you the advice to:

Widen the circle of your acquaintance.

Accept every opportunity to widen it even though an invitation does not seem to hold out any particular promise of meeting men. You never can tell whose sister, or cousin, or friend you may meet and through her get to know a man who will make life less monotonous for you. You never get anywhere sitting home brooding over the fact that you are left out of things.

The wider your acquaintance the more likely you are to meet eligible men and the greater your opportunity of meeting the one who will change the whole face of your future life, and efface the lonely hours of which you now complain.

Seldom, indeed, does it happen that one meets her fate in the confines of a narrow acquaintance. Men's tastes are varied. One man may meet fifty girls before one attracts him for life. Quite as variegated is the taste of women. You may find it necessary to make friends of dozens of men before that mutual attraction you're looking for is found.

Hiding One's Light.

There is no use hiding your light under a bushel. No matter how worthy you may be of the best matrimonial prize, nor how fine and interesting your character, you cannot attract men unless you give them a chance to know you, can you?

The world of men makes no beaten track to your door, even though you would make a better wife than your neighbor. Maybe in bygone days when mothers and aunts could go about praising the domestic virtues of young women, men would go and seek them out. Even so, we have our doubts that the good work was accomplished without considerable first hand help from the girl herself.

If a girl wants a position she would be thought a bit out of her head if she stayed at home and waited for some employer to send an envoy after her. She'd wait! And she'd keep on waiting!

Instead, she puts on her most attractive bib and tucker and goes searching for opportunity and finds it, too.

If marriage is the position a girl honestly wants, she has to adopt a course somewhat similar. She may not go applying for a job as wife, but she does haunt the marts where eligibles are liable to hold forth.

Matchmaking mothers outfit their daughters and take them off to resorts and watering places where they are paraded before the eyes of men. On the surface this procedure may appear a bit crude, but is it? Mothers know their daughters may be the most charming creatures on earth, but what will that avail them if they are hidden away from view?

There are some few women, of course, born with the art of attracting with little effort on their part, but your average girl has to earn her popularity, and her first step is to get out into circles where that popularity is possible.

Utilizing Free Hours.

It is true that propinquity in business has developed many a romance. But not all business places are equipped with eligible young men. And there are numbers of other young women who in daily contacts have little opportunity of getting to know individuals of the opposite sex.

So free hours must be utilized to advantage unless one wants to continue wasting her talents on barren evenings.

No one else can make you popular. No one else can widen your circle of friends for you. That is something you have to plan and do for yourself.

I know girls who through sheer inertia or extreme diffidence have let themselves drift on year after year into discouraged, disheartened souls, their chances to attract minimizing with each passing year. With a little exertion they might just as well have bestirred themselves to some form of social activity.

This drifting on with the tide, hoping that something will turn up magically, is all quite well in story books and movie plots, but in your busy workaday world of men it hasn't the happy ending, as a rule.

No girl is without opportunity of knowing other girls. If she will interest herself in them sufficiently, they'll return the compliment and include her in their social doings. Eventually, through these new friends and their friends, the circle will be so widened that it will be impossible to escape getting acquainted with men.

It is all in setting the ball to rolling. It may be a little hard in the beginning, especially with a girl who is shy, or with a girl who is without aggressiveness. But since shyness is not a particularly desirable virtue and certainly a handicap to opportunities, the sooner one forces herself out of it the better.

Don't Be Too Ritzy.

Attend every social function you can. You need that contact with other human beings. Make little occasions of entertainment yourself and call in the few people you do know. Make up your mind you are going to make people like you. And don't forget the rule for doing this is taking a genuine interest in what the other fellow is thinking, planning and accomplishing.

Don't be too ritzy in your ideas about men. If an escort does turn up who isn't all you have dreamed yours to be, give him a chance to reveal himself—and to introduce you to his friends. Providing a man is of good character. I think the girl wise who accepts his invitation, even though she may not fancy him as a suitor. Simply because a man does take you out is no reason to suppose he is bound to hang on indefinitely. If he enjoys your company you are under no obligation to him other than to be as courteous and nice as you would be to a girl friend who included you in a party. The thing is that he may be the means of your meeting other men—possibly the man.

If you are nice to him, naturally he will say complimentary things about you and this word of mouth advertising never did a young woman any harm. Again, you never can tell about these seemingly uninteresting men. They often have the most desirable men friends, and they, themselves, with some interested girl to inspire them, turn out not infrequently to be highly desirable mates.

I don't think any girl of ordinary attractions need pine away for lack of friends if she will only come out of herself and make an effort to be friendly.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

CANNING PROBLEMS.

HERE and there, and widely, over the country there are trained food students who have devoted days and weeks, and even months to canning problems. Find out, if you care to, what they have done in California! These students are well versed in chemistry and generally, but not always, are greatly interested in diets.

In the government's food laboratories in Washington, in state institutions and schools of various types, an enormous amount of work has been done to perfect our knowledge of the preserving of foods, and to spread this knowledge by printing it in pamphlets or bulletins. In one case the worker is in what we may call "boy work," directing boys' clubs and so connected with hundreds of thousands of individuals. Girls' clubs, and girls' and mothers' clubs have canned and canned and canned, proudly and winningly, that is, they have won prizes, and some of them have even been sent to France to teach canning there, where Francois Appert started the whole canning business. That is, he was the first to make practical application of the method of preserving food by putting it in cans or bottles, which he hermetically sealed, putting them then in water to boil for a longer or shorter time, depending on what the food was.

Appert did not have the right idea as to what spoiled food, but Pasteur came along and taught the world just what it was that caused fermentation and putrefaction. Though his theory of why food spoiled was wrong Appert's method of preserving it by sealing and cooking it was correct, and the world owes him a great debt.

The canning trades owe Appert most, but it is probably in the commercial laboratories that most of the work has been done to perfect methods for keeping food. If as much attention had been given to making the food canned commercially of an epicurean grade, canned foods would be in far higher repute today than they are. There are few of them I want to put into my carefully planned diet. (I try to eat at every meal so as to maintain my health over a long period of time).

But to get back to our original subject: Commercial institutions of various sorts, manufacturers of cans and canning accessories, put out booklets on canning that contain a great deal of valuable information, in many cases, though it is rather likely to be dull reading. The best work on oven canning, and it is good and highly reasonable, is put out by a commercial institution, but the woman who directs the cooking in their laboratories gained repute as a teacher, and as a writer of cook books widely used as texts in schools.

As for us and company, with this writer, we have not spent days and hours canning, but we have tried to keep track of all that has been done by others, not infrequently taking their conclusions and doing some work ourselves for our readers' benefit.

Pressure Cooker Canning.

For instance, we get letters asking us about canning with the pressure cooker, usually from those who have had the liquid pulled right out of their cans while the processing was going on. First and last, we have heard enough to believe that despite its especial advantages, the pressure cooker as a canning device has its special drawbacks, as do most of our utensils. Each one, if it is worth anything at all, is likely to have some lack, no matter what its merits, but in some cases the merits are great, and the insufficiencies small, and against it is the other way around, yet a single merit may be of so much account that we have to have the utensil. For instance, a Scotch bowl may be fine for frying, but what else is it good for? Other utensils may be just as good for frying and have a score of other uses.

Knowing what we do about the pressure cooker, we were greatly entertained by what Anna Merritt East said about one in "Kitchenette Cookery" in 1917, and knew about them before that. We think the correct advice to give to inquirers is this: Go or write to the manufacturers of your cooker and get their help. In general it will be reliable, but not always. There is one cooker on the market we would not give house room. We fear the makers had none but the lowest of commercial reasons for putting out this imitation of a good thing—all too common a practice in many fields, but we hate quack kitchen utensils in special. Imitators who put them out should hear no good of themselves.

No Standardizing of Fruits and Vegetables.

As everybody knows such a fruit as the currant produces by far the best jelly and jam if it is picked on a dry day and is cooked at once. But if the season has been wet it is something else again, and in the case of such a fruit as the strawberry the weather does no end of things to make the product of varying worth. And with much of our modern market dependence upon the fruits we use, there are all sorts of things to be taken into consideration. In some cases an incipient mold may have started on the fruit, or there may be some differences like those in milk of different ages [in hours]. Yet people do use loads of market fruits in canning, and with success, because some people do have a natural born instinct about foods.

The Plum Abundance.

Partly because they travel so well perhaps, and are so easily grown, or for some reason or other, we have an increasing abundance of plums in our markets, and in greater variety each year. There are many delicious conserves that can be made from them, although we have not the brandy for brandied plums, and most of us have neither the disposition nor the facilities for making plum wine as "they" used to do. Some of the conserves are better with meat than with anything else, and excellent for that.

It does not make much difference in conserving prune plums whether the skins are removed or not, but the acid and almost barbaric strength of some plums seems to lie in their skins, yet when these are removed a marmalade of them may be practically as mild as one of apricots.

In our great horticultural period, just before the civil war, at least 350 varieties of plums were known, including a number of wild sorts, and there is no reason—there has been a Burbank since—why we should not know more today. At any rate, plums now are a highly available fruit, and we can afford to spend some time hunting out old methods and facts about them. The great philosopher John Locke, who wrote the "Essay on the Human Understanding," wrote on the subject, and even gave recipes for drying this fruit. And we may discover other proofs of the fact that there was an ancient delight in plums, both in the wild and the domesticated, worth our attention, for the prune plum was considered "unsurpassed among fruits" for certain healthful qualities, among them that medicinal one given various names, but meaning "laxative."

On Knowing Plums.

The great evolutionist took up the question of almond, peach and plum ancestry, and since there is no monkey ghost in the evolution of fruits, there is no one who could find cause for offense in looking into this subject. The almond lost its fleshy cover, or the plum developed one, and see what a difference. All plums are supposed to have been derived from a "prunus," and the Latin names for most of them have this word as a part of their cognomens. And the name has so wide a meaning that it includes the peach and the apricot. There are plums with beautiful names, interesting habits, and of special histories, that make them like charming people.

The Green Gage family is rather aristocratic. It is the "Reine Claude," which receives so many mentions in French literature, having been introduced into France by Queen Claude, the wife of Francis I. Its royal touch was lost to the English because an English family named Gage obtained a number of the trees from the monks of Chartreuse, near Paris, and the gardener lost the name. So they called it the Green Gage. It is the best plum in England, and some people think it is our best, also, although not our most abundant. It has many varieties in both France and England; but, since we do not give the delighted attention we might to individuality in foods, it is hard to find out just how many varieties of it we have.

No one who knows New York City but has heard the name Delancey, and it was on the east side of the Bowery that the Washington plum got a start, and then a merchant of Chatham street in 1818, developed it so that it "attracted universal attention by the remarkable beauty and size of the fruit." A specimen was sent to London and it gained acclaim there. Such were the events, news events, our grandfathers heard and had pleasure in. And of other plums that grew celebrated—sorrowfully we must refrain from naming them.

Damson Cheese or Blue Plum Butter.

You make these two conserves in the same way, and you can begin in a small way and work up. Wash and stem a quart of plums, drain, put into a covered casserole with half a cup of sugar, and bake in a slow oven for two hours. Uncovered they lose too much by evaporation, and the long baking, as in the case of the apple, develops too much flavor and color, so make it shorter when you want a different effect. But in this way the old time product can be made, and it is delicious. After they are baked, sieve the whole, cook down the pulp a third, add half a cup of sugar, and cook the whole five minutes, when it should be a stiff jam.

Quick Blue Plum Jam.

Wash, drain, and cut the plums in small pieces, put over a small fire without adding water, cook till soft, then add a third of its measure of sugar, and finish.

Red Plum Marmalade.

Scald and remove the skin of ripe red plums and take out the pits. For a sweet conserve, and one nearly like apricot conserve, allow one pound of sugar to each pound of fruit, mixing the two and allowing them to stand half an hour or so. Cook about twenty minutes, finally, and seal like any jam. Probably this will not keep as well as the plum butter, but we have not had the two side by side over a period of time. The plum butter does keep its original flavor and character for a long time.

That Heavenly Jam.

The four ingredient mixture with the blue plum basis is made up variously. When the cutting and all is daintily done it may be quite exquisite. Otherwise I have had reason to characterize it—after tasting of many makes, as judge—as just a delicious way of flavoring walnut meats. To begin in a small way with it, to find out what you can do, take one pound of plums, one-half an orange cut up and soaked in water to cover over night, and a large handful of walnuts, and sugar in reason or up to a pound. Or use three pounds of plums cut in small pieces, one pound of seeded raisins, three oranges cut in small pieces, the juice of two lemons—perhaps you will not much care for the lemon flavor with the walnuts—three pounds of sugar and one pound of English walnuts broken in pieces. Cook, in any case, in small portions for the best effect.

Plum Stones for Flavor.

Many of the old recipes direct that the meats in the pits of the plums, or perhaps only half of them, be used to flavor the jam, but we have tried out the flavor in these meats, in milk and a sirup, and think on the whole that the flavoring value of these meats is hardly worth the trouble of cracking them, especially if you live in an apartment where you can disturb your neighbors with the pounding.

To emphasize this statement we would say we do not hesitate to go to a great deal of trouble to do a thing that greatly enhances any of the foods we eat, because we believe enthusiastic digestive powers make life worth living and make it enthusiastic, too.

Keep Hair Tidy, Keep It Curly

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Summer and winter my hair is ever curly. It is tidy, but fluffy. It has a glow. Yet I never visit a hairdresser, never have a Marcel wave.

Those results are due to a hair dress which great experts made especially for me. I apply it twice a week. It doubles the beauty of my hair in an hour. And that wave and sheen remain.

Now you can obtain the same product. All toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c. My guarantee comes with each bottle, so you take no risk.

This is a delight—one of the best things I ever found for women, especially those with bobbed hair. In summer it is essential. Go try it now.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

PLAITS are indorsed by all leading designers, and pattern No. 2794 is one of the newest and smartest designs. It is a youthful fashion, with plaited insets at the sides of the skirt and an interesting V shaped neck line, finished with a pretty collar and long tie.

Taffeta, tub silk in rainbow stripes, linen, madras shirting, rajah and shantung are any of them suitable materials. Compare the length measure with one of your dresses that is right, and in this design a deep hem can be allowed for, as the dress is straight across the bottom. Before putting front and back together, put the shoulder tucks in on the front. Then, after underarm and shoulder seams have been finished and pressed, make the plaited sections. Perforations show how the plaits are laid, and each one must be basted together from the top, down. Directions on the pattern show just how to set these sections in place on the dress. Pin each section to the dress first across the top, then down each side, working from the top, down. Narrow bands cover the places where the sections are set on, and these extend into tie strings that make a pretty finish in the back.

The neck of the dress in the front is finished with a binding up to the point on each side where the collar ends; and the sketch shows an especially pretty way of tying the strings—in a four in hand knot at a little distance below where the neck line finishes.

This pattern provides for set in sleeves that may be left short and bound on the edges, or if made long, they are made close fitting by means of a dart.

Pattern No. 2718 is a simple, smart design for young girls. The dress is cut in two pieces—front and back—and flares prettily at the hem line. The neck is cut in a "V" in the front and finished with collar and tie cut in one piece. The drop shoulders form short sleeves that may be lengthened with one piece sections, gathered into narrow wristbands.

Challis is one of the prettiest and most useful materials for dresses to be worn on a cool day and it comes in lovely colors and designs. A tan ground with Copenhagen blue flowers would be charming, and with this the neck of the dress could be bound and the collar and tie, cut in one, could be made of white organdy. Linen, voile, or one of the striped English broadcloths would any of them be suitable materials. The striped broadcloth could have the collar and tie of white linen; and having collar and tie detachable makes it possible to wear the dress longer—laundering the collar as often as necessary and just pressing the dress.

Pattern No. 2791 is a charming design for an afternoon dress and is rather unusual in design. The long waisted upper part is cut with a deep "V" neck in front, and this opening is underfaced and rolled back with the collar, forming revers. A vest fills in the opening becomingly, and a bow of narrow ribbon with short loops and long ends will make an attractive finish. There are drop shoulders that will serve for short sleeves, and a one piece section for full length sleeves is provided for. The skirt is straight and plain in the back and is shirred across the front. This front fullness is seen on the newest dresses; and the long, plain back helps make one look slender. Then, too, another smart feature is simulating the two piece mode. Taffeta, crêpe de chine, eyelet embroidered georgette crêpe, or flat crêpe are smart materials for this design.

Vocations for Girls - - - - - - - -

By Georgia Bayne

> This is the first of a series of six articles dealing with vocations open to girls and women today. The Tribune will be glad to answer any questions relating to different lines of work which girls and women may undertake with a fair chance of lucrative returns. Opportunities never were so tremendous as they are now, but before setting out the girl must decide what she wants to do and must know definitely her individual tastes and capacities. Address VOCATIONS FOR GIRLS, THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

ACCORDING to conservative estimates drawn from recent data by statistic loving authorities there are some two hundred distinct vocations open to girls and women at the present time. These offer positions which pay from $800 to $10,000 a year, and in a few instances even more.

This information doubtless would have stricken speechless the old fashioned parents of a century ago who believed that a girl should sit unobtrusively at home with folded hands until the day when some Lochinvar on steed of white should appear from the all encircling good to claim her for his own.

Times and changes! Today the "serene I fold my hands and wait" philosophy has lost its appeal.

Of course no girl, deep in her heart, expects that when she has graduated from high school or college she will earn her own living—for very long! She naturally looks forward, as did her more retiring sister of old, to the time when she will marry and devote her energies to home making and home keeping. But in the meantime she knows that there is much soul satisfying contentment to be found in some work which she enjoys and for which she can demand a lucrative return.

What to Do?

Nature has always abhorred a vacuum and rushes to fill it at every opportunity. So the modern girl abhors aimless, frittering days, when all around her there is so much she can have for the taking. And whether she is to marry soon or late she can at least fill up her time pleasantly and profitably, wresting what fun and what work she can from those years when she "goes it alone."

But what to do? That is the question asked so many countless times in so many homes. Girls frame it querulously and parents shake their heads in worried helplessness.

"What can I do? I want to do something. What shall it be?"

Assuming that you are one of these girls for whom this problem has assumed really serious proportions, there is one very simple way of tackling it. Sit down with pencil and paper and jot down your assets and your liabilities. What shorts of things you do best and those for which you seem to have the least knack.

If arithmetic was not easy for you in grammar school and you staggered through algebra in high school without ever knowing just what it was all about, don't decide on accounting or banking or similar business lines.

If you can't spell worth a continental, don't take up stenography or shorthand.

Where Neatness Is Requisite.

If you aren't naturally orderly and neat, a housekeeper by instinct as well as training, don't try to succeed along those culinary lines open to so many girls these days of home economic specializations.

By these few negative hints you will understand what is meant by putting down your liabilities. Now for your assets.

If you are fundamentally warm hearted and sympathetic, consider the many branches of social service work. If you are fond of coddling sick people, the nursing field is broad and remunerative. If you are by nature domestic to your finger tips, the opportunities to commercialize that instinct are many.

At any rate, be honest with yourself. Self-deception never pays. Put down facts, if this is to be of any real help.

After you have chartered yourself as best you can, study the many possibilities of work along the lines where you seem strongest. Send your problem in to this department if you wish for advice. Consider, above all things, your likes and your dislikes.

Groups of Vocations.

The vocations open to girls naturally divide themselves into certain groups.

Perhaps the group to be mentioned first is the one which includes those services so tremendously in demand today throughout the country, the group known as the home economic lines, or again as the domestic arts and sciences.

These services have in many cases assumed the importance of definite professions in the last seven years, and after all are for the most part nearer to the deepest interests of the average girl than any other. Incidentally, the financial returns which they offer are in most instances excellent.

Tea Room and Cafeteria Management.

This line should appeal especially to the girl with a natural aptitude for good housekeeping. Some technical training is necessary. It is open to the girl in the small town as well as the city. The demand for managers is at present considerably greater than the supply, and the salary ranges from $1,000 to $5,000 a year.

Dietitian.

Executive ability, along with the knack of being able to coöperate with other departments, is a quality necessary for success in this work of keeping people well through proper foods. The demand for trained dietitians in institutions, hospitals, schools, factory lunch rooms is increasingly great. Usually two years of intensive training is required, and in institutional positions the salary ranges from $800 to $2,500, board and room included.

Beauty Specialist.

This line is one of the most popular today. The technical training required is less than one year, and the opportunities for the ambitious girl to earn good money as a worker in beauty parlors, or eventually to own her own beauty shop, are excellent.

Catering.

This is another field which offers the chance for the girl or woman to go into business for herself. To be able to serve good food in unusual and tempting fashion is one of the prime requisites for success. What training is necessary depends on the practical knowledge and experience of the individual girl. Some specialized training at the hands of experts cannot help but contribute new ideas and helpful ways to market them.

Textile Work.

An interesting profession for the girl with artistic leanings. Sometimes a beginner starts in a factory at $20 a week and works her way up to the designing of textiles, which commands a large salary. Positions also are procurable as sellers and buyers of textiles in merchandising houses. There also are opportunities of advancement in the work of weaving, dyeing and batik.

Dressmaking and Millinery.

Limitless fields here for the girl who is clever with the needle. Merchandising houses as well as special shops and individuals demand trained workers. There is also every opportunity for the ambitious girl to go "on her own" after a few years.

Visiting Housekeeper.

A line suited to the girl who has a natural desire to help people. It is usually conducted under the auspices of educational or social centers and consists of personal service to families regarding all the problems of homemaking. Salaries run from $1,200 to $2,500.

Canning and Preserving of Home Products.

Preparation for this work depends on how much practical experience the girl or woman entering upon it possesses. It can be carried on in the home and women have succeeded well at it who had no special training. The excellent quality of their vegetables and fruits in glass spoke for itself. State agricultural colleges, however, offer women courses in this line, and there are correspondence courses for those who cannot attend the university in person.

Designers of Clothes.

Schools of Designing usually require one year for training. The financial returns are exceptionally good. The apprentice starts at $20 to $30 a week, and if clever can advance in time to the maximum salary of from $200 to $300 a week. A girl starting in this work should have originality of ideas, good taste, and the aggression necessary to carry out her own imaginings.

Candy Manufacturing.

The success of women in the business of making candy is well known today. It is one of the most interesting of the culinary lines and pays well. Some technical training and a period of apprenticeship are desirable before the girl can hope to start out for herself on even the smallest scale. A sane business head is necessary, together with considerable natural aptitude.

Home Demonstration Agent.

A comparatively new line in which the worker advises different clubs and organizations throughout the country how to improve the housekeeping standards of the neighborhood. The salary is usually paid from county, state or federal funds and runs from $1,200 to $4,000 a year. Some teaching ability is necessary, together with a knowledge of home economics and a natural facility for leadership.

Department Store Buyers.

Women with a natural born bargaining ability, together with a knack for figures and plenty of self assurance, find a lucrative field in this line. Salaries range from $25 to $200 a week. The average salary is probably about $60 and in those departments where women are needed the demand is constantly increasing.

Interior Decorating.

The average interior decorator gets a fair income. As an apprentice she can earn from $15 to $400 a week. Once on her own, the rewards are much greater and in proportion to her own abilities. This is supremely a woman's work and her success in it the last few years is vastly encouraging to the young beginner.

Garden Photography.

For the girl whose camera is her fad here is a new line which promises to offer considerable financial returns in the near future. Apprenticeship in a specialist's studio is one of the quickest ways of acquiring a working knowledge of this line during the garden season. A girl with thought and perseverance should be able to build up a paying business, as every possessor of a charming garden naturally wants a picture of it, and outdoor portraiture is always attractive.

Professional Shopper.

A line any enterprising and discriminating girl can hope to find employment in if she has a good memory and can think quickly and clearly. Her duties consist of visiting other stores than the one where she is employed and comparing their stock and customers. The salary ranges from $18 to $40 a week, according to her value to the store.

The next article will discuss the many opportunities open to the girl in the business world today.

Now—two Sunbeam Irons

Heavy Duty Sunbeam
for the Family Wash
$7.50

Little Sunbeam
for Travel and Boudoir

Either Iron with Art-Steel Fireproof Case only $1 more

Both With the 30-Year Heating Unit

The All-Over Unit that Keeps the EDGES as Hot as the Point and Center

Little Sunbeam in its Art-Steel Case can be snugly packed in a corner of your traveling bag or trunk.

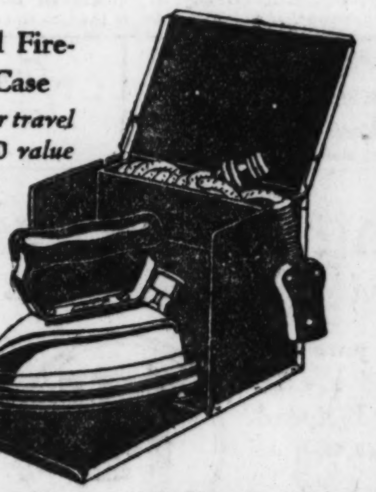
Art-Steel Fire-Proof Case for home or travel—a $2.50 value at only
$1



Sold only in combination with the Heavy Duty Sunbeam or Little Sunbeam. Enables you to put away your Hot Iron the moment you're through ironing. Iron, Cord and Stand thus ever protected and never in the way.

Because of its Balanced Weight and All-Over Heat, Sunbeam does not require hard pressure—this lets a woman sit and iron restfully, if she likes.

THE woman who wants to make her best impression should by all means have both of these irons—the Heavy Duty Sunbeam for the family ironing—Little Sunbeam for the fine things washed in her bowl, and for travel.

You cannot conceive how handy it is to have Little Sunbeam in its small Steel Case on the shelf of the bedroom closet, or snugly packed away in your traveling bag, if you're off for a trip.

Whenever you want to smooth out wrinkles, freshen your clothes, or iron small things like collars and cuffs—there you have Little Sunbeam right in your room.

If at home, you don't have to go to the kitchen for the Heavy Duty Sunbeam; if visiting, you are not obliged to trouble your hostess for her iron. Little Sunbeam and Heavy Duty Sunbeam are alike in everything save size and price.

Both come in an Art-Steel Fireproof Case at only $1 more. And both irons heat up quickly and stay hot until you have finished ironing, regardless of the dampness of your washing.

This is due to the 30-Year All-Over Heating Unit that covers the entire bottom—extends not only to the point, but also to the edges where most electric irons cool off first. For the edges are the first to meet the dampness in the clothes.

Because you never need to stop in the midst of your ironing and wait for a Sunbeam to reheat, you save from an hour to several hours every week, besides much electric current. At a saving of only one hour a week, the Heavy Duty Sunbeam pays for itself in six months. And you won't burn it out in 30 years.

Engineers of a famous institute proved this by keeping the Heavy Duty Sunbeam on continuous current for 11,167 hours day and night. That's equal to more than 30 years' home use.

So let no one persuade you that any other iron can equal the Sunbeam. Leading engineers know otherwise. Your dealer has both Sunbeam Irons, or can get them for you promptly. Write us if you do not find them nearby.

WHAT THE CHIC COUNTRYSIDE IS SAYING

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—With the Fourth of July the fashionable summer resorts go off—like the firecrackers. Newport and Southampton and Bar Harbor inaugurate their summer sea- with this date, and those who have not previously n what is going to be fashionable are then put out their misery.

Personally, I should like to follow the fortunes of a man who ventured into one of these smart resorts with- a plait. Her biography would make interesting read- It would be exactly like that of an old time knight o entered a tournament without his suit of armor.

Yes, plaits are the first essential for this tournament ed summer. They are featured in almost every type ostume. Plaited tiers, for instance—these are utilized antly on the tinted chiffon frock which is starred for e formal summer occasion. And those all around plaited rts of crêpe topped by jumper or sweater—as the season ances these are seen to prevail over the groups of side d front plaits which are, nevertheless, retained by some the most eminent leaders of fashion.

But, although the plait is in active circulation so far as e jumper frock is concerned, it is perhaps even more ressive when it enters the arena of the one piece dress. is latter, let it be said, has scored heavily in our authen- summer modes. The jumper! Yes, to be sure, we find on all sides. Even granting this, we may pause to won- r at the number of modish women who sponsor one piece cks of crêpe distinguished by subtlety of plaiting and er hand work.

A plain untucked yoke is often the diving board from ich the manifold tucks of a frock plunge downward into w and interesting phases. Even the sleeves are engaged this plaiting feat. For example, one woman at South- pton wears a pale yellow georgette scoring through the ntrast between bands of horizontal and vertical plaits. These bands occupy every inch of the costume, including g fitted sleeves. And this gown is deprived even of the ke of untrimmed fabric that so often affords relief from r plethora.

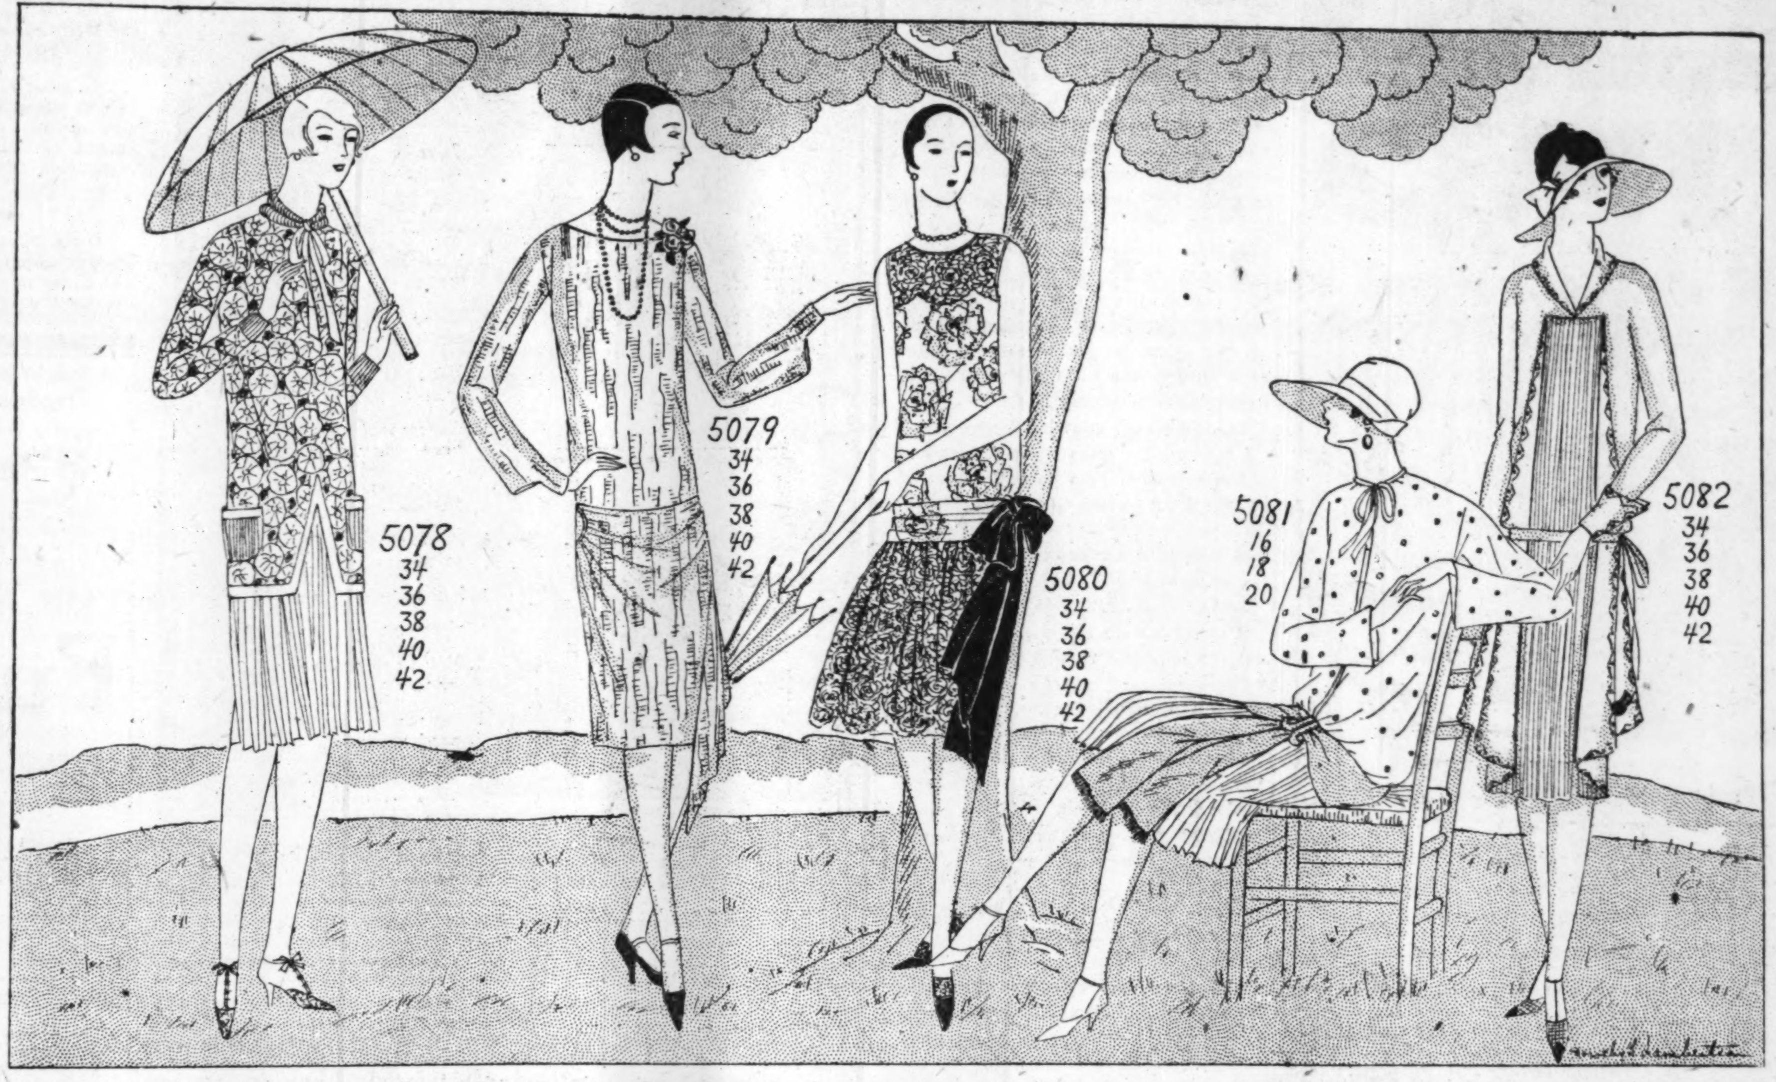
To be sure, the plaits of the one piece model are often trained to the skirt. Thus Miss Mimi Brokaw appeared Southampton in a pale green georgette model which ses an untrimmed bodice above a skirt made up of four aited flounces. But why do you ask? Of course that dice was bloused. Incidentally, too, it was sleeveless.

And this brings us to a point of interest. Many of these e piece summer creations are destitute of sleeves. This es not mean, however, that the arms are left uncovered. o, for how about those bracelets—flocks of them—that orned the forearm of Miss Mimi Brokaw?

Naturally, the bracelets have a definite function. It is bear out the color message of the frock. These of Miss okaw flashed with emeralds, and so vivid was the impres- n of green that somebody watching her remarked, "Not acelet, but brace-lettuce."

The hat which she wore was a wide brimmed Milan of atching tint. But perhaps this fashionable young woman eaded the results of too much consistency. At all events, e did not quite have the courage of her salad day, for her hand she carried a pouch bag of pale pink leather. o she wore nude colored hosiery.

Quite a few women seem to have the same wholesome ad of too much matching, and often the hand bag is e avenue followed in obtaining a color contrast. Also e hat does not invariably match the accompanying ck. White and black and beige—all these are employed the wide brimmed shapes of Milan, and balibuntl, and r. and Leghorn that usually set off the tinted or printed ss of crêpe or chiffon.



Another collar answering to the roll call is that shown by the smart combination of plain and printed crepe de chine shown at the extreme left. It occurs in a double roll and is covered with the same plaited rose color crepe shown in pockets and cuffs.

Second, the moire so much now in the spotlight of fashion is represented in a draped one piece model sponsoring the new tone of beet root red.

In the center, a frock for the formal afternoon compounds a white chiffon printed in pink, a pink underslip, and a black lace overskirt echoing the lace yoke.

Fourth from the left, the popular jacket of the season is worked out in white satin back crepe with an allover design of square silver paillettes and a silver ribbon girdle.

Last, baby blue flat crepe presents a brand new treatment of plaited vest and revers. A touch of novelty silver braid is used for the finishing touches.

One more word about these one piece models devoted so zealously to the thesis of plaits. A narrow belt of self-material is still approved, yet it is interesting to see how many models resort to more original technique at the waist line. So often a plaited front is topped by some novel system of decoration. Thus a beige crêpe designed by Molyneux has each wide box plait of its front capped by a slanting band of self material. These bands, set across the front of the model at the waist line, give one such a fresh sensation that one begins to doubt if one ever before saw a plaited frock. Another smart creation of crêpe utilizes a diamond shaped motif of self-fabric bands to make the necessary demarcation.

As to the prints, these seem to divide honors with those chiffon and crêpe models of plain color which are so much in the season's mood. Among the colors, pink in all its variations is perhaps the favorite. From the faint tone known as shell to the deepest hue of rose this social favorite is seen at all times and places. It appears frequently in the jumper costumes of knitted silk that are so much to the fore nowadays and it combines with black and beige in a number of the most charming of printed chiffons.

It is this color which is selected for our model at the left, a two piece costume indorsing that combination of plain skirt with figured jumper which is seen on every chic stretch of beach and on every chic roll of hill. Like so many of these two piece sports models, it is of crêpe de chine. The skirt, an allover plaited model, is light rose in hue, and this falls exactly into the harmony prescribed by a print assembling a rose deeper than that of the skirt, together with black.

In the face of the jumper's versatility we are all obliged to be Pollyannas. For whenever we are about to despair, "You can't do anything new about the old thing," lo and behold! this talented garment tunes up with an absolutely novel touch. Thus you find on this model a new type of collar—a double roll of wadded contours covered with crêpe matching the dark rose of the jumper. This crêpe is plaited. So are pockets and cuffs. On the other hand, that band of plain rose crêpe used as a border is left "as is."

There are, to be sure, a few models which escape the thralldom of this ubiquitous trimming. There is our center sketch, for example. In this you find an exemplification of that sleeveless mode to which I have just referred and also still one more testimony to the vogue of rose. For under the white chiffon printed in large pink roses is glimpsed a slip of deeper pink. A yoke of black lace links itself with an overskirt of the same mesh, and a final accent of black is achieved by a bow of black ribbon attached to the sash of self-material.

And now they are bringing back from Paris little velveteen jackets of mannish cut which are supposed to be quite the latest word in summer wraps. They wear these hip length jackets over printed frocks of harmonizing hue and they also find congenial society in the tweed skirts which Molyneux advocates so strongly this season—those tweeds, usually of beige persuasion, topped by sweater or jumper.

Over on this side the velveteen jacket is too isolated in its appearance to be called a fashion, but there is no doubt about it. The jacket is as important to the modern summer girl as it is to the modern summer book. Of flannel or novelty weave, of knitted material in gay design, and occasionally in challis, these abbreviated wraps are thoroughly in the summer picture.

Often they are of the same boyish cut ordained for the Parisian model of velveteen, but there is a wide place reserved for more feminine and whimsical modes. Illustrative of the latter is our fourth sketch from the left—a white crêpe satin with peasant neck line which is dotted in an allover design of square silver sequins and which blouses above a wide band of silver ribbon brought up smartly in the direct front.

The last two models are borrowed from the advance autumn collections. Second from the left we find the vogue of moire enunciated in that tone for which is prophesied a tremendous autumn triumph. It is beet root. The draping of the skirt across the front is much in the direction of autumn predictions and the sleeves represent a popular theory.

Last, at the right of the page, comes a delightful model in blue flat crêpe with an exceedingly novel introduction of plaits.

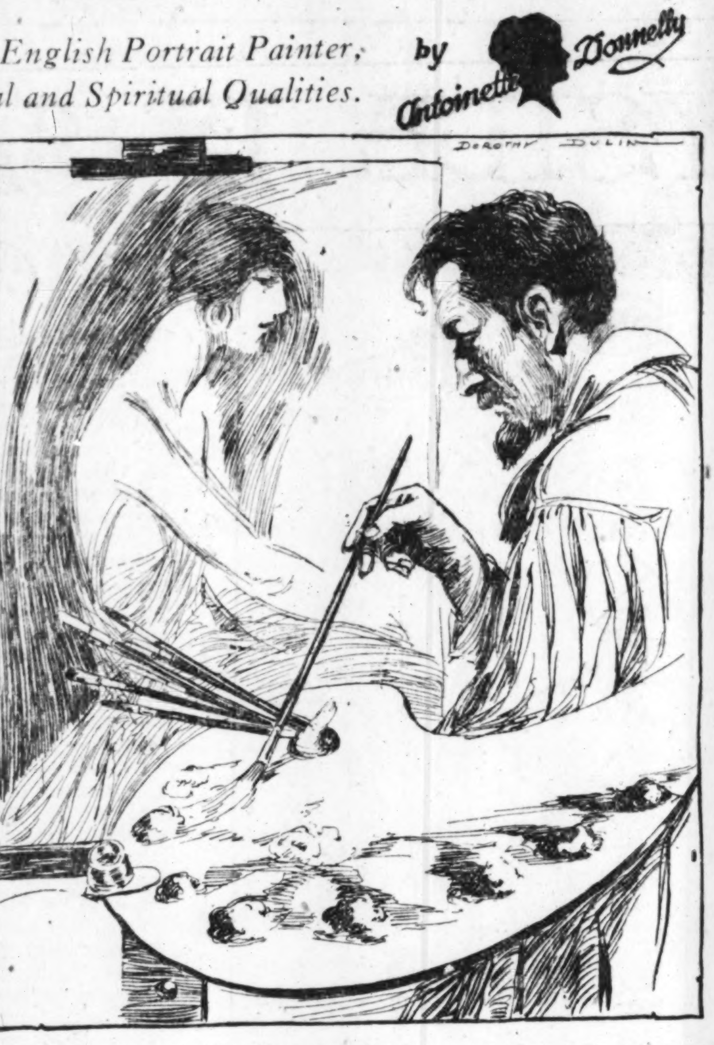
AN ARTIST'S IDEA OF BEAUTY

Sir William Orpen, Noted English Portrait Painter, Places Emphasis on Mental and Spiritual Qualities.

by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—What does an artist, a portrait painter, think about our modern type of beauty? Every once in a while some foreign artist visits our shores to look the American field over and to proclaim a dozen beauties with brush and canvas, and incidentally gather publicity unto himself. The artist's viewpoint always makes good copy when he talks about women and beauty.

One of the greatest of living portrait painters, Sir William Orpen, in an interview in an English publication, says we have more lovely women in this age than ever before.

"The artist," he says, "and especially the portrait painter, looks at women with a keener eye than the man whose sense of beauty is untutored. The artist looks at the face, the features of which he is to put on canvas, in two ways: He regards the face itself, and seeks the soul behind the face—the intelligence behind the eyes, the character revealed by the lines of the lips. This is because portraiture is not the photographic reproduction of a likeness, but the interpretation of a personality.

"If we are to estimate the modern girl," continues the famous man, "we must bear in mind the things which go to the making of beauty. Beauty is of many types, for it depends upon our conception of it. The Chinese maid, hobbling upon bound feet, may delight the eyes of the mandarin, her father, or the slant-eyed youth who marries her, but she awakes no thrill in the Occidental breast.

"We may also be sure that the average Japanese lady would see nothing splendid in one of our modern Dianas. Beauty, then, to a certain extent is a matter of geography.

Standards Change.

"It is also a matter of history. Standards of beauty change with the cycle of the years. Types of feminine grace and beauty which allured men 200 years ago might possibly not allure them today. There was a period when women, if they wished to be considered lovely, had to see to it that their faces and figures were full and well rounded.

"The wheel of taste spins. We find today admiration for a type which has never before been admired. I refer to the slender, boyish beauty—the girl whose hair has been severely cut and who rather resembles her brother.

"Is this type that one sees everywhere an improvement on the much fuller style of Victorian beauty?" Sir William Orpen asks.

He admits he is old-fashioned enough to believe that a woman's crowning glory is her hair. He does not care a great deal for the Eton crop which has become so popular. But, relatively, this is a minor point. In the faces of women and girls the artist discerns a certain change.

"But the time period necessary for any fundamental change in the characteristics of a racial type is vast," he explains, "and it would be foolish to imagine that in essentials the faces of the women of our time differ much from those of their great-grandmothers.

"Still, there is a change," Orpen admits, "a difference brought about from within." He sees it as the result of the emancipation, higher education, and the rapid consequent advance in feminine intellectual development. This change in the mentality of women the artist sees reflected in the expression of their faces. Other things being equal, the girl with a good brain is more beautiful than her inane sister. There is a constant interchange between the mind and the facial muscles.

To an artist the vacuous mind detracts from the lovely face simply because it will affect the face's expression. "Sometimes we see faces which are beautiful, but yet lack something," continues the noted portrait painter. "That something only thought can impart even to beautiful features. It is the spiritual lamp that shines through the flesh.

The Spirit Shining Through.

"Mental activity and bodily habits influence beauty. The outdoor girl, sunkissed and radiant with that marvelous health which open spaces confer, is always more beautiful in my eyes than the exotic creature who leads a highly artificial life in the mistaken idea that thereby she preserves her charms. The difference between them is that between woodland violets and hothouse flowers."

The knighted artist tells how he has sometimes had to paint portraits of subjects who would have been considered plain by most people. Occasionally acquaintances have commiserated with him upon a task of this kind. But when the sitter arrived he found that his task was pure joy, because before him was a face which glowed with that indefinable spiritual quality that lends beauty to the most irregular features, the most commonplace coloring.

Women, of course, all dream of beauty. That is natural and it should be, in the artist's opinion. But he does not think they always go the right way to procure it.

"The loveliness which is manufactured in beauty parlors," he explains, "is a spurious imitation and not worth having. There is only one way in which the pretty girl or woman can achieve beauty, and that is by aiming at bodily and mental perfection.

"The fool may be pretty, but she will never be beautiful."

When Sir William Orpen walks through the streets and in the park he sees girls and women everywhere who please his eye. They do so because they walk beautifully and because their slender bodies are radiant with health and animated by active and many-sided minds.

Signs Are Hopeful.

"Every age suffers from its critics, those amiable people who have so shrewd an eye for defects, but who are so myopic when they are shown beautiful things. So, today, one is always hearing of the decadence of the modern girl, how she is deteriorating and how much finer her mother and her grandmother were. I don't believe it—not a bit. The modern woman and her young daughter have advanced appreciably along the path to a higher type of loveliness than their forbears knew."

To sum up the observations of the great painter: Women are becoming more beautiful because they are blossoming spiritually and mentally. Their interests are widening. Their sympathies are being given beyond the four walls of the home. And, of course, they are dressing and exercising as never before. And even an artist must admit that these two latter things help to make the plain girl pretty and the pretty girl beautiful.

KEMPY: THE EYE IS A DELICATE organ and you cannot afford to tamper with it. Eye exercises recommended for some one else should not be done by you. A Radio Thrill.

I am an invalid, and I experienced a minor thrill every time I tuned in a new station on my one tube set, my only contact with outside interest. In fact, my thrills were so numerous that I wrote a story about them and entered it in a radio contest. Two months later I had completely forgotten the incident. Then I received some supposed advertising matter from the broadcasting station. I idly opened the envelope and extracted the letter, and the first words that met my eye were, "won second prize." This thrill was so intense that my temperature went up two degrees. It wasn't even exceeded when the expressmen delivered my three tube supertyridyne."

Wrecked Into a Banana Tree.

I was in Cuba on a sugar plantation. In going from one place to another on the plantation we would ride on the narrow-guage railroad that intersected the plantation.

On one occasion we boarded a train of tank cars used in transporting oil between the mills and were descending a steep grade. We were talking, the three of us, and going along nicely, when I noticed that the white trunks of the cocoanut palm trees and the banana groves were passing by more rapidly than before. We made some comment, but thought the crew probably was in a hurry. The rocking and swaying increased and when, with a jolt, the wheels on one side of the car momentarily left the rails, we came to our senses and knew that the brakes were out of commission.

We feared to jump. The speed was too great by this time. We could only wait and see what would happen. Too much time to think. And the Tanamo curve half a mile ahead.

We separated, scrambling to the places we though most safe. I climbed to the top of the car, although the swaying almost made me lost my grasp.

The curve was right ahead. Now we were upon it. The engine just groaned and, with a sideward twist, shot out into a banana grove, the cars following, breaking apart and tumbling into scattered heaps. The car I was on threw me clear of the wreckage and I landed in some young banana trees. Then that funny feeling, the sudden quietness, when you feel of yourself to see if you are hurt. I was only badly scratched, but one man was killed and another had his leg broken. That was a prolonged thrill, for it seemed years, coming down that slope.

A Safe Descent.

Being very fond of cherries and having no one to pick them for me, I decided to pick them myself. So I climbed up into a large sweet cherry tree and began to eat the cherries as I picked them. Not noticing how high I was climbing, I soon found myself near the top of the tree. Then my foot slipped and I went crashing through the tree. I shut my eyes and prepared for the worst. But I did not hit the ground, as I had expected. My dress caught on a limb and there I hung until my screams brought father running from the house. When I had been carried safely to the ground and was trying to explain how it happened, all I could say was "It was certainly a thrill."

G. L. H.

A Witness to Self-Destruction.

My greatest thrill was experienced when a mild looking man, sitting in front of me on a fast express train, calmly laid down his paper, and stepping to the platform of the train, deliberately threw himself off—probably for the greatest thrill of his life!

In a Forest Fire.

Several years ago I was employed as teacher in a country school in northern Wisconsin. It was a season of destructive forest fires, which laid waste large tracts of fine timber land.

One particular night I shall never forget. I had lain down rather early to rest as I was tired after a hard day's work. It was not long before I was awakened by shouts in the house. The place was filled with smoke and the air was intolerably close and hot. Dressing as hurriedly as possible, I rushed outside. There a fearful scene presented itself. All around the building the flames were devouring the great trees and underbrush and reaching out dangerously for the house itself. For several hours we labored to save the home, though it appeared a hopeless task.

Then a most welcome sound was heard—the deep roll of thunder. The wind calmed down and a few large drops of rain descended. Then the storm broke out in a fury, flooding the region in a vast sheet of water. The downpour lasted for several hours, and it completely quenched the flames.

I am still thrilled at the memory of that timely escape from danger.

Engagement Etiquette - - - - - - By Persis Standish

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

MY mail contains letters from a mother and daughter anent the etiquette of engagements. They seem to be divided on many points. It is indeed seeing both sides of the picture to read their letters. The mother says that young people are too lax nowadays—that they enjoy a dangerous liberty to which she refuses to expose her daughter. The daughter says mother is old fashioned. She adds that "before we were engaged she allowed us much more liberty than since." She says further, "of course I want to tell all my friends about my happiness, and mother won't let me breathe a word of it to any one until the official announcement is made."

In the mother's next letter she says: "I can't get my daughter to take marriage seriously. She doesn't want to bother about linens. All she wants to do is to play golf and dance and swim and hike with her fiancé, who is visiting us at present."

Daughter says, "Please write and tell mother, once and for all, what I may or may not do and I'll abide by it."

A Generation Divides Them.

The first thought I got out of the letters was the pity of it that just at this time which should be so happy for both they could not share the greatest sympathy—daughter giving mother her confidence and mother renewing her youth in her daughter's happiness. But it is the conflict of the generations and cannot be avoided, I suppose.

The linen epitomizes the difference between them. Mother thinks daughter is not taking marriage seriously because she is not interested in her household linens; daughter no doubt thinks mother is not taking marriage seriously because she is occupied with this triviality rather than with love itself.

Mother is right about some things, and daughter right about others. It is daughter's privilege to spend as much time as she can with her fiancé. As much time as it is possible for them both to take from the duties they both may have. Mother is wrong to criticize her for wanting to be with him. Daughter is wrong in not taking at least an apparent interest in her linens and her trousseau. A trousseau she must have and so why not give mother the pleasure of enjoying it with her?

Don't Break News Too Soon.

As for announcing the engagement—mother is right. An engagement announcement should not be made until the wedding date is fairly near. It is a dangerous policy to run right off and tell a lot of people one is engaged because no matter how dear friends may be it is a human characteristic to enjoy the spreading of news and if there is a slip twixt the cup and the lip much embarrassment can result. A few days or a week before the official announcement, however, a girl may with propriety tell her more intimate friends of her engagement. Many prefer to tell no one as it keeps the element of surprise for the announcement. No matter how much one may suspect a young couple of serious intentions it is the being told that counts.

As soon as an engagement is made between the two young people and the families approve, the parent of the man should call on the girl and her family. If they are at a great distance and this is impossible, they should write immediately. Nothing excuses them from this duty. If the man has no parents, his nearest of kin should call or write.

Announcement Details.

As soon as a date is set on which to formally announce the engagement the girl and the man should write to the members of their families and tell them before the announcement is made. Then not only the immediate family, but the cousins and aunts call on the bride-to-be. She must on no account neglect to return these visits. She should go with her mother if possible.

The family of the bride-to-be always make the announcement. If she has no parents an aunt and uncle or her nearest of kin act for them. The announcement must be sent to the reliable newspapers by a member of the immediate family—written and signed—and it is always confirmed by the paper before it is printed. If for some reason the mother or father finds it more convenient to give the news over the telephone, the person speaking, should it be a secretary or a member of the family, states who is giving the information. The family of the girl, of course, gives the engagement party, though it is sometimes given by an aunt or uncle rather than by the mother and father.

Rules of Conduct.

All eyes will be turned on the two after the announcement so their conduct should be most circumspect unless they dare to subject their love to ridicule.

They can spend as much time as they like together, but they will be wise to mingle with their friends as usual and not become tired of each other before they are married. A young man may take his fiancée about, but he cannot take her on any journeys or to house parties unchaperoned, as some of my correspondents seem to think.

As to gifts, he may give her anything he wishes except wearing apparel and, of course, money. Jewels of any kind, silver, even furniture and heirlooms, are acceptable, but a fur coat, for instance, he cannot give her. If the engagement is broken, she must return all his gifts without exception.

She likewise can give him anything she wishes—jeweled cuff links, or a watch, or anything her heart dictates—but the same rule obtains for him in case the engagement is broken. Even letters which have not been destroyed must be returned in case of a broken engagement.

Don't Forget the Family.

It is the duty of an engaged girl to make it possible for her fiancé to know her family well. She should be sure, too, that they see him in the best light. He, on his part, should not take up too much of her time, because he knows how busy a bride-to-be is.

If the engagement is to be a long one, it is now optional whether it should be announced to a few selected friends before the final announcement is given publicly. Conjecture is never certainty, and if any engagement is likely to be broken it is a long one. So the wise course, perhaps, is to wait until the wedding date is at least in sight before announcing any engagement.

My Idea of a Real Vacation

What is your notion of the ideal vacation? A fishing jaunt, an ocean trip, or a lake voyage, a stay at a fashionable resort, a stretch of lazy idleness in the woods, a long motor tour—or what? Write us your idea of the ideal vacation. We'll pay $1 for every letter we print. Address Vacations, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

The Call of the Sea.

To tell you my idea of the perfect vacation I must go back a few years and relate some of my experiences. I am an ex-navy man, having served the greater portion of my cruise in the engineering force of the destroyer fleet.

During my service I had as good a pair of sea legs as ever walked a crack during a squall. If I could go back aboard the old "wagon," walk a rivet seam while the ship was wallowing in the trough of the waves like a drunken sailor we read about, and while the spray was flying as high as the smokestack, I would be happy. Let me stand out in the middle of the deck breathing the cool sweet salt air while my body sways to and fro in rhythm with the rolling of the ship and watch the less steady ones clutch a strap from the trolley and go wabbling down the deck like so many fat ducks. Then let me strut the full length of the ship with my hands in my pockets and at each step place my foot squarely over the seamline.

Of course the spray would be wet, but what of it; with each fresh onslaught of the cold salt water my face would tingle, giving that peculiar sensation which comes only with intense satisfaction. To close my day let me go up on the forecastle all alone after it is dark and there let me stand swaying with the ship while I watch the skies and listen to the wind as it uses the ship's rigging for harp strings. Let me stay there for hours while I bask in delight that all is peaceful and there is no one about save God, my friends and the mighty waves.

I could tell you of many more vacations, all of them at sea, but where I work we are allowed but one vacation each year. Just give me my old ship, the old crew and my storm and I will come back to work so full of pep that my boss will think that I just got a Cook county nomination and no one asked for a recount.

Bon Voyage!

Bob, aged 6, plus Jean, 4, plus Mary, 2, equal three little stair steps of which I am the proud and often weary mother. For six years I have never once been free from that peculiar tension which haunts the bearer of a vast responsibility. Some times I have felt that only the miracle of a brief, complete oblivion would keep me from exploding, and now along comes a trusted friend who suggests the miracle and offers to keep the stair steps!

I am going to take a cruise of relaxation—a boat trip from Seattle to Alaska and back. Ten days out, with no stops. It won't do any good to worry about Bob's digestion, or Jean's tonsils, or Mary's molars. There will be no use wondering whether they are covered up or cooled off, or run over by an automobile—I can't possibly swim to shore! Wish me bon voyage, you mothers.

Sea Song.

Just in the midst of the sea that I love,
On an old cruising boat that's all mine,
With the sun and the stars in the dear sky above,
And the waters reflecting their shine;

With the playful spray slapping itself on my face,
Or is it the fog that I feel?
And the gleam of the fish that enter the race,
Mine just for the line and the reel;

The sound of the sails as they flap in the breeze;
The screech of the gulls overhead,
And the swish of the waves often wetting my knees,
Then an hour of dreaming and—bed.

—A. M. V.

He Remembers.

Thirty years ago I was a boy on a middle west farm, and lately I've had a hankering to go back and look the old place over. I want to go swimming in Weber's pond, to catch suckers in Twelve Mile creek, to go to an ice cream social at Hardman's grove.

I want to stand on the big bowlder in the pasture where I used to make speeches to Nell and Doll and their two roan colts. I'd like a rainy afternoon in the old haymow, and I'd like—how I'd like, to take Mary Parker buggy riding!

A cross continent business trip with stopover privileges is shortly to make my hankering a reality. Rheumatism permitting, I may even climb to the top of the tall elm whence thirty years ago I surveyed the world and fancied myself, not a mere business man, but fire chief!

M. M. D.

The Lure of a Trout Stream.

I love my wife, but O, you trout stream! I love my three kids, but O, the lure of mountain solitudes, of sparkling water dashing over cool pebbles, when a fellow is tired of noise and smoke and trial balances! So tired, too, of being handy boy on family vacations that this year he bought them tickets to grandma's.

For myself, an easy pack and the old fishin' pole; a day's tramping and climbing after I leave the stage, and then a place I know where there is beauty and stillness and trout the color of rainbows. For two weeks I'm going to loaf there alone—eat, sleep, look at the clouds. I'm going to catch up on some neglected thinking, and I'm going to fish, fish, fish. And when it's all over, d'y' know—I'm going to be rather glad to see that bunch come trooping home from grandma's.

New Light Hair Shampoo Restores Sparkle to Dull Blonde Hair

When light hair is washed with ordinary shampoos it has a tendency to fade, streak or darken. Unless it is given the most careful attention, it soon loses its natural golden beauty and becomes drab and unattractive. For that reason blondes should always use a special shampoo. Blondex, the new shampoo for blondes only, keeps light hair from darkening. And it actually brings back the original golden sparkle to even the dullest, most faded blonde hair. Makes the hair delightfully soft, silky and fluffy. Highly beneficial to the scalp. Now used by over 200,000. Fine for children's hair. Not a dye. Money instantly refunded if you are not delighted. Get Blondex today. At all good drug and department stores.

Sally's Next Party Will Watch Cubs Battle Boston

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

ARE you anxious to know what our next party will be? Well, here it is. We're going to see the Cubs play Boston a week from next Thursday, Aug. 26.

That will be an afternoon packed full of fun for all of us I know. The Cubs will be on their own lot, anxious to make the most of their time on the home grounds and climb up on the leaders. So there'll be baseball all the way you may be sure. And I'll take the 100 boys who tell me why and how much they want to see this game. So get busy with your letters, boys!

And don't think, girls, that I'm forgetting you just because I'm giving another baseball party for the boys. I have a splendid party coming that all the girls will like!

Now for the winners of the rodeo party! I've chosen them and I'm printing their names below. Also I shall send a letter to each one so you will get it by Tuesday. In this letter I'll tell you the plans for meeting, so if your name is in the list watch for your invitation and the letter telling you all about it.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

> I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.
> When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

An Airedale for the Asking.

"I have a pedigreed female Airdale I would like to give to some one who will take good care of her and give her a good home. MRS. M."

A valuable dog, this Airedale! And its present owner may be assured of a welcome for it in a number of good homes. Would you like to have this pet?

For a Plucky Person.

"I am the only support of my widowed mother, and in addition to my effort to make both ends meet I am trying to complete my education. I need some books, especially the ones I have listed below. Will you please help me to obtain them?

"'World's Progress,' by West.

"'General Science,' Snyder.

"'English Composition and Rhetoric,' Tanner.

"'French Grammar,' Fraser and Squair.

"Other French books for beginners will be appreciated. M. C."

Asks for Sheet Music.

"Do you know of some one among your readers who would give me the sheet music he or she would otherwise throw away? I love to play, and would be grateful for any I received. "C. A."

Oldest of Seven.

"I wonder if any of your readers has a party frock she no longer needs? My 16 year old daughter must refuse all invitations to parties because her dresses are not suitable. As she is the oldest in a family of seven I cannot buy one for her. She wears size 36 or 38. Mrs. J. McM."

While this mother is supplying the necessities for her family perhaps we can provide the means of pleasure for her daughter. Won't you look your wardrobe over?

For an Expectant Mother.

"I am an expectant mother and have been unable to make provision for the newcomer. I would appreciate any infant clothing one of your readers would give me. Mrs. C. M."

Isn't this an appealing request? Will you search through your baby's well stocked wardrobe and see if there is anything you might discard? We will be glad to give you this mother's address.

Scout Suits Needed.

"My boys, aged 12 and 14, would be pleased to have Boy Scout suits. I cannot afford to buy them, and they will be excluded from the troop which is being formed here unless they obtain them. Sizes 14 and 16 would fit them. MRS. M. K."

I think we must have some Boy Scout readers who would be pleased to fulfill this request. They will appreciate what these boys would miss if they were denied the advantages of membership.

Would-Be Musician.

"I have an opportunity to join a band, but my expenses in school absorb all the money I could otherwise use in purchasing a cornet, clarinet, or saxophone. Do you think one of your kind readers could supply me with one of these instruments? R. J."

One of these instruments would bring happiness to this correspondent, who, by the way, lives in Iowa.

Washing Machine to Give.

"I have a washing machine I would like to discard and would be glad to give it to any one who could call for it. "MRS. L. G."

This is an offer which should afford a great deal of aid to some housekeeper. If you will write in I will be glad to put you in touch with this generous correspondent.

Dog to Give.

"We are leaving the city shortly and must dispose of our dog. He is nine months old, a mixture of collie and setter, and is well behaved. He has been raised with children and is an ideal playmate. MRS. J. P."

This dog will readily adapt himself to new playmates and surroundings, I am sure. If you will write in we will be glad to put you in touch with our correspondent.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible skin particles are flecked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

You Look Years Younger—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

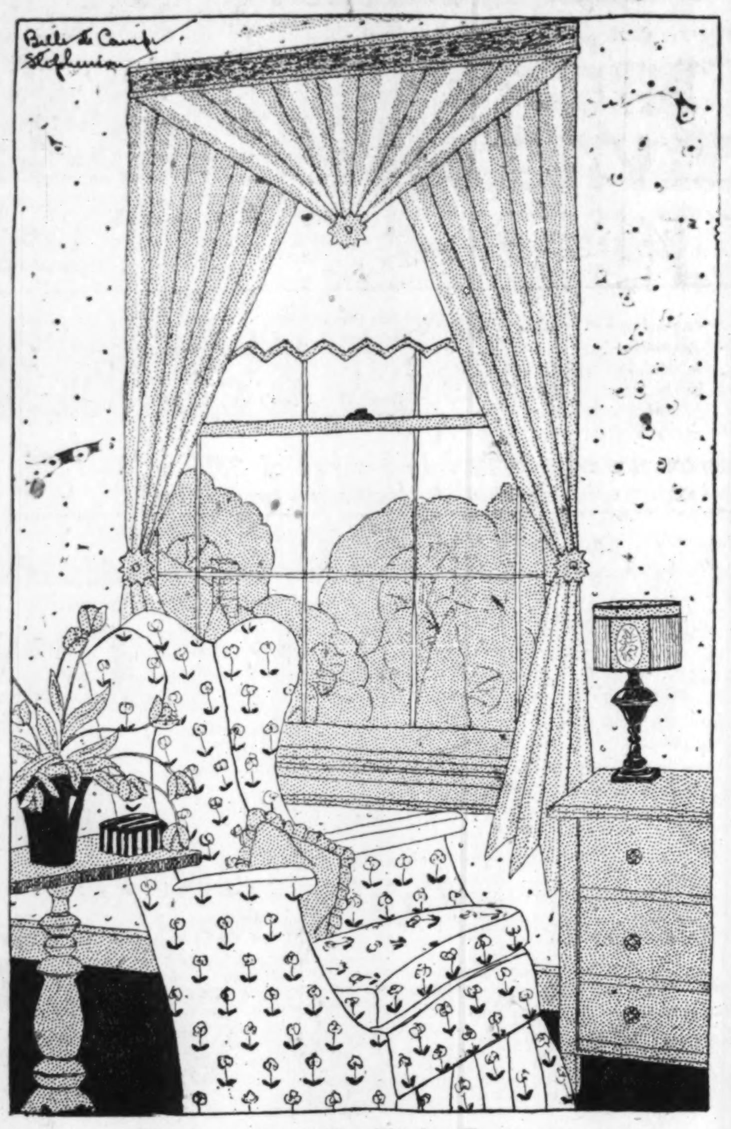
ENHANCING THE WINDOWS.

WINDOWS, windows everywhere and what a job they are! Curtaining of windows plays an important part in the effectiveness of any room. To many of us it seems a never ending perplexity. It is practically impossible, of course, to lay down any set rules. There are so many different types, each calling for a special treatment of its own. Only in one instance is there a general formula which may be applied to all classes. Where a glimpse of a lovely landscape, a panorama of ever-changing sky, a rainbow galaxy of colorful garden, or any fascinating view is afforded, it should never, never be hidden away behind heavy, stuffy curtains. Transparent glass ones may be used to form a connecting link between the lovely out-of-doors and the interesting interior. In some cases, over draperies may be dispensed with entirely, but where they are used, they should hang well back, so that they will not obscure the view any more than is absolutely necessary. The present day market has developed the greatest variety of beautiful and colorful materials in cottons gauzes, silks, linens, etc., for use both as glass curtains and as draperies.

Delightfully interesting is the living room in a cottage on the coast of Maine. It is a quaint, ducky little house, built many years ago, and all of its furnishings carry out its character to perfection. At the squatty, square windows, looking out to sea, are curtains of American made Toile de Jouy, representing, pictorially, the Pilgrim history of New England. They are pushed well back, at each side, allowing a free view of the mysterious ocean. A large sofa, placed before the old fireplace, has a slip cover of the same stuff that makes the curtains. Old Windsor chairs, odd tables and chests, hooked rugs and other antique pieces lend a definite enchantment. The ceiling is low and old books with dusky bindings stand, as so many courtiers from the past, on shelves let into the paneled walls. It is a room to dream in.

One of the bedrooms in this same house is cheeringly light and cool. At the windows, looking out to sea, as do those in the living room, are glass curtains of ruffled white batiste. They are supplemented by draperies of a glazed chintz showing a small flowered design on a white ground. These are bound at the edges with plain, rose colored glazed chintz. The old four poster bed has a white cover, tufted with candlewick embroidery in rose. White paper, with fine, widely spaced stripes of rose is used on the walls. Woodwork is painted ivory and all of the furniture is antique mahogany, excepting a wing chair which is upholstered in chintz to match the draperies.



Showing an Interesting Window Treatment.

An inviting window corner in an old fashioned bedroom is shown in today's illustration. The window is fitted with a pink glazed chintz roller shade, cut into a pointed edge and bound with light violet. Interesting curtains are made of violet silk gauze, quite full, drawn back tightly and held in place by old brass knobs. A pointed valance, completing the crispness of the arrangement, hangs from beneath a lovely old brass cornice, and is held in place by the weight of a brass knob matching those which hold back the side curtains. Flowered percale with a violet ground covers the wing chair. All other furniture in the room is made of maple, which stands in such high favor just now.

On an end table beside the wing chair is a deep green bowl filled with imported tulips, made of feathers, in pink, orchid, and rose. On the bureau is a pair of brass lamps, one of which is shown today. They are fitted with shades made of wall paper, shellacked. In a panel in the front of each is a decorative old floral print.

Quite different in character, from these old colonial rooms, is one done in the Spanish style. The walls are rough plaster, tinted a grayish green. At the leaded windows are long, deep ruby red draperies, hanging straight to the floor. These are made of a sunfast cotton material which resembles old venetian brocade. They are hung by means of loops of the material, instead of rings, over decorative rods of wrought iron. There are no glass curtains, as the draperies are made so that they may be drawn across the windows in the evening. Deep red rugs of Spanish design, are used on the sand colored stone floor. Upholstered furniture is covered with a sage green wool damask, and accessory cushions are done in a heavy, gold colored silk. Wrought iron lamps have parchment shades banded in red, black, and green.

Curtains in the adjoining sun room are of thin cerulean blue silk net gathered full and hung straight to the sill. They are finished with French headings and are used without overdraperies. Blue curtains, as a rule, cast a hard, disturbing light, but these, being of such thin material, seem only to soften the glare of daylight, and to create a soft mystery in the evening when the lamp light falls on their many folds. Plaster walls in this room are champagne color and the furniture is painted black with jade green decorations. Blue cushions are piped with jade. A deep blue rug almost completely covers the stone floor.

Because they come in such a wide range of colors, and because they are so softly lustrous, as well as crispy and fresh looking, taffetas are especially lovely for making draperies. Less expensive than taffeta are sunfast sateens, which also may be had in a great variety of colors. Doesn't it really seem ridiculous and absolutely unnecessary that any one should have dowdy looking windows when so many lovely materials are now available for use as curtains and draperies? Let's start a "better windows" campaign, so that our homes may be more joyful.

MR. SLIG STEPS INTO THE STREET.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

MR. SLIG had attended a wrestling match between a polecat and a woodchuck, and it was rather late when he left for home. He was terribly drowsy, and he almost fell asleep as he plodded along. If he had been wide awake he probably would have noticed that the street had just been coated with tar and he wouldn't have tried to cross it.

He cut across the street and at first he thought it was mud, but his feet stuck so tightly he finally decided it was tar.

A polecat policeman.

"Well, I might just as well keep on across the street as to go back now," he said to himself. "My feet can't be any dirtier than thhey are at this very precise minute."

Soon his feet began to stick so tightly he could hardly pull them out for the next step, and presently he stuck tight.

He called a couple of times for help, but no one answered.

"I'll probably have to stay here until morning," he yawned to himself.

He was dreadfully sleepy, so he leaned back in the night air and went to sleep.

Mr. Slig slept for hours and it was quite late the next morning when a young chipmunk, on his paper route, happened to see the opossum.

The chipmunk knew that Mr. Slig was asleep, for he could plainly hear his snores, so be yelled at him, but the opossum never stirred.

Next the chipmunk threw a tomato can at Mr. Slig, but he missed him. He threw several more cans and a dead head of cabbage at Mr. Slig. It was the dead head of cabbage that awakened the opossum; it hit him in the neck, and he opened his sleepy eyes.

"Watchou doin'?" shouted the chipmunk.

"I'm turnin' cart wheels on the grand piano," snapped Mr. Slig, who was a little peeved at being so rudely awakened. "What did you think I was doin'? Eatin' soup out of a bass drum?"

The tar had hardened, and Mr. Slig was stuck as tightly as though he had been glued to the spot. He tried to move his feet, but they were fast.

"Boy!" Mr. Slig shouted to the chipmunk. "Go to Mr. Nickeldick's house, at 23 Snuffers lane, and tell him to come here."

"All right!" answered the chipmunk with a grin. "But don't go away while I'm gone."

"Well, I'll take the street with me if I do," snapped Mr. Slig.

The chipmunk hurried off and soon disappeared down the street.

Presently a rabbit, who owned the clothing store near where Mr. Slig was fast, came out and stared.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"I'm just waitin' for a friend," answered Mr. Slig.

"Are your feet stuck?" asked the rabbit, staring at Mr. Slig's feet, which were covered up to the ankles with tar.

"No. I've just kicked them into the street to get 'em warm," answered Mr. Slig tartly.

In a short time a great crowd of animals gathered at the curbstone and stared at poor Mr. Slig.

"What's the matter here?" demanded a polecat policeman, pushing his way through the crowd.

"I'm picking chestnuts off a cranberry tree," answered Mr. Slig, who was quite out of patience at the silly questions.

The policeman was terribly angry at Mr. Slig's remark and it's hard to tell what might have happened if Mr. Nickeldick hadn't arrived at that moment.

"We've got to get you out of here," said Mr. Nickeldick when he had talked to Mr. Slig for a few minutes. "The tar is still a little soft and we'll have to get something to put down to walk on."

Several animals offered to help, and they found some boards near by where a weasel was building a hot dog stand. They carried the boards and laid them on top of the tar out to Mr. Slig. They caught hold of Mr. Slig and tried to pull him out, but he wouldn't come; he was stuck tight.

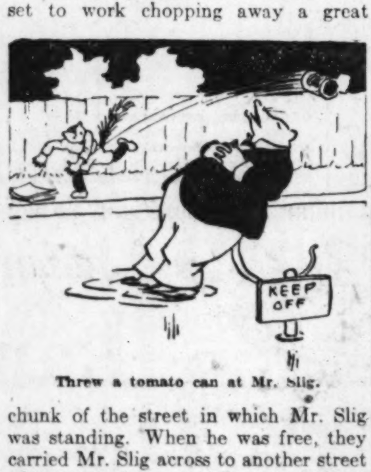
"Couldn't we blow him out with dynamite?" suggested an uncivil engineer.

"The fall might hurt him when he came down," answered Mr. Nickeldick. "I think it would be better to cut away a chunk of tar and carry him home where the rest could be carefully chopped off."

"You can't cut into the pavement without a permit," cried the policeman.

It took nearly three hours to get the permit, so Mr. Nickeldick had breakfast brought to Mr. Slig and a chair for him to sit on.

When the permit arrived the animals set to work chopping away a great chunk of the street in which Mr. Slig was standing. When he was free, they carried Mr. Slig across to another street where a truck was waiting to take him home.



Threw a tomato can at Mr. Slig.

Mrs. Slig and all the little Sligs were greatly excited when they saw Mr. Slig coming home in a truck, and the little Sligs clapped their paws in glee when their father was lifted out of the machine.

"Hadn't we better send for the doctor to remove the street from Mr. Slig's feet?" asked Mrs. Slig.

"No," answered Mr. Nickeldick. "He don't need a doctor, this is a mason's job. We'll get a stone cutter to chisel your husband out."

A mason was sent for and in a short time a slim mink arrived with his hammer and chisels. He set to work and after much work he finally released one of Mr. Slig's feet. The five o'clock whistle blew before the mink had finished Mr. Slig's other foot, and the work had to be stopped until the next day, as the mink never worked overtime.

A slim mink arrived.

The next morning the mink came and finished the work, and Mr. Slig was again free of the street.

"Well!" exclaimed Mr. Slig when he was able to wiggle all his toes again. "That's the longest time it ever took me to cross a street."

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

Joe, an idolized only child, had put up such a fight against his mother having her pretty brown hair bobbed that for a long time she humored him. But one day she came home and, removing her hat, displayed a smart mannish bob, the hair slicked close to her head in the latest fashion.

Joe's tempestuous weeping was brought to an end by his dad, who thrust him out on the front porch and told him to stay there till he came to his senses.

Sitting on the porch, his long spell of sulky silence was broken by an agent who came up and inquired for the lady of the house.

With all the bitterness of a five-year-old, Joe replied, "There's no lady of the house any more—only three mens." I. F.

Rita had had two teeth extracted and her forbearance at the dentist's was rewarded with a luncheon at a charming restaurant. She took advantage of my offer to allow her as much as she wished by ordering a huge luncheon. She consumed quantities of food, but when I requested dessert, she said wonderingly, "Eleanor, I don't see how you can touch food after witnessing so much suffering." R. N.

Billy had to take care of his litle sister, aged two and a half, while mother went to a party.

Sister had missed her nap and was cross, crying at every little thing. Finally Billy, who is ordinarily a patient little fellow, exploded.

"I jus' wish you was at the spankable age, that's what I wish!" he said, chokingly. E. C. B.

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that the United States government should have been able to take a little herd of fur seals homing on a few barren rocks beyond the northern end of the Pacific ocean and develop it into such numbers that it will supply the world with sealskin coats for all time!

There used to be great abundance of fur seals in the North Pacific. By 1910, however, they had been all wiped out by free hunters. There was but one herd of any size left. It made its summer home on the Pribilof islands in Bering sea. These islands the United States had bought from Russia along with Alaska. So, according to international law, these seals belonged to Uncle Sam.

The United States decided to stop the slaughter of them. It did so through coming to understandings with other nations that they should not be killed at sea. They should be slaughtered only on the breeding grounds where those to die could be selected as the farmers choose cattle for the butcher.

The herd then numbered about 100,000. Thereafter no females were killed. Each year, however, some 10 per cent of the males were slaughtered. So a good many sealskins were produced without interfering with the growth of the herd. In ten years there were 600,000 of them. The number of skins that might be taken each season was six times as great as it had been.

The herd is now nearly a million strong. The time is coming when some of the females may be killed also. By regulating the killing the herd may be held at whatever size is thought best. If it is a millon strong, for instance, it might yield 100,000 skins a year. If this were enough to supply the market there would be no need of letting the herd grow larger.

This control of the sealskin market has come into the hands of the government because of a pecular instinct of these animals. They come back all the time to the same place for bearing their young. They cannot be weaned away from these Pribilof islands nor colonized anywhere else. For three-fourths of the year these animals roll about the broad Pacific, feeding on its limitless supply of fish. Then, in the summer, the whole lot of them comes back to the Pribilofs. Young and old, male and female, hang about the homeland for two or three months. After the young ones are born they all disappear until another summer.

The United States has been able to save the sealskin supply for all the generations that are to come by understanding the manner of life of these strange animals and providing for their protection and growth.

The better way to rid your home of disgraceful Flies and Mosquitos

Flies and mosquitoes carry filth. After every step they deposit disease-germs of typhoid, diphtheria, tuberculosis and other contagious diseases. It has come to be a disgrace to have flies and mosquitoes in the home because they are even filthier than roaches and bedbugs. Kill them immediately with a spray of Venom.

Most powerful insecticide known

Yet it is absolutely harmless to humans and household pets. Flies, mosquitoes, moths, ants, roaches, their eggs and larvae are completely and quickly exterminated. A recently Venom-ized room will keep insects away. Therefore, it is imperative to use Venom every day. It will not spot or stain the most delicate fabric.

Music Staff Shows Remarkable Loyalty

By Edward Moore.

ONE of the things that make you feel at home when you go to Ravinia is the number of persons who are there year after year. There are organizations that seem to feel that efficiency means a clean sweep at the beginning of each season, that the public is ungrateful and prefers to see and hear new people.

Not so at Ravinia. There they have conceived the idea that continuing service is best, that the public is glad to see the same people this season if they have made good last. So the principals on the stage continue season after season, with a few changes but not many. The same faces appear season after season in the chorus; the attendant who shows you where to park your automobile is a valued acquaintance; the man at the head of the aisle who takes your tickets is an old friend. You may not know all their names, but you know them.

Most of all is this true of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. This great collection of players has been an important component of Ravinia since Ravinia started to be a place of opera fifteen years ago. But it surprised even this department to learn the other day that no fewer than twenty-one of the orchestral musicians have been in continuous service throughout the whole fifteen years.

Such a list is something of a roster of honor on its own behalf. Here are the twenty-one: Fritz Itte, John Bramhall, Sam Rhys, Otto Roehrborn, violins; Franz Esser, Richard Schroeter, violas; Otto Hesselbach, viola and oboe; Carl Brueckner, Herman Felber, cellos; Vaclav Jiskra, William Speckin, basses; Hans Parbs, bass and bass clarinet; Alfred Quensel, flute; Alfred Barthel, oboe and English horn; Hjalmar Rabe, bassoon; Max Pottag, William Frank, French horn; Paul Hanke, trumpet and librarian; Gustav Stange, Arthur Gunther, trombones; Joseph Zettelman, tympani.

Edward Llewellyn, trumpeter, has been there nearly as long, fourteen years. Francis Napolilli, who wafts a mellow English horn, has been there ten. Albert Ulrich, violinist, claims eight years of Ravinia service. There are four more of seven years, Joseph Silberstein, violin; Edward Geffert, trombone; George Hamburg, tuba, and Edward Kopp, bass drum. Joseph Houdek, bass, and Arthur Kitti, flute, have six seasons to their credit. Concert master Jacques Gordon came to Ravinia five years ago, together with Clarence Evans, viola, and Mme. Amelie Conti, harp.

The four stripe men are Alfred Wallenstein, cello; Hugo Fox, bassoon; Charles Tryner, French horn, and Charles Woodruff, who plays the small drum and traps. The three year list includes William Fantozzi, Melville Martinson, Franz Polesny, Carl Rink, Sam Levitan, Walter Hancock, Ben Goodsell, violins; Robert Lindeman and Sam Evenson, clarinets; Frank Erickson, French horn, and Edward Masacek, trumpet.

Genaro Papi is the senior conductor in point of service, having mounted the stand in the orchestra pit for ten years. Louis Hasselmans is credited with six years of service, and Eric De Lamarter, concert conductor, with three. Armando Agnini has been stage director for eight years, and Arthur M. Lowrie, manager, who specializes in seeing much and saying little, has been with Mr. Eckstein the year around since Ravinia's inauguration as a music center.

Facing a Busy Week.

The hard work of the coming week's repertoire is pretty well distributed between Giovanni Martinelli and Lucrezia Bori. Mr. Martinelli sings tonight in "Fedora," Tuesday in "Aida," and Saturday in "Pagliacci," the last named work being put on for the first time this summer. Miss Bori is called for "La Vida Breve" tomorrow night, "Manon"—the Massenet version—Wednesday, and "L'Amore dei Tre Re" Thursday.

Both classify among the pronounced Ravinia favorites. Mr. Martinelli would seem to thrive on much activity. The more operas for which he is cast, the more the splendor of his voice rings out to delight his hearers. In the memory of what he has done this and former summers, I venture to predict that when he sings "Ridi, Pagliaccio" next Saturday night, the well known number will have about as many thrills as ever three minutes of music was known to have.

Also, Miss Bori's delicate precision of method, her unfailing sense of the stage, her electric and likable personality make her one of the good reasons for visiting Ravinia. Tomorrow night's "La Vida Breve," by the way, is listed as an extra performance. That sort of thing happens only rarely at Ravinia, but the De Falla opera with Bori in it has jumped into instant popularity.

An Outline of "Fra Diavolo."

It may seem a bit like dusting off the old ones, but the younger generation seems not to know "Fra Diavolo," and the elder one has forgotten how to tell the plot. Since it was first announced for the week just past, and more since its repetition is billed for Friday night, many requests have come in to be told what it is all about.

"I have searched half a dozen books of opera plots," writes one correspondent, "and although 'Fra Diavolo' is mentioned as a work which once formed a part of nearly every opera repertoire, I have not been able to find an outline of its story." Well, here is the outline, drawn from a book that is apparently outside the half dozen.

The scene of the action is one of the Italian states and the time about 1830. The first act opens at an inn in the mountains kept by Matteo, who is the father of a beautiful daughter whom he has betrothed to a wealthy peasant much against her will. Zerlaine, the daughter, is in love with Lorenzo, a young officer of dragoons, but Matteo has refused permission for their marriage on the grounds that Lorenzo is poor and unable to furnish sufficient dowry. The region of the inn is infested with bandits and one, who has been particularly daring, is known to the country people as Fra Diavolo.

Lorenzo is sent with a detachment of dragoons to capture this robber band. He and his men stop at the inn and Lorenzo takes advantage of the situation to press his suit with Zerlaine, who returns his affection. The stage coach arrives bringing an English couple, Lord Cockburn and his wife, Lady Pamela. They have had an experience with the robbers, and in addition to this, Lord Cockburn is greatly agitated because of a flirtation which Lady Pamela has carried on with a handsome and gracious stranger who has been their fellow traveler. In the midst of the altercation the stranger arrives and listens with interest as Zerlaine recites the exploits of Fra Diavolo.

Fulfilling the Requirement.

In the meantime Lorenzo and his men have departed from the inn in an endeavor to capture the bandits who have robbed Lord Cockburn and Lady Pamela. He is successful in his attempt and returns with the jewels, thus winning a reward of 10,000 lire which the Englishman has offered. This is sufficient to provide the dowry demanded by Matteo, and everything looks happy for Lorenzo and Zerlaine.

But there is trouble brewing in the second act. Zerlaine has retired, taking the dowry with her. The courteous stranger, who is none other than Fra Diavolo himself, plots with two of his band, who have escaped Lorenzo, to steal the money. They wait until Zerlaine is asleep and then attempt to enter her room. But Fra Diavolo is discovered by Lorenzo and Lord Cockburn. He claims to have a rendezvous, and Lorenzo imagines it to be with Zerlaine, while Lord

HERE'S A POTPOURRI OF OLD TIME FILMS

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

Last week the pleasant gentleman who represents Messrs. Lubliner and Trinz called up and said that the following week they were planning to show at Orchestra hall some REAL old favorites and would I care to see them in advance?

DOROTHY GISH has always been a favorite, it seems.

"How old?" I asked.

"Twenty years old," he told me. That sounded interesting.

It was! Wouldn't you think it WOULD be—seeing Charlie Chaplin when he had to work for a living; Mary Pickford on the first stretch of her career as "America's Sweetheart"; the Gish sisters when they had double chins; Mabel Normand, Ford Sterling, and Mack Sennett in a picture together; President McKinley's inauguration; Wallace Reid, the boy, eager, talented, and ambitious—wouldn't all that interest you?

Taking for granted that it would, I'll proceed to give some brief reviews of what I saw. Do you remember any of the following?

"THE SISTERS," Or "How a Woman Regained Her Reason."

Presented at Orchestra Hall.

Produced by Monopol. Directed by William Christy Cabanne. Presented originally at the Nickel Show.

THE CAST.

Martha .... Dorothy Gish
Carol .... Lillian Gish
Hal Martin .... W. E. Lawrence
Jerry Tabor .... Elmer Clifton

This is the heartrending tale of two fair sisters who loved the same man—and Carol got him!

The sisters, up until the time of the opening of the story—and for half a minute or so after—are the best of friends. They read the same books, wear their flowing blonde locks the same way and play about home like a pair of kittens until—Hal Martin comes home!

Hal Martin has been to the big city studying book learning. He returns to the town of his birth with a lawyer's diploma, becomes immediately successful, and takes a shine to Martha—who is also humbly and devotedly loved by Jerry Tabor—

——just an awkward youth in homespun clothes,
But a heart of gold, the good Lord knows.

Martha is dazzled by Hal. So is Carol. Hal prefers Martha, but, after all, Carol looks a lot like her sister. One night he comes to call on Martha, who is taking a nap. Instead of waking her sister, Carol brings Hal some excuse or other and goes out with him in Martha's stead.

She uses her wiles to great effect. Poor Martha, in the days that go by, is eaten with jealousy, and of evenings contemplates Lady MacBethian plans of getting even with her false sister. Her good, kind little heart, however, will not permit her to do wrong. It is not long before she is bravely speeding Carol and Hal away on their wedding journey.

She rebounds into Jerry's arms, marries him, and becomes the happy mother of a boy babe.

Carol's baby, born at just about the same time, dies before his mother sees him.

"If she doesn't feel some baby in her arms she will die!" cries the doctor.

Long and short of it is—Martha lends her baby. When Carol, by accident, discovers her sister's noble self-sacrifice she sees herself for what she has always been, and, carrying the child back to his mourning mother, repents in good old fashioned style.

The Gishes worked in the old days much as they do now—though I will say Lillian had considerable more pep at that time. And neither had the twitching mannerisms that have so characterized them during the last few years. But time has produced no striking change in technique.

Support, direction, photography, and such were, I bet, twenty years ago, considered the berries. Now, of course, it's to laugh a little.

"THE INFORMER."

Produced by Nathan Hirsh.

THE CAST.

Millicent Reed .... Mary Pickford
Ralph Simonds .... Henry B. Walthall
Lieutenant Clare .... Walter Miller

The action of this picture takes place during the civil war, and Little Mary is seen as a southern girl who loves a gallant officer who is forced to go to war. While he is gone a slinking lawyer, represented by Mr. Walthall, courts her. This fiend in human form finally tells her her lover has been killed, and in due time is accepted by the sad young lady.

Then the lover comes home! Heroine spurns villain, who speeds away to tell the enemy that Lieutenant Clare is hiding on the Reed plantation. Much fireworks, in which the villain is killed and the hero isn't. And after the war is over—well, fans dear, spell your own ending.

This picture is really pretty funny. It is presented as films were in the old days. The management announces frankly on the screen the changing of reels and that the operator is having trouble with his machine. Ladies are ordered to remove their hats and gents to refrain from spitting. Whistling, stamping, and loud talking, you are informed, are not allowed, and permission is granted for those who have retained their seat checks and haven't seen the start of the show to remain over and gaze upon what they've missed.

No doubt about it, Mary Pickford, with her little old beestung upper lip and curls is mighty pretty in this picture and shows promise of what she has since become. Mr. Walthall is exceedingly deep and dark, and young Mr. Miller does a great deal of acting. The cavalry performs with great dispatch and earnestness. I bet a shout went up in them good old days when those bearded soldiers came thundering to the rescue!

"ARMS AND THE GRINGO."

Produced by Monopol Picture, Inc. Directed by W. Christy Cabanne.

THE CAST.

Betty North .... Dorothy Gish
Sergt. Gilson .... Wallace Reid
Howard Coleman .... Fred Kelsey
Sergt. Gordon .... W. A. Lowery

And here you have little Dorothy Gish, baby-faced and naive, and Wallace Reid, slim, young, active, and immensely appealing, playing together in a heavily melodramatic little film that has to do with smuggling ammunition over the Mexican border.

It was about the time of this film, I imagine, that questions regarding Wallace Reid—his age, color of eyes and hair, weight, etc., began flowing into newspaper offices. Such a handsome and lovable chap he was!

The pantomime in this picture, especially on the part of the villains, is rich, and the bold, bald, brazen badness perpetrated is guaranteed to give you quite a kick.

You love little Dorothy! My goodness, but wasn't she just crazy about being a movie actress! Gratified desire there is in every roll of her eyes and turn of her wrist.

"THE PROPERTY MAN" is the Charlie Chaplin "funny" handed to you, and it is sure one rowdy film! It starts with Mr. Chaplin in the limelight, continues with him in the limelight, and ends with him still there. I don't think there's a foot that doesn't boast his face. As a property man of a burlesque house he mixes with everybody from the stage hands to the audience, and the picture ends with one of the grand getting wet parties that used to be so popular in

On Realism

By H. L. Mencken.

ONE of the strangest delusions of criticism is to be found in the notion that there is such a thing as realism—that is, realism grounded on objective fact in the same way that a scientific monograph, say, or the report of a law trial, is grounded upon objective fact. Nothing of the sort is imaginable. The arts do not and cannot deal with reality, for the moment they begin to do so they cease to be arts. Their function is something quite different, and even antagonistic. It is not to photograph the world, but to edit and improve the world. It is not to embrace the whole, but to select and exhibit the salient part. It is not to echo life, but to show a way of escape from life.

But perhaps I succumb to phrases. What I mean to say, in plain language, is that no genuine artist would paint a picture if he were completely satisfied with the thing he depicts. His dissatisfaction is precisely what makes him an artist: he is moved by a yearning to put in something or take out something, to make a comment, to frame a gloss upon the word of God—or, as it is usually put, to express himself. And the measure of his virtue as an artist lies in that contribution, not in what he takes bodily from nature. If what he has to say is novel and charming, then he is a good artist. If what he has to say is trite and dull, then he is a bad one. The first and last thing is what he has to say.

Certainly all this should be obvious, but for some reason or other it seems to be not so. I have read of late a long essay on James Joyce's "Ulysses," praising it in high, astounding terms as a complete and exact record of a day in the life of its people. It is, of course, nothing of the sort. At least nine-tenths of its materials came, not out of the Bloom family, but out of James Joyce. Even the celebrated unspoken monologue of Marion at the end is his, not hers. There are long sections of it that even the professional psychologists, who are singularly naive, must detect as false—that is, false for Marion, false for a woman of her position, perhaps even false for any woman. But they are not false for Joyce.

Some years ago I enjoyed the somewhat laborious honor of reading, in manuscript, a new novel by a well known American novelist, greatly esteemed for his fidelity to the metaphysical bugaboo known as the truth. It was, in more than one way, a work of high merit, but it had a number of obvious defects. One was a painful superabundance of irrelevant detail. Another was an excess of detail of a sort likely to arouse the libido of the Comstocks, and so get the book a bad name. I called this last blemish to the attention of the author, pointing especially to a scene depicting what has since come to be called a petting party. At once he rose to high dudgeon.

"You are," he roared, "a ——— ——— ———. You are asking me to make my story false. It is like asking a woman to cut off the ears of her child. What you object to actually happened. It had to happen. It was inevitable. I defy you to describe a petting party without mentioning it."

I did not accept the challenge, but proceeded by a more indirect route. That is to say, I described the same petting party in different terms. I included all the details that my eminent friend had included, but then went on to include some details of my own. The first brought him up.

"But you can't——" he began, in some agitation.

"Did it happen?" I demanded. "Am I going outside the record?"

He retreated behind indignation, and I proceeded. My second canto drove him out of the room. But while I was in the midst of my fifth or sixth he returned and proposed peace.

"You are quite right," he said. "It is impossible to tell it all. I thought I was doing it, but I see now that I really wasn't. Every passage you have objected to comes out."

But this was going too far, and so I protested in turn.

"Not at all," I said. "If they are true to you, then they stay in. It is your book, not mine. It doesn't represent objective reality; it represents your reaction to reality. Did those passages seem sound and inevitable when you wrote them? Then they stay in."

So they stayed in, and the Comstocks duly raided the book.

Thus argument, as usual, led only to contradiction, enmity and disaster. On another such occasion the consequences were less deplorable. I have another friend, a distinguished anatomical artist, whose drawings are celebrated for their precise and merciless fidelity to nature. He paints landscapes quite as well as livers and lights, but in the same way. He is strongly against the new movement in painting, and believes that it is the artist's highest duty to present the object depicted exactly as it stands.

One day I told this gentleman that I'd like to have a specimen of his work, and he presented me forthwith with a truly marvelous drawing. It represented, he told me, a kidney in the last stages of some dreadful disease, and was to be reproduced in a forthcoming medical work. Knowing nothing of kidneys, I could admire it as a work of art, and as such it seemed to me to be magnificent. So greatly did I esteem it that I had it framed and hung it in my office, that visiting customers might share my pleasure in it.

The first visitor to see it was a critic of painting. He anchored himself before it and gazed at it for ten minutes.

"How do you like it?" I asked at length.

"It is superb," he said. "Leonardo himself was not a better draftsman. You have a masterpiece. Where did you get it?"

"Do you know what it represents?" I asked.

"No," said the critic. "Who cares what it represents? It may be whatever you choose to call it. All it represents to me is a first rate draftsman. The fellow can draw. And he has something to say."

Whereupon, in the manner of art critics, my friend proceeded to a disquisition unintelligible to me. But one thing, at least, I understood: that this master realist had not fetched him by realism.

In so far as it has any meaning at all, indeed, realism simply means the opposite of consciously false. Daisy Ashford's "The Young Visiters" was brilliantly realistic, and in the best sense, though it was full of palpable absurdities. But Daisy did not intend them to be absurdities. She felt them as truths, and so she was a realist. The world she depicted was authentically the world that she saw. And what she added to it represented exactly her private view of the way it might be made better and more charming.

In this sense—the only true sense—all novelists of any merit whatsoever are realists. Joseph Conrad was, though he dealt habitually with strange people and unfamiliar situations, often near the border line of the fantastic. Anatole France was, though he more than once crossed the line. Realism is simply intellectual honesty in the artist. The realist yields nothing to what is manifestly not true, however alluring. He makes no compromise with popular sentimentality and illusion. He avoids the false inference as well as the bogus fact. He respects his materials as he respects himself.

But all that certainly doesn't make him a photographer. In the world as he sees it there are facts that lie outside him and facts that lie within, and they are of equal importance. It is his contribution that converts a dead external reality into a living inner experience, and conveys his own emotion to the reader. If that emotion of his is common and shoddy, then what he writes will be common and shoddy, but if it has dignity in it, and some echo of the eternal tragedy of man, then he will produce a genuine work of art. What ails most of the so-called realists, particularly in this great republic, is simply that they are inferior men. They see only what is visible to an ice wagon driver. They bring to it only the emotional responses of a trolley conductor.

"MY COUNTRY" PLAYS MELTING POT THEME

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The comedy of the week is one called "My Country." It was written by William J. Perlman, who is probably a distant son of Judea; staged by Charles Judels, who is either French or should be; produced by the Independent Producing company, made up, I hear, of Shubert executives, and seeks to teach Americans of a comparatively ancient breed such tolerance as will make this melting pot of theirs a sweeter place to live in.

It is quite frankly a further attempt to capitalize and humanize those same racial characteristics and prejudices that have made "Abie's Irish Rose" the nation's second leading industry, and the attitude of the audience I sat with would indicate that it at least gives promise in New York of succeeding in its mission.

It is, like "Abie," a tale of mixed marriages. Little Alice Van Dorn, daughter of Rober Van Dorn, whose ancestors came over in 1614, insists on marrying Lester Blumberg, whose father is "in pants," and who has had the nerve to grow up across the areaway from Alice. And Alice's big brother, Bob, elopes with Marianna Palmieri, daughter of Frank Palmieri, who swears by and at Mussolini and glorifies all his glorious countrymen from Christopher Columbo to the current but somewhat obscured king.

This lack of racial pride drives the proudly protesting Father Van Dorn from his own home, but after six months of boarding houses he is back for a silver wedding celebration ready to drink a toast to his country with his former neighbor enemies and to embrace his patient and forbearing wife. Thereafter there are to be no references to the dirty foreigners in his daily conversations and he promises to live happy ever after.

Not much of a play if you want to tear it apart, but good enough for the purposes for which it was written. The best of the characters is that of an explosive Italian, played by Joseph Verdi. Lee Kohlmar represents the comedy Jew, and Frederick Burton is rather impossibly American. Louise Randolph, Erin O'Brien-Moore, and Marguerite Mosier play the wives and daughters.

Early August Plays Are Disappointing.

Two other August plays that came in last week are likely to go out next week, or the week after. Neither is worth much as entertainment.

One is a western comedy called "No More Women." Sam Shipman and Neil Twomey wrote it, and its only touch of originality is the creation of a bragging cowboy character who might have been an amusing Petruchio of the Wyoming plains if his comedy background had been a little more convincing. He is such a cowboy as the dude ranches and the moving pictures may have created. His costume is rich and heavy with silver trimmings. His chaps are the widest in the country, his leather obesity belt the most flaring, his shirts the heaviest silk.

His experience with women has been such that he knows none can resist him. Once within range of his fascinations and they tremble half in fear of his approach and half in anticipation. Once within the circle of his arms they are, he says, likely as not to swoon, and frequently the more susceptible simply gasp and die.

In the play this swaggering Don Juan has bought for $500 a barefooted waif of 16 who is daughter to a worthless and luckless prospector. In trying to get away from him she seeks the protection of a woman hater from the east who is trying to heal a bruised heart in solitude, after having been rejected by a New York widow. The widow, pursuing the woman hater, meets the cowboy and can't resist trying her wiles upon him. Nor can he overlook the chance offered to pit his fascinations against hers. As a result the widow conquers and is conquered, leaving the purchased waif to the man hater.

A better story in the telling than in the playing. A highly artificial affair, it is frequently stupid and often heavily vulgar. The cast helps. Charles Bickford, who was so good as the big red of "Outside Looking In," plays the swaggerer, and Nana Bryant, last season's Duchess in "The Firebrand," is the widow.

All Right for Great Neck, but a Fade-Out for Town.

The second of the early starters is a revue called "Nic-Nax of 1926." Lieutenant Gitz-Rice, the war time melodist, whose "Dear Old Pal o' Mine" is still sung with gusto through almost as many noses as know "Sweet Adeline," is principally concerned in its assembling. And Gitz-Rice is a popular fellow.

He lives, I think, down Great Neck way. Anyway, I often hear of his leading the neighbors in song at the community parties, and of his being the life of the proceedings. It was out of these parties, I suspect, that "Nic-Nax" grew. It is exactly that kind of revue—the kind that would sound wonderful Sunday nights in Great Neck, but sort of fade-out Monday night in town.

The trouble with most of these little revues is that unless they have a distinctly original bill of specialties, of songs and dances and skits, they bump smack up against the more expensive competition of Broadway represented by productions of the Whites, the Ziegfelds, the Carrolls, and the Andersons. And there is hardly one chance in a hundred that they can stand the comparison.

"Nic-Nax" has the usual song numbers, the supple lady who combines the contortionistic pose with her dancing steps and pauses occasionally to sit down with apparent comfort on the back of her own head, the acrobatic lad who adds to his dancing the auricular pivot, twirling with amazing skill on the lobe of either ear, and the prima donna who does her best to "put over" the principal songs.

It happens in "Nic-Nax" that the gentleman who prepared the lyric for the leading march song demands that the prima donna shall shout lustily for the "ses-qui-cen-tenny-yell," while a chorus of youthful Amazons in blue plush bodices and bare legs does the march.

When she placed the greatest emphasis on the "yell," I accepted it as the reasonable protest of her artistic soul.

Meller Skirts Grow Popular.

As I have written you before, we seem fairly intent on going Spanish this season. And now a new interest is looming. In connection with the Spanish fever the smartest society girls are thinking seriously of indorsing the long and flowing skirts so gracefully worn by Raquel Meller and the seven daughters of the new ambassador from Spain, who recently arrived in Washington.

In the "Valencia" number, which still is the hit of "The Great Temptations" at the Winter Garden, the ladies' skirts billow fulsomely about the slim shins of the senoritas. The Meller costumes were all long and in sharp contrast to the knee exposing styles from Paris. Mlle. Trini, carrying a bit of Spain into Mr. Albee's vaudeville houses, also favors the long skirts that both Mr. Albee and the Pope of Rome have indorsed, and before the season is over I would not be a bit surprised to meet a lot of forward little girls back in long skirts.

When the new "Vanities" is presented at the Carroll theater the last of the month the early visitors will discover that what was once a night club interior has been completely changed to a scene in Madrid—a street scene, one decorator tells me, with Moorish windows peeking out of the most unexpected places, and silken canopied balconies everywhere. An old Spanish garden scene, says another. But they probably will get together before the opening.

Following his night club custom of making the audience feel at home, Mr. Carroll will also furnish castanets free to any who desire to dance the Spanish dances during the inter-

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

BOTH the writer known as E. Barrington (and as L. Adams Beck, also), who was entertaining about Byron in "The Glorious Apollo," and André Maurois, who was brilliant about Shelley in "Ariel," draw heavily on the stage in their respective new books, "The Exquisite Perdita" and "Mape." So also does Carl Van Vechten,—although he may not be conscious of it,—in his new tale, "Nigger Heaven";—and so does Miss Edna Ferber, too, if I'm to judge by Miss Butcher's advance-review of "Show Boat" in THE TRIBUNE of yesterday: I've not read the novel. . . . The Exquisite Perdita is the Mary Robinson who for a brief time was one of Sheridan's stars the while he kept shop as a theater-manager in London. M. Maurois gives one-third of his three-part "Mape" to the famed Mrs. Siddons and the theater of Garrick's day; and, while he disposes of her and of the legends that represent a century's increment of sentimental twaddle concerning her with the smooth and unforced cruelty that marked his placing of Shelley, he exhibits another celebrity, Gœthe, as an actor at heart, and asks us to believe that all of us strut a deal and mask a deal and pose a deal as we go our way in Mape. The complete title is "Mape: the World of Illusion"; and Mape, he tells us in a foreword, is a land of make-believe to which we all repair at times, and there delude ourselves into thinking that we're somebodies else. The theme whereon M. Maurois improvises is Oscar Wilde's third-hand epigram, "Life imitates Art much more than Art imitates Life." To be fair, nobody else has put the thought into English so succinctly as Wilde; and, in these minor philosophies, it isn't a question so much of who first says a thing as of who best says a thing: who says it best says it last, after all.

RICHARD BENNETT He's bill-topping in the Palace in a brief play, "A Common Man."

M. Maurois Junks a Tradition.

The merciless ease wherewith M. Maurois dissects Mrs. Siddons is as fascinating as were his processes in the case of Shelley. I have long contended that the best course of study with regard to the theater of the past consists of paying common-sense attention to the theater of the present; and any intelligent person who pursues my method can arrive at no other conclusion than that a bit more than ninety-nine percent of all we read of the theater down to the time we began to take notice is just balderdash. The Frenchman puts this celebrity of mother-rôles against a plausible background of semi-fiction, and, with a kindness that is exquisite in its facile pitilessness, reduces her to what I have always believed her to have been—a competent third-rate actress of rôles not at war with her personality nor with her attitude toward acting as a trade or occupation. Theater-reporters of her day were agreed that she was an easy weeper in the part of a heart-broken mother; and M. Maurois makes it clear that, when domestic woes bore heavily upon her, she held her grief in check until the night when next she was to act as Constance in "King John" or Mrs. Heller in "The Stranger," and then cut loose. . . .

But, delicious as is "The Interpreter," the third of "Mape" having to do with Mrs. Siddons, it is not more so than "The Creator," which tells of Gœthe in the days when he was accumulating the material for "The Sorrows of Werther," nor than "The Reader," wherein there is a credible account of a young man who tried to get up in life by deporting himself after the manner of a character in one of De Balzac's tales. . . . If you liked "Ariel" for what it really was, you'll like "Mape," which is fine in the best sense of that adjective when applied to art.

Here Again Are All the Regency Entertainers.

"The Exquisite Perdita" is the result of a new shuffling of the old deck of picture-cards used whenever a novelist or a playwright is seized with the desire to play the game having to do with the manners and the morals of London and Bath in the period loosely referred to in literary history as the Regency. Sheridan is in it, and Garrick, in his old age, and Fox, of course, and Mrs. Abington, and Betty Linley as Mrs. Sheridan, and Mrs. Tickell, Betty's gay sister, and Mrs. Crewe, and Walpole, and George IV as Prince of Wales, and so on: only the picture-card marked Brummell is missing. They're all so many stage-characters as the author uses them,—and as most other authors have used them. Sheridan needs a placing by M. Maurois. And Fox. And, above all, the royal pup who became George IV. He's an old, old friend of all of us who go to the theater. Mansfield made a "curtain" of the line in Fitch's "Beau Brummell" wherein the dandy referred insolently to the Prince's avoirdupois. I recall Hackett, when he was slim and cinema-looking, as the spoiled sheik in some stuff by Mrs. Burnett named "The First Gentleman of Europe." Charles Coghlan had a fight with the fellow over a girl in "The Royal Box." Chauncey Olcott, too, had his troubles with the lad: the day will never come when I shall be too old to remember and to laugh anew that Chauncey, having been told that the girl of his heart has been abducted and that the Prince has been known to covet her, drew his sword, raised it high above him in the classic gesture, stepped to the very curtain-line, and said to the audience: "If thu Prince uv Whales has done this thing, thin God helpp thu Prince uv Whales!"

"With Arrangement for Ukulele."

I'm better than half-way in "Nigger Heaven" without discerning whether Mr. Van Vechten is trying to kid somebody or is really kidding himself; and it may turn out that he is engaged in neither of those enticing and profitless pastimes. This clever young man has of late had much to say in print about the "significance" of Negro workers in most of the arts, and has been seeking to dispose himself in the statutory attitude of a prophet. In making out a case for this Negro renaissance, he leans heavily upon the everyday manifestations of ordinary talent known to most of us who take an interest in one thing and another meant (or used) to provide a minor mitigation of existence. He thinks "spirituals" are "significant," and overlooks that they have been urged into vogue by white singers and white musicians. He, like most others who write about it, regards jazz as something of basic importance in music, whereas it is merely a manner of treating music: the vitality of any piece of music resides in the melody or tune, and not in the treatment to which the melody is subjected. And none of the men and women writing topical fiction should have better sense in this matter than Carl Van Vechten, who has written some of the most useful and intelligent articles on music to reach type in the last thirty years. . . .

However, I have the second part of this tale about Harlem as a Negro colony to read—a matter of a hundred or more pages; and it may be that I shall learn about his design ere I finish. Meanwhile, I'm trying hard to meet a point-of-view which sees as precursors of a new movement in the arts such talents as those of Williams and Walker, Cole and Johnson, Miss Florence Mills, Paul Robeson, Roland Hayes, with an assortment of fiction-writers, poets, and other earnest workers who are without identity to most of us. . . . And there's something unfriendly to me, for one, in the affectation which keeps Mr. Van Vechten from using quotation-marks to distinguish between dialogue and narrative. George Moore spoiled for most of us an interesting if freakish work, "The Brook Kerith," by the same silly trick—a sillier one, by far, than Shaw's dropping italics in favor of spaced letters when he desires to stress a word in the dialogue of his plays.

Music Staff Shows Exceptional Loyalty

By Edward Moore.

Cockburn suspects Lady Pamela. Lorenzo challenges Fra Diavolo to a duel, much to the satisfaction of the latter, who believes that if he can lure Lorenzo away from the inn it will be an easy matter to avenge the deaths of his robber band.

In the third act, Fra Diavolo leaves secret orders for his two aids, but they have been undone by too much wine. They give themselves away and, captured, are compelled to confess that the stranger is their chieftain. A trap is laid for him and when he appears he is shot. Lorenzo then learns that Zerlaine has been entirely faithful to him and all ends happily.

What is not indicated in this outline, a frequent failing of summarized plots, is that the piece is unbelievably comic. If you have not seen Virgilio Lazzari's dealings with a plate of spaghetti in the first act, you have missed one of the funniest things on the stage. Even Charlie Chaplin's meal of stewed boot in "The Gold Rush" is hardly comparable to it. This is something gigantic.

With the Melody Makers.

Fortune Gallo steps forward with the announcement that he has just signed Pietro Mascagni to come over and conduct the American premiere of his "Piccolo Marat," a work that seems to have been something of a hit in Italy, but of which American opera producers have fought shy. It will be with the San Carlo Opera company, which organization is now getting under way for a week in Asheville, N. C., another in Montreal, and on Sept. 6, a season at the Century theater in New York.

Mascagni was last here in 1902 on a tour that had financial disaster as accompaniment. Twice since then he has been reported as coming, but did not sail. One of the time was in 1911, when he was engaged to direct the first American performance of a painful thing called "Ysobel," afterwards changed to "Ysabeau" when the late Cleofonte Campanini got hold of it and produced it first with Rosa Raisa and later with Anna Fitziu. Two years ago Mascagni was talked about in connection with "Piccolo Marat," but he stayed on the other side with the remark: "New Yorkers know nothing about art. They have money, but no conception of artistic things."

His latest surge into print was the opinion that jazz should be prohibited by law, like narcotics, since it has the same harmful effect on the spirit that opium has on the body and mind.

The opera, "Judith," in which Mary Garden plans to appear at the Auditorium next winter is, as was told in this column a few weeks ago, by Arthur Honegger. It deals with the biblical story of Judith and Holophernes. Originally a drama by Rene Morax, Honegger composed incidental music for it, which he later developed into an operatic score, and produced at Monte Carlo last year. Manager Herbert M. Johnson, arriving a few days ago from Europe, also told of the retention of Alfano's "Resurrection" for Miss Garden's use.

Eugen D'Albert's "Tiefland" has been translated into English under the title, "The Lowlands," and Claudia Muzio will approach her first English rôle therein. Henry G. Weber will conduct. There is also the promise of Charles Wakefield Cadman's "The Witch of Salem," which was on last year's list, but fell by the wayside. "Tristan and Isolde" will be revived, it is to be hoped with better results than attended its performance five years ago, and there will be further hearings of "Der Rosenkavalier," both works to be done in German.

Frederick Stock is in the east scheduled for dealings with at least two orchestras before he returns to take up the new season of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. He will have a week of the Stadium concerts in New York and two weeks with the Philadelphia orchestra in that city's sesquicentennial. One of the works he plans to introduce to eastern audiences is Eric DeLamarter's Symphony, "After Walt Whitman," which has been a creator of argument here between the casual concert goers and the mezzanine brows.

Edward K. House, organist, and Beatrice Timmis, soprano, will make the music at the noon concert of the Chicago theater today. Nathaniel Finston, formerly musical director at that house and now general musical director of the Balaban and Katz theaters and their subsidiaries, is the stage producer of "Sidewalks of New York," which will be shown this week at the Chicago.

There is another Charles Dawes in the land, but he is a choral conductor and his mail is addressed to Cleveland. His Orpheus choir has just won the first prize in the male chorus section of the international eisteddfodd at Swansea, Wales.

Frank Bennett, baritone, and Virginia Burch, contralto, will appear in joint recital at the Hotels Windermere tonight.

RAVINIA OPERA AND CONCERTS

This afternoon—Chicago Symphony orchestra concert; conductor, Eric De Lamarter.

THE SPANISH GYPSY

LUCREZIA BORI.
[Strauss Peyton Photo.]

MANUEL DE FALLA'S "La Vida Breve" has become popular at Ravinia this summer far beyond the fate of most new operas. Its languorous melodies and Spanish rhythms have quite caught the fancy of the public. But an important item in the opera's success is the fact that Miss Bori, herself a Spaniard, takes the chief part. This is she as Salud, the gypsy girl. In case you have forgotten, the time is tomorrow night.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

BOOKINGS for the Chicago theaters, which seem to be increasingly tentative, are in process of readjustment. . . . Thus, word late Friday from the Harris was that it would be reopened the 28th with Mr. and Mrs. Hattons' new piece called "Treat 'Em Rough!" Indications until the other day were that the next play in the Harris would be Owen Davis' farce called "Easy Come, Easy Go!" with Victor Moore as the principal performer, and that "Treat 'Em Rough!" would be sent into the Adelphi. . . . Mr. Moore, who is said to have had in "Easy Come, Easy Go!" the best rôle to fall his way since 'Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," is going with Miss Gertrude Lawrence and Walter Catlett into a new piece written for the good-looking Englishwoman; and it is unlikely that "Easy Come, Easy Go!" will be brought here at all, inasmuch as its other star in New-York, Otto Kruger, refuses again to act in it, saying that his rôle therein was inferior to Mr Moore's. . . . Miss Geneviève Tobin, (the Tobin who was in "Little Old New-York" and "Polly Preferred"), George Gaul, Walter Connelly, and John Hamilton will be in the Hattons' piece.

And I should say that there is an easy association of ideas in the restive titles of "Treat 'Em Rough!" and "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em!" the piece announced for the 29th in the La Salle.

Miss Rachel Busey Kinsolving, the impresario of musical and dancing performers, explains à propos some lines on the operetta of "Deep River" printed by me in THE TRIBUNE of the 13th, that Franke Harling, composer of the piece, has always sported that e at the end of his prenomen. . . . Miss Kinsolving further explains that at least two of the five persons I listed in that paragraph as making up the cast of "Deep River" are not unknowns: that Miss Lettice Howell sang here some time since in Mr. Hinshaw's revival of "The Impresario," and that Julius Bledsoe is a Negro baritone of distinction.

Gregory Kelly, new to the game, goes into the two-a-day this week in a sketch called "The Honeymoon." The late Aaron Hoffman wrote it; and it was used for a time by Henry Hull and Miss June Walker. . . . Miss Walker, as stated last week, is withdrawing from her rôle in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," that she may have a rest before the piece opens in New-York. Miss Iris West is the new actress of Lorelei. And the piece will be acted two weeks from tonight and for the remainder of the engagement by a second cast.

And today's New-York Times says that there is high expectancy down there as to "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"; that everybody who likes to be seen at first-nights if importance is trying to secure a seat; and that the price of seats for the New-York opening, $11, sets a new record in admission-fees for plays without tunes and girls and such.

New in Manhattan.

These new plays are listed for the week in the New-oYrk theaters:

"Loose Ankles," by Sam Jenney, with Miss Kathleen Comegys, George W. Barbier, Osgood Perkins, and Miss Carlotta Irwin.

"Sunshine," by Henry C. White, with O. P. Heggie, Miss Eleanor Griffith, and Miss Ruth Lee. . . . Mr. White, it seems, has written other things for the theater under the name of Roland Oliver.

"The Little Spitfire," by Myron C. Fagan, with Miss Sylvia Field, Russell Mack, A. H. Van Buren, and Mrs. Theresa Maxwell-Conover. . . . Mr. Fagan, for a time an inhabitant of this city, wrote one of last season's many worst plays—"The Fascinating Devil."

missions, but they naturally will be expected to furnish their own high heeled shoes for stamping purposes. I can think of nothing that would add more to the joys of the theater season than to see some of the girls and boys I know dancing a castanet dance on Mr. Carroll's stage.

Not to be left out of the new movement, Mr. Ziegfeld is preparing a Spanish revue to be called, I hear, "Rio Rita." And you know what that means. At least a carload and a half of towering combs and gorgeous mantillas, and shawls so completely fringed that there is practically no shawl left.

It's a Far Cry from the Nickelodeon.

The movies had their day in print this week when John Barrymore's new picture, "Don Juan," was shown first to an invited audience of friends and newspaper men and again to a banner crowd of cinema high hats at $10 the seat.

We have come a considerable distance in the twenty years that have made it possible for the great-great-grandchildren of the nickelodeon to collect that sum for an opening night in a Broadway theater.

This exhibit, however, carried another feature with it, the vitaphone, which is later to carry the strains of symphony orchestra picture accompaniments into the hamlet halls where now only a pianist, or a pianist and a fiddler play up the pursuit of the runaways or musically spoof the tumbling comics.

It is, they tell me, a perfect synchronization of sound and scene and even the music critics have been kind enough to say that, for canned music, it is a vast improvement on most they have heard and still capable of being scientifically improved.

Mr. Barrymore is credited, too, with revealing an athletic prowess few of the folks imagined he possessed. Not only is he a good lover, but a great runner and jumper, and he is skillful with the foils. In one scene he grabs up the not inconsiderable person of Mary Astor and, holding her deftly in one arm, swings from a clinging vine with the other and thus makes good his escape.

Our John, I would say, has been practically remade by the movies.

She's in the cast of "The Poor Nut," wherein Elliott Nugent, coauthor of the comedy with his seasoned father, will act two weeks from tonight in the Cort.

Nosey.

I called upon a girl friend in the adjoining office this morning, having nothing else to do, and was sitting on her desk chewing the rag when I spied a letter, newly typed, lying on the desk beside me.

Absently, I picked it up and scanned it, and after reading a few lines, I realized it was a personal letter, dictated by one of the "high-ups" and stopped reading, remarking as I put it down again, "Who dictated the goofy letter?" The poor girl looked daggers at me and past me, and I turned around to stare into the eyes of the president of her company, who picked up the "goofy" letter, and sailed out.

This afternoon when I passed her office door, upon my return from lunch, I found a neatly typed "No Admittance" pasted on the glass, and I suppose it means no nosey visitors.

Why They Laughed.

Some four years ago I was called from play to go to the drug store for a medicinal tea. Returning I went out to play and in a short time was again called and told to get a "T"-bone steak. My mind more intent on play and thinking about tea, I walked into the same drug store and said to the clerk, "I want a nice tender T-bone steak."

To my horror he replied, "You can purchase that at the butchers, miss."

It took me a second or so to comprehend. When I did I quickly left with the loud laughter of the clerk and another man that was in the place ringing in my ears.

Disappointed.

Before I was married I was invited to attend a picnic with my prospective husband's parents, meeting them for the first time. Naturally I desired to make a good impression upon them and so decided to contribute a delicious confection in the way of a combination sandwich filling of nuts, olives, dates and figs. As we were starting early in the morning I made the sandwiches the night before, wrapped them in dainty little oil paper packages and retired, at peace with the world.

The next morning dawned and away we went. By noon we were hungry. Opening the packages I scarcely recognized the sandwiches, as they were black through and through. Each one of the party ate about a half of a sandwich to be polite, but I could scarcely eat a morsel. Needless to say I have never since attempted a new venture in cooking when meeting people for the first time and I have left olive and nut sandwiches out of my menus completely.

Tokio Reports 100 Shoplifters Per Day

TOKIO.—[Special Correspondence.] The hard times in Tokio show themselves in the police report that shoplifters to an average of 100 a day have been caught in the four biggest department stores of the capital during the last thirteen days.

In the cities of Japan this is the period of the midsummer Christmas, the time when the spirits of all the dead return to earth to visit their respective descendants for a period of three days. In their honor all houses are made scrupulously clean and the daintiest of food and the best of drinks are placed daily in the family shrine for the ghostly visitors. The people also exchange gifts, put on their new clothes and celebrate.

Not to give gifts and not to have something new to wear is considered a great disgrace. Hence the number caught shoplifting. Ordinarily honest in small things, nearly any Japanese would rather steal than miss gift giving.

Very few detected shoplifters are prosecuted at this season, the storekeepers and the police recognizing the temptation and being content with the return of the goods and the administering of stern warning.

Mistaken Worship.

TOKIO.—A carven wooden figure, which has been worshiped for the last 300 years in a Buddhist temple at Azumamura under the belief that it was Saint Kateki, Buddhist disciple, has been shown by research to be the figurehead of the Dutch yacht Erasmus, which was seized by a Japanese clan leader in 1608 and broken up.

From Amy Leslie in The Daily News

.. at the Studebaker theater last night there was a tremendous crowd of pleasure-seekers who found keen revelry in the handsomely delivered play Owen Davis has made out of F. Scott Fitzgerald's diverting thrill, "The Great Gatsby." .. Nothing, not even the tragic end of it all, can make "The Great Gatsby" anything but popular and thrilling, and its success last night came act for act with personal hits for James Rennie and other players of the good cast .. Mr. Rennie can act as handsomely as he can make love or wear clothes.

If you want to see your letters in print, ase write on one side of the paper only. you desire personal answer, inclose mped and self-addressed envelope.

In Defense of Lloyd Hughes.

Good morning, Mae: I have a few plaints I'd like to heave off my st, which is why I'm writing to you. m referring to the letter you pubhed last Sunday sent in by "M. L." not a gambler, but I'm willing to er she had grapefruit for break t, or possibly lunch!

I do not resent criticism—I'm sure welcome by all the players and as them in correcting their faults, t where it is made without a foun tion, I draw the line.

"Lloyd Hughes is more or less of a "—[I quote from her letter]. M. L. you count ten before you wrote t? I think it is a correct statent when I say that a player [unless star] cannot select his own rôles. Hughes is handicapped by a handme face, with the result that he is WAYS forced to play "millionaires' s," or college rôles. Undoubtedly, Mr. Hughes was given the oppority, he certainly could "emote." r me, I wish Lloyd Hughes' press nt would read this so as to defend . I can't do it alone. What about other "L. H." fans? Say someing!

Her comments on the other stars e correct in my estimation, especial concerning Pola Negri. I formerly rked for a railroad and have seen ite a number of the "stars." I have n Miss Negri four times—in fact, I sure a rose from her bouquet. She erves bigger and better pictures. d yet, Mae, as much as I've seen r, I wouldn't spend my seventy-five ts seeing her likeness. I only say e's a good actress and deserves bet r pictures.

Now once again, Mae, why do you st Tom Mix and throw brickbats Buck Jones? Why? Because Tom ts a larger salary, or because he ruts like a peacock?

I hope you publish this because, nkly, I'd like to know what you and L. think of my criticism.

Pictorially yours,
S. A. K.

Editor's note: Good morning, S. A. . Thanks for the letter, but, I ask u, is that next to the last paragraph ice?

On Filmdom's Gift to Women.

Dear Miss Tinée: Never wrote to u before but have enjoyed reading hat you write immensely.

I saw "Son of the Sheik" this week d did I love it! I've been in a trance en since—have paused in the act of shwashing several times to dream his smile and imagine myself flyg around on an Arabian horse. You ow how it is, you almost wish someody as wonderful as Rudy would give u a chance to call him a brute as threw you around and made you e it. I don't believe they are that antic any more.

I read the paragraph in which you marked that Rudolph wore a new d different expression in several with Vilma. I noticed it too, pecially in the ruins. Hasn't he been rumored as being attentive to Miss Banky?

I've enjoyed writing this, because its easy to write to you. Your column is always so cheerful and peppy. I'll bet you think I'm flattering you like this so you'll print it. Now, maybe I am! Li'l Bit O' Ireland."

Editor's Note: •Maybe you am and maybe 'e fell! Come again, L. B. O. I.

Disappointed.

Dear Mae: You're no longer like Ceasar's wife. Went to the Chicago theater for surprise week, mainly through your write up. It should have been disappointment week.

Oh, my Gawd, another illusion gone!

Your Exad-mirer,
R. A. E.

Editor's Note: O! O!

So That's That.

Dear Miss Tinée: Hain't some folks the limit? Here comes H. J. in Sunday's "Voice of the Fan," making a kick because Miss Pitts acts dumb. Don't you dare let Zasu know about this or she will be trying to not act dumb—and she'll lose her job. I have never heard any one complain about Miss Pitts acting dumb. We want her to act dumb. If she quits it we won't go to see her. Next thing H. J. or some one else will be urging that Charley Chaplin go into tragedy.

And, Miss Tinée, please tell folks that "So This Is Paris" is very poor stuff and has no more to do with Paris than a western. A. A.

Editor's Note: You tell 'em, A. A.!

Spoofing, or Serious?

MY dear Miss Tinee: We have had serious arguments in regard to the picture, "The Tower of Lies." What we would like to know is from what source did Glory acquire her wealth?

We would appreciate an article in The Tribune giving your idea on the subject. Erick.

Editor's Note: Are you kidding me?

To Dr. T. O. M.

Dear Mae Tinée: I hope that hundreds of mothers and children will answer Dr. T. O. M. and that vall will be published. What kind of a being is he to make such remarks about mothers?

Possibly, if he had been a child, he would change his mind. How could Stella do more or deny herself more than she did?

I think that it is a fine story, and I hope that Dr. T. O. M. will get a lot of answers. Stella's self-sacrifice was wonderful!

I am quite a stranger here. My name would not be known, but I could not resist expressing my opinion.

P. F. H.

Editor's note: I am happy to know you did not feel yourself a stranger to this column. Please visit us via letter soon again.

Lauds "The Volga Boatman."

Dear Miss Tinée: I just read your review of "The Volga Boatman." Now, I saw it a week ago and have been waiting for your review.

I agree that it is art. It is more—it is one of the marvels of the movie world. I enjoyed every minute of it. I saw it at the Majestic theater in Cedar Rapids, Ia. A man sang the boatman's song and it was thrilling. I have never seen anything quite like it any place.

I always read your reviews and enjoy them. I haven't seen your review of "Kiki," but I'm going to see it [the picture] this week.

I nearly always agree with you, but never so thoroughly as this time Wanted to cry when Vasailli died; didn't you? J. M. R.

THEY'RE TOILING FOR US IN AUGUST

MISS JOSEPHINE EVANS

MISS VIRGINIA O'BRIEN

READERS of "The Great Gatsby" recall, of course, the character of the garage-keeper's coarse wife: her death when struck by a car driven by her lover leads to the murder of Gatsby by her husband. In the play, the garage-keeper is become Buchanan's chauffeur, and the wife is brought into one of Gatsby's free-for-all "parties." The wife is acted by Miss Evans in the Studebaker performances of the good play Owen Davis has made from F. Scott Fitzgerald's good tale.

Miss O'Brien, who was here three years ago in George M. Cohan's "The Rise of Rosie O'Reilly," is singing in "Castles in the Air" the part wherein Miss Vivienne Segal was heard here for weeks and weeks and weeks.

Family Album Film Amuses Movie Stars

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Several brilliant affairs made the last week notable. One saw all the stars of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and many others at a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rapf in Wilshire. Supper was served in the large garden of the Rapf home illuminated by numerous Chinese lanterns.

Mae Murray with her husband, Prince David Divani, was seated in one of the canvas couch swings on the lawn, dressed in white lace with one of the little flare lace rimmed hats Mae always seems to wear with her evening costumes.

Opposite her at a table not twenty feet distant, Bob Leonard, Mae's former husband, was seated with his recent bride, Gertrude Olmstead, who was pretty in a large cart wheel red hat with a white georgette and lace gown. Gertrude has bobbed her long luxuriant hair, evidently one of her first acts as a wife to please her husband who was loud in his commendations of the new bob.

A Striking Gown.

Mabel Normand looked stunning in a black velvet dress trimmed in flesh georgette and beading of silver and crystal. A small black silk hat with drooping brim made a pretty frame for the famous comedy star's large dark eyes. George Jessel, whose wife, Florence Courtney, and he have separated for about the seventh time, sat and discoursed with Mabel. Norma Shearer wore white flannel with a tiny white tam and a white fox neckpiece.

Claire Windsor was a ravishing sight in orchid chiffon with a black bengaline coat whose trimming was made of overlapping mother of pearl buttons and a light blue lining of taffeta

Getting Out the Album.

Then came the screen showing of the family album, a series of infant pictures gotten from somewhere in a plush album. One read "John Gilbert, before he knew there was any Joy in his life, or that Lillies grew in England." This last because Beatrice Lillie and Jack have struck up quite a friendship and pair off together for all the screen folks' parties.

Another shown was "Fred Niblo before he said, 'Give me another Ben Hur and I will make it my life work.'" referring to the long months consumed in filming "Ben Hur."

A picture of a lad in knee pants, tintype style, was titled "Hobart Henley at the age of 10; taken the day he bid goodbye to Nita Naldi."

A feminine tot's likeness was greeted as "Mae Murray at the age of 2, before she exercised her first option on L. B. Mayer."

Two youthful persons in short Victorian era dresses appeared on the screen as "Lillian and Dorothy Gish, aged 4 and 6, when they began in the movies. Their combined salary at this time was only $276,000." Whether Lillian Gish, who with 200 others made up the audience on folding chairs in the Rapfs' patio, smiled at the sally could not be learned, for her face was hidden by the shadows of one of the patio's great semi-tropical trees.

Making Them Laugh.

The audience was mirthful when the following other titles appeared:

"Famous last words—'Lew Cody, meet my wife.'"

"Cut out that close-up of me; too many in the picture now"—Roy D'Arcy.

A picture similar to the prized photo that every grandmother has at home showed an elderly man and woman, 1872 style pose and garb, and was headed as "King Vidor and Eleanor Boardman taken during their recent vacation at Catalina."

After the "family album," Mr. Rapf's screen flashed a title, "John Gilbert signing a new contract with Louis B. Mayer." The accompanying scenes showed a vicious prize fight, with each contestant knocked down several times and one of them finally floored for keeps, although whether the loser depicted John Gilbert or Mr. Mayer could not be gathered from the scrambled condition of the features.

"Ben Hur" Goes West.

Los Angeles and Hollywood have finally seen the long awaited coast opening of "Ben Hur." Many of the principals were present, including Carmel Myers, who plays Iras, wearing a silver and white brocaded gown trimmed in silver lace, with a wrap of silver and a corsage of orchids. Mae MacAvoy, the Esther of the picture, was charming in old rose satin trimmed quaintly in rows of blue velvet ribbon, with a blue brocaded wrap. Kathleen Key, Tirzah, the sister of Ben Hur, received her applause in a gown of sand colored crêpe georgette with panels of cream lace, with which she wore a Spanish shawl of yellow.

Gilda Gray made her appearance at the Hollywood premiere of her picture, "Aloma of the South Seas." Wallace Beery was toastmaster and introduced many of the stars in the audience from the stage, whither he threatened to carry them if they refused to come. Loud cheers from the balconies followed this announcement.

Here's a Potpourri of Old Time Films

By Mae Tinee.

the old days. (Give the hero a hose, you know.)

Those who doubt that the languid and wealthy Charles of today was a poor boy once should see this film and be convinced that he did indeed work his way up in the world. A batch of comical comedians and comediennes in the garb of y'ars ago support him with vim, vigor, and velocity.

"HER DECEITFUL LOVER," an old Keystone, brings the Mabel Normand of early screen days back to you. She is the luscious, giggling beauty desired by Ford Sterling, wearing horrid, menacing black mustachios, and Mack Sennett, stalwart but a bit too shy for his own good.

Mr. Sterling, who is the deceitful lover mentioned in the title, is a married man, with a large, neglected family. Mabel, of course, wots none of this.

She agrees to wed the deceitful lover and is in the act of being married to him when in breaks the good, true lover with the wife and family. The ceremony is, of course, called off.

Rather, however, than see Mabel married to his rival, the deceitful lover a few days later attempts to make way with her via a deadly buzz saw. But again Mr. Sennett comes to the rescue. The deceitful lover is bombed sky high.

THAT'S funny, too.

Then there's the news reel—so different from the ones we have today—and I guess that's about all.

An absorbing ensemble, if only for the reason of comparison.

See you tomorrow!

My Best Joke

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published, $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Nature's Little Joke.

A young couple were entertaining some of their friends when they realized that all their plans for entertainment had been exhausted. The situation was becoming critical, but the young husband had the idea of seeing who could make the ugliest face.

The contest was agreed upon and after the judges were appointed, all the guests tried and tried to make ugly faces.

When the time came for a decision, one of the judges walked up to one of the women and said, "we have decided to give the prize to you."

The guest replied, "Pardon me, but I wasn't playing." E. W.

So That's It!

"Is this a healthy town?" asked the newly arrived invalid.

"I should say so," answered the native. "When I came here I hadn't strength to utter a word; I had scarcely a hair on my head; I couldn't walk across the room, and had to be lifted from my bed."

"You give me hope. How long have you been here?"

"I was born here." I. B.

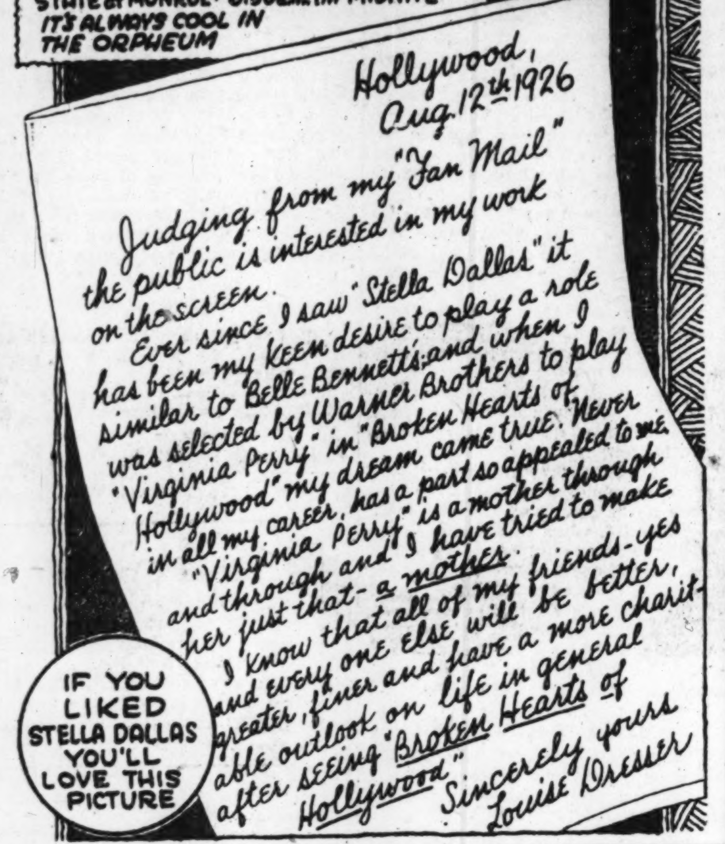
IT'S ALWAYS COOL IN THE ORPHEUM



Hollywood,
Aug. 12th 1926

Judging from my "Fan Mail" the public is interested in my work on the screen.

Ever since I saw "Stella Dallas" it has been my keen desire to play a role similar to Belle Bennett's and when I was selected by Warner Brothers to play "Virginia Perry" in "Broken Hearts of Hollywood" my dream came true. Never in all my career, has a part so appealed to me. "Virginia Perry" is a mother through and through and I have tried to make her just that—a mother.

I know that all of my friends—yes and every one else will be better, greater, finer and have a more charitable outlook on life in general after seeing "Broken Hearts of Hollywood."

Sincerely yours
Louise Dresser

Privacy

ALTHOUGH examining and treating an average of 1,200 men and women daily at fees within the reach of all, the Public Health Institute at all times maintains an atmosphere of privacy and refinement.

The diagnosis, treatment and cure of "social" diseases is conducted with professional dignity, and a minimum of embarrassment, discomfort and loss of time to the patient.

Arriving for the first time at the Public Health Institute, the new patient is shown to an attractively furnished reception room entirely apart from the departments to which regular patients go for treatment. Within a few moments he is assigned to one of twenty private examining rooms, a number sufficient to make long waits practically unknown.

Thereafter, when he comes for treatment, the patient goes directly to one of six departmental waiting rooms, according to the nature of his ailment. Opening off them are private rooms in which treatments are administered. An abundance of treatment rooms and a large staff of physicians assure prompt attention at any time during the Institute's convenient hours of 10 A. M. to 8 P. M.

As an added measure of privacy, names are not used at the Public Health Institute. When first examined, the patient is given a number and thenceforth is known only by that number. Even the physician attending him is entirely unaware of his identity.

The Public Health Institute, as you doubtless know is a non-profit organization founded by public-spirited citizens to combat the devastation wrought by venereal diseases in Chicago.

That the Institute meets a vital need is evidenced by the fact that "social" diseases yearly take their toll of 300,000 lives—six times the American fatalities of the World War. Often acquired innocently, they invariably result in disability or death unless promptly and properly treated. Insanity, paralysis, blindness, still-born and defective children—these are only a few of the horrible results of neglected venereal infections.

Fortunately, "social" diseases can be cured. There is hope for those who will face the facts and seek reliable treatment at once. If you have been exposed to infection, or if you have been infected in the past and have reason to doubt your complete cure, you are urged to consult a reputable physician or to come to the Public Health Institute for examination and advice.

The Public Health Institute offers the services of its trained physicians to any one who has contracted or has been exposed to a venereal disease. Those who come here receive the attention of sympathetic physicians in an atmosphere of complete privacy. As the Institute is organized not for profit, the fees are small and are the same to one and all.

Bearing in mind that a venereal infection may be acquired innocently, it is extremely advisable to be examined occasionally if only as a preventive measure. The cost of such an examination is trivial compared to the satisfaction of knowing that you are free from disease, or, if infected, that you are in safe hands.

Women and Children

To assure them the greatest possible privacy, a special department for women and children, with women nurses assisting its physicians, is maintained at 72 East Randolph Street. This department is likewise equipped with individual treatment rooms, as well as a number of reception rooms. Here, as in the men's department, it is possible for hundreds of persons to come and go without seeing or being seen by the patient.

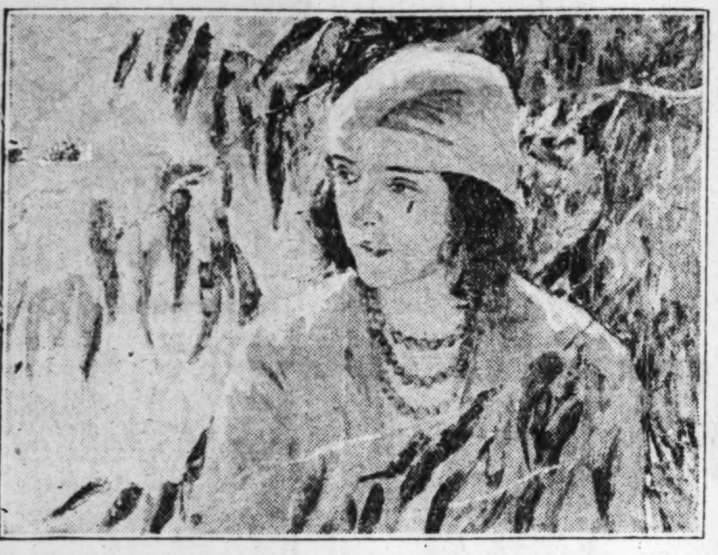
ART AND ARTISTS



"GYPSY," by Irving K. Manoir, one of the charming paintings to be found in this talented artist's current one man show in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The exhibition will close Sept. 15.

Glen Mitchell Show Covers Wide Scope

By Eleanor Jewett.

THIS is the middle of August and two of the summer exhibitions at the Art institute have as yet been left with little or no mention. This is due in part to their excellence. Like a child who keeps a favorite morsel on his plate to be eaten last and relished the more, these exhibitions have been withheld under much the same provocation.

The urge to dilate upon them has been suppressed each week and the result is that now that a great deal of comment concerning the other exhibits has found relief in print, the two that loom important out of the shadows of oversight must take their rightful place.

The one, of course, is the exhibition of portraits and sketches by Glen Mitchell, and the second is the group of paintings by contemporary American artists, including Wayman Adams, John E. Costigan, Edmund Greacen, Sigurd Skou and George Pearse Ennis.

About Glen Mitchell.

Glen Mitchell was awarded this spring the John Simon Guggenheim scholarship, carrying with it $2,500 a year for from one to three years [in his case it will be for three years] of foreign art study.

Glen Mitchell was born in New Richmond, Ind., in 1894. He was a student at the Chicago Art institute from 1915 to 1923. It is only comparatively recently that he has deserted Chicago for New York. He won a number of prizes during his years as a student in the Art institute and J. Wellington Reynolds, himself a painter of international repute, who is an instructor in the art school, claims him as one of his most brilliant and capable pupils.

To the international water color exhibition held this spring at the Art institute Mr. Mitchell sent eighteen water colors painted in Italy and Spain and a number of them found eager purchasers immediately. His current exhibition includes a group of water colors of scenes abroad, Italy, France, and Spain being the countries from which these notes from an artist's sketchbook are torn. The portraits make greater pretensions. Among the latter there are likenesses of Miss Catherine Norcross, Miss Bluford Richardson, Miss Mary Rend, Miss Dorothy Mann, Miss Lois Poterfield, Mrs. Howard E. Ellis Mrs. R. G. Sisley, and Mrs. D. C. Adams.

Direct and Delightful.

The portrait of Miss Mary Rend stands out for its remarkable, blunt sincerity. It carries a direct message of a strong, dynamic personality, vigorous, healthy, wholesome in something the manner that a Breton peasant woman is wholesome. There is nothing artificial about the composition. You see Miss Rend as an eager, inquiring spirit challenging you as your eyes skim the canvas. The portrait does not flatter; it reflects beautifully a warmly enthusiastic personality crowned with the privileges of youth.

The other portraits are more conventional affairs. The various sitters are dressed in their best and looking their prettiest, and the results, though charming and occasionally exquisite, make you feel the painter has been limited in the expression of his personality by the overwhelming effects of theirs.

To be a dramatic painter of portraits an artist mingles truth, beauty, vividness, life in a whirl on a possible palette and then selects the ingredients independently and puts them together as a picture. To be a portrait painter something in this fashion calls for a rather cold-blooded man. Whistler was such. You can imagine him telling his patrons to go to the devil if they did not like his conception of them Not so with Mr. Mitchell. You feel his good manners made him try to please his ladies more than himself.

Pretty Rather than Compelling.

One must be a good mind reader, too, an excellent student of character, to paint a real portrait. A pretty picture does not present such difficulties. But a portrait, a living likeness, that is not easy to paint. These portraits of Mr. Mitchell's, except for that of Miss Rend, are pretty pictures, and some undoubtedly are good likenesses, but the compelling influences that are alive in her rather unfinished portrait are not discoverable in the more carefully painted canvases.

The water color sketches are charming. Nice, Rome, Spain, Paris, Venice, Florence, the names stumble over themselves in the list from which he has secured fascinating, characteristic bits. There are fountains, naturally spelling Paris; colored sails on green water paths, Venice; a blue, blue stretch of sea and a flowering coast, Nice. There is power in these compositions and there is nothing mannered; beauty, and no affectations. Illustrations may be pot-boilers. Say it under one's breath, portraits may be pot-boilers, but these landscapes are the essence of the delight of an artist's finding himself in his work.

Registration for the fall term of the Art institute art school this year will start Sept. 22.

Miss Claudia Upton, assistant museum instructor, sailed July 3 for Europe. She is traveling leisurely through England, France, and Switzerland.

U. S. OFFICIALS PREDICT GOOD RADIO WEATHER

Static Awful in July, but September Will Be O. K.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—Although July has proved the worst summer static month this season—a questionable distinction which usually falls to June—government officials declare they expect a marked improvement within the next few weeks.

Four years of systematic recording of summer static at the U. S. bureau of standards shows that the most extreme conditions usually prevail in June and July, almost invariably followed by relief towards the end of August, improving steadily during September and with the best listening season of the year between Columbus day, Oct. 12, and St. Patrick's day, March 17.

Hot Day, No Static.

A curious condition was observed last month in that on one of the hottest days ever recorded here, in fact, for two days during that period, there was hardly any static. This phenomenon gave a serious jolt to the theory that extreme heat and abnormal static conditions go hand in hand.

It should be explained, however, that this staticless, sweltering July period occurred during the daytime, thus somewhat fitting into the theory that summer static is less prevalent in the morning, is apt to be worst in the early evening, but subsides late at night. Also it is known that the intensity of these atmospheric disturbances increases as the wave length increases.

Expect September to Be O. K.

Government observations show that atmospheric disturbances are much more troublesome in summer than fall or winter and more frequent in southern than northern latitudes. Freakish conditions were observed last winter, attributed by some to northern lights and others to sun spots. Despite this, however, government officials confidently expect that September ought to bring about the same good reception that usually prevails in April.

Also, although summer static obstinately maintained its high peak during June and until the last days of July, it is believed the curve will be well on the downward course by the middle of this month. By the same reasoning it is assumed when fall begins at 2:27 p. m. Sept. 23 the 1926 summer static troubles will be a thing of the dim past.

WEATHER HAS EFFECT

That temperature influences the strength of radio signals is the conclusion reached by L. W. Austin and Miss Wymore of the bureau of standards, department of commerce. This work is a part of the program of the International Union of Scientific Radio Telegraphy, which was adopted at Brussels in 1922 and is now being carried on in the various countries belonging to the union.

Two years ago Dr. Austin described a decided increase in the signals received at Washington from the Radio Corporation trans-Atlantic stations at Tuckerton and New Brunswick, N. J., during the passage of severe cold waves over the eastern states. Further study now indicates that whenever the temperature rises along the signal path there is a tendency for the signal to drop; and conversely, a falling temperature tends to produce a stronger signal, though these temperature effects are often masked by other unknown influences.

Effect High Waves.

Experiments on the relations existing between meteorological phenomena and radio transmission require preferably at least fairly uniform meteorological conditions between the sending and receiving stations. For this reason, stations between 125 and 190 miles distant were chosen for the experiments, rather than stations at great distances. On the other hand, stations much less than 125 miles distant would probably not have shown the influence of weather changes to so marked an extent.

There seems to be no doubt that the temperature changes influence the waves which are reflected or refracted from the Kennelly-Heaviside layer, 60 miles or more above the earth's surface, rather than the waves which glide along the ground, since no marked change is observed in signal intensity due to long continued rain or drought, the presence of snow, or the presence or absence of frost in the ground.

HOLD COMPOSERS' DECISION TILL CONGRESS ACTS

It has been announced by the department of justice that because of the unsettled state of the law relating to radio and the possibilities of legislation by congress this fall, the department reserves its decision in connection with the licensing of radio broadcasting stations by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

It was also announced that the department sees no reason for proceeding against the society under the anti-trust laws on account of its operations in collecting license fees for the public performance of copyrighted music from the owners of motion picture houses, hotels, dance halls, and similar places where copyrighted music is publicly performed for profit.

HORSE RACE AND BALL GAME ON AIR SAME TIME

A duplex sporting broadcast that should interest listeners will be W-G-N's simultaneous broadcasting of the horse races at the new Lincoln Fields track at Crete, Ill., and the Cubs-Brooklyn ball game out at the Addison street emporium of the Bruins next Saturday afternoon.

The game will be described in detail, but whenever the horses go to the post out at Lincoln Fields listeners will be switched down to the track so that they can get the results hot from the track. Each race lasts not more than two minutes, so that little of the ball game will be lost.

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Sunday, August 15.)

(Chicago Daylight Saving Time.)

"Ride 'im, cowboy!"

The war whoop of the rodeo, the cowboy's Olympic games, will come hurtling out of the loud speaker this afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock, when W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, broadcasts the second day's activities at the Chicago rodeo, the famous western sports events that draws the west's finest cowboys to the city.

From Texas to far Saskatchewan they have come, the "top hands" of the great western cattle country, with spurs jingling and new sombreros, to take part in the big annual contests at roping, riding, and steer wrestling that "Tex" Austin stages each year in Chicago.

Soldier's field has been temporarily transformed into the backyard of a western ranch, and Quin Ryan will tell the story of each of the rodeo's events as they transpire.

Preceding the station's broadcast of the rodeo, between 2 and 3 o'clock, listeners will hear the regular Sunday Lyon & Healy artist recital. Today Amalie Birnbaum, violinist, and Dwight Edrus Cook, tenor, are the featured artists. Their program is as follows:

Dance Tzigane..........Nachez
Might Lak a Rose..........Nevin
Mrs. Birnbaum
E Lucevan le Stelle (Tosca)..........Puccini

Between 4 and 5 o'clock W-G-N will broadcast the band concert from the outdoor Lincoln park bandstand.

Another of the popular Atwater Kent summer concerts will be heard this evening at 8:15 o'clock. Allen McQuhae, tenor, who has been featuring the concerts, will be heard again, accompanied by the Atwater Kent orchestra directed by Nicolai Berezowsky.

Richard Wagner is the composer whose works and life come under discussion in tonight's "Our Music Room," between 9 and 10 o'clock. The old music master of the Music Room will discuss the famous German composer's career, and listeners will hear excerpts from his famous operas, "Die Valkure," "Tannhauser," and "Lohengrin."

Correll and Gosden, W-G-N's harmony experts, are to offer a fifteen minute group of songs between 7:45 and 8 o'clock. A number of their new phonograph record releases will be sung.

"Sam 'n' Henry" are scheduled to come on the air at their customary time, 10 o'clock. Sam is still suffering from the knockout blow delivered last night by Dangerous Dan during the battle for the jewels of the Crown boxing championship, and this evening's episode finds Henry trying to cheer him up.

Uncle Walt will read the eight pages of Tribune comics to the children at noon today.

ARGENTINA INCLINED TO BE FICKLE ON SHORT WAVE RECEPTION

Large corporations are having their troubles trying to harness short waves. With 5 kilowatts power the Radio corporation in New Jersey, operating on 21 meters, could not make itself heard in London.

"We had been out of communication with Argentina for two days during the day time on account of heavy static," said David Sarnoff, telling of the incident. "The operator at Argentina signaled, 'Send to me on 21 meters; I get you perfectly on high speed.' So while London only 3,000 miles away did not hear us, Argentina, 6,000 miles away, could hear us perfectly.

"Therefore, at once, we decided to give Argentina service on 21 meters, but ever since that memorable occasion we have not been heard at all on that set during daytime in Argentina."

INTERCITY WIRELESS COMING.

With further development of short waves and beam transmission successful competition with telegraph companies is predicted, especially at night over long distances.

THESE FANS ASK SHORT DAY WAVE, LONG AT NIGHT

When it comes to controversies over wave lengths, the broadcast listeners of the United States are conducting an agitation mild in comparison with the campaign now being staged in far-off Australia.

Australian fans want their stations not only to alter their present wave lengths, so as to permit of 50 meters separation, but want them to send on high waves in the sunlight hours and shorter waves at night, in the belief that this will improve reception.

The stations involved in the discussion are 2BL, in Sydney, using 353 meters; 3LO, Melbourne, 371 meters; 4QG, Brisbane, using 385 meters, and 5CL, Adelaide, all of which use good power, reaching considerable distances regularly.

While there has been an increased use of more selective receivers in Australia, particularly those made in America, still the majority of listeners are troubled in tuning out one station and bringing in another.

100 STATIONS TO COMBINE IN FARM PROGRAMS

Vast Plan of Broadcasting Arranged.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—Practically all of the broadcasting facilities of the United States, representing millions of dollars of investment, have been placed at the disposal of the department and the agricultural colleges coöperating, for dispatching to farmers by radio the interesting, concise, and pertinent information at their disposal.

This is the statement of Sam Pickard, chief of the radio service, United States department of agriculture, who recently returned from a three months' 10,000 mile official automobile trip covering the eastern half of the country, during which time he visited the college authorities, directors of commercial radio stations, and farmers.

Anxious to Coöperate.

Without exception both the small and large commercial stations, as well as the college broadcasters, in the east, south, and middle west, all expressed themselves as anxious and grateful for the opportunity to coöperate to the fullest extent in radioizing farm information.

He reported the agricultural college officials as being on the alert to the possibilities of radio as a vehicle for effective extension work, and that they feel the trend in programs should be directed away from the academic lecture toward the dramatization of facts. They recognize that competition on the dials now makes it necessary to present the type of personality and program material which will hold the listener's attention.

Will Syndicate Programs.

The elaborate farm program outlined for preparation by the department will be syndicated to a group of approximately 100 broadcasting stations throughout the United States. In many instances the department's material will be sent to the agricultural colleges for adaptation to the local conditions before being released to the commercial radio stations for broadcasting. In many states where college talent is not available for this purpose other satisfactory arrangements were made by Mr. Pickard.

SHORT WAVES

A receiving set built in a discarded suitcase five years ago is still in service at the Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.

If the British succeed in broadcasting the hum of a mosquito, they will have nothing on what President Coolidge did when he arrived at Paul Smith's, N. Y.

Radio and carrier pigeons are being used in airplane map making of Alaska.

Not so burdened as he was with radio duties, Secretary Hoover has just had the commercial aviation field at Washington, D. C., named after him.

JAPAN IS STILL BUSY IN RADIO DEVELOPMENT

Another report has reached the United States that Japan is still busily engaged in developing and expanding her radio industry. During the last few months a station was built and equipped at Garambi, on the southernmost tip of the island, by the Taiwan government general, which owns and operates it. Messages from and to Hongkong, south China, the Philippine islands, and the South seas area are now handled at this station.

BIBLE READINGS TO REMAIN ON W-G-N PROGRAM

The series of Bible readings, begun by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, station on the Drake hotel, as a surprise substitute for "Sam 'n' Henry" during the colored boys' recent vacation, are to be continued. The extracts from the Holy Writ presented during the two weeks the boys were away proved such a popular feature with listeners and brought so much comment for their drama, beauty and splendid presentation that the station has decided to make room on the crowded program for this extra feature. In the future listeners will hear selection from both Old and New Testaments on Tuesdays, Fridays and Sunday evenings at 10:20 o'clock.

A prelude of sacred music, played by orchestra or organ, precedes the reading. As the music dies away, the sonorous, smooth flowing voice of Announcer Bill Hay is heard chanting the passage of the evening. Music again closes the period.

VETERAN PIANO PLAYER NOW ON WGJ PROGRAMS

Morris E. Roberts, better known on the vaudeville stage for the past 30 years as "Ragtime" Morris, is now an exclusive artist on the 10 o'clock program at WGJ.

Morris has been recognized for years as one of the most popular "improvising" piano players of the country. His technique and execution are that of a master pianist, and his selections are all original compositions, ranging from "classical improvisations" to his own arrangements of old time two-steps.

European Wave Lengths to Undergo Revision

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

It has been learned here officially that Geneva has alloted Great Britain nine exclusive wave lengths under the new scheme, so that one British broadcasting station will be assured against interference.

URGES PACIFIC SHIP RADIO TO WARN OF STORMS

Weather Bureau Sees Advantage in Idea.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—[Special.]—A letter from a British motorship captain, F. A. Germain, of the Reginolite, to the weather bureau contains a suggestion which the bureau characterizes as "very valuable"—namely: that ships in the eastern Pacific ocean broadcast daily exchanges of weather reports in order to give warning of approaching storms.

A weather bureau report on Capt. Germain's suggestion, which was sent to the hydrographic office of the navy and there made public, explains that in the eastern Pacific there is no thorough system of reporting storms such as exists in the West Indies, where radio communication is most complete. In the eastern Pacific, especially off southern California and Mexico, local hurricanes spring up suddenly and are frequently so narrow that they may sweep for miles without coming into contact with land weather stations. Hence the value of weather reports by vessels at sea.

Dangerous Storms on Pacific.

Contrary to the old theory that few storms occur on the Pacific, the weather bureau comments as follows:

"There is too frequently an adherence to the idea held a half century and more ago that dangerous storms in these waters are few—that perhaps not more than two occur in a decade. Observations since the opening of the Panama canal, however, have shown conclusively that many more than that number may occur in a single season. The year of maximum occurrence was that of 1925, with 11 observed cyclones in this region, of which six produced winds of known hurricane violence."

A heavy storm on July 7-9, in which his ship was caught while en route from San Pedro to Balboa, occasioned Capt. Germain's suggestion.

Suggestion Is Valuable.

"The weather bureau made the following comment upon the suggested exchange of weather reports among vessels on the eastern Pacific:

"The daily exchange of weather reports between vessels in these waters, which Capt. Germain suggests might be instituted, is a very valuable suggestion to all concerned. Doubtless some vessels do avail themselves of the opportunities for learning the character of the surrounding weather, though it seems that the custom is not as common as it well might be in these rather dangerous, even usually quiet, seas.

"Here local hurricane information is not, nor can it be, broadcast to the extent that it is in the West Indies, where it is possible to follow tropical storm movements with great accuracy owing to the extensive system of radio communication there developed. Off the lower Pacific coast storms appear suddenly in the waste waters. They are usually of comparatively narrow width and are quite likely to pass for hundreds of miles up the coast without the land stations suspecting, or more than suspecting, their presence. Hence, vessels experiencing cyclonic conditions here should broadcast their information promptly and as fully as circumstances will permit."

INSIDE THE LOUD SPEAKER

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

FRIENDS of the radio audience, do you know what "Is-it-true mail" is?

Well, all movie studios and radio studios receive gobs of "Is-it-true mail," and every letter opens with "Is it true that——?" Here, for example, is a handful of izzitroos:

"Is it true that Ford and Glenn are one man, and not a quartet?"

"Is it true that Roxy is dead, and that he died an Asiatic?"

"Is it true that you can get a station better if you open all your windows?"

"Is it true that Sam 'n' Henry are really going to try to swim the English channel?"

IS IT TRUE?
For Radio Announcer

"Is it true that static is only imaginary?"

"Is it true that Ben Turpin is announcing radio programs in Chicago under an assumed name?"

"Is it true that gentlemen prefer blondes?"

SPEAKING for a few lines as a lay listener, and not as one connected with radio, may we arise in meeting this Sabbath morn, with our derby hat on, and say that of all the radio programs not produced in this city our favorites are the I——a Troubadours and the summertime E———y Hour, on the chain broadcasts.

The best radio music, as some one said the other day, is the music that you can go to sleep to. There is something so rich and smooth and croony about these two weekly programs that you can close your eyes and listen subconsciously and dreamily, and the periodical intrusions of the announcer or the vocalist you regard almost as an insult. While in some good musical hours the announcer may be only an intrusion, in these cases both he and what he has to say are a positive jolt.

Did you hear last Tuesday's E——y Hour? It was an "American Program" by the orchestra, and it might almost be taken as a model:

American Spiritual	Shilkret
Rhapsody in Blue	Gershwin
Voodoo Dance	Robison
Medley of Foster Tunes	Shilkret
Marionettes	Arndt
St. Louis Blues	Handy
In Deep Woods	MacDowell
Old Barnyard Schottische	Adapted
Cake Walk	Adapted
Yellow Dog Blues	Handy
Waltz Esmeralda	De Mesquita
Love Nest	Hirsch
Jackass Blues	Cassel
To Spring	Grieg

SOMEWHERE BETWEEN the days of the "Old Time Favorites," the days of "Swanee River" and "Love's Old Sweet Song," and the present era of popular tunes there lies a vast store of happy songs and melodies to which the now maturing generation danced. And what great radio programs could be constructed out of these if the music could be found!

Up from the years of "Pony Boy" and "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" and "I'm Afraid to Go Home in the Dark," through the seasons when "Hello, Hawaii, How Are You," "Everybody's Doin' It," and "The Oceana Roll" were the rage, and approaching the days before the war when we sang "Poor Butterfly" and danced to "Allah's Holiday."

We have just come upon an interesting report, made in 1913, of the songs that were best-selling in the fall of that year. Don't you remember them: "International Rag," "You've Got Your Mother's Big Blue Eyes," "Peg o' My Heart," "The Curse of an Aching Heart," "Sailing on Chesapeake Bay," "When It's Apple Blossom Time in Normandy," "You Made Me Love You," "Sunshine and Roses," and "Too Much Mustard."

WE HAD A radio "première" one evening last week. It was like the first presentation of a new opera, when we broadcast for the first time the production about "The Rag Doll and the Broom Handle." The composer of the original music was there, the authors were there, the actors and the musicians, and the poet, Carl Sandburg, from whose story the work was adapted. A gala, and we might even say society, crowd was present, too, and at the end every one was set upon with handshakes and exclamations and those sundry things that are showered about at a real "première."

And Sandburg told us the story of "Blind Duke," the old colored boy of Galesburg, who in his early years lost his legs on the railroad. He used to scrape a living thereafter hanging around the railroad yards and mingling with the Swedish population of the neighborhood until he could speak Swedish perfectly. And his favorite stunt was to ship west to the harvest fields every season with a train of Swedish emigrants, telling the green hands in their mother tongue that after a few years over here they would all be as black as he was.

RADIO, SO FAR, has not brought forth a lovable teller of tales, the kind of quaint entertainer familiar to so many books and communities. Every club, every small town barber shop, every tavern has had its one spinner of yarns or fount of homely philosophy, and the radio could very well use such a mellow raconteur.

WE HAVE OFTEN wondered why the big time climate boosters—the California and Florida and Gulf of Mexico boomers—have not set up radio stations for the propagation of their ballyhoo. True, there are radio stations in those vicinities, but their offerings are not different from others. A high powered station on the west coast, supported by the many organizations which advertise that territory, could hold the attention of the whole country, not with speeches or propaganda talks, but by feature broadcasts exemplifying the nature of their country—scenic and travel lectures, sporting events, tournaments of roses, movie making and thus and so.

Coast Station Has Open House Studio for Fans

Los Angeles, Aug. 7.—[Special.]—KNX might easily be termed the open house studio. Just as long as there are seats available visitors are allowed to sit inside. Others line up behind the special chain that is used to give artists easy access to and from the studio waiting their turn to get inside. Those outside, however, hear the numbers through a special speaker. The studio is filled every evening now.

CORNWALL, ENG., ABLE TO GET U. S. CONTINUOUSLY

New York, Aug. 14.—[Special.]—The radio paradise of the world is Bude in Cornwall, England, where American stations are continuously received and where continental broadcasters are heard with the loudest and clearest of volume even in summer, reports Kenneth Arnott, British civil and radio engineer, who is now visiting in New York.

"Through some unexplained cause, signals in Bude are far better than anywhere else that I have been or that others have reported," stated Mr. Arnott. "And yet, in Bodmin, ten miles inland from the coast, there is an actual dead spot. On five tubes it is possible to get nearby Cardiff only weakly."

Mr. Arnott made tests on their trip across the Atlantic and said that 5XX Daventry, England, and WJZ, New York, were clearly heard in midocean. He advocates the use of higher waves for broadcasting to eliminate interference.

Fans in India Are Buying Sets to Hear New Station

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

POONA, India.—[By Mail.]—As one of the side results of the opening of the new wireless station near here and the registering of the Broadcasting company, wireless fans are getting equipped for the new service. The Indian wireless companies have been swamped with orders for crystal sets so that people can accustom themselves to the intricacies of the instruments and get used to adjustments necessary for the changing weather of India.

Notes of Art and Artists

Which brings us to the contemporary American artists' exhibition, and that, just to satisfy a sense of proportion, may wait until another week.

Harry Carnohan, who was awarded the Bryan Lathrop traveling scholarship of $800 in the annual traveling scholarship competition of the school of the Art institute in June of this year, has left Chicago for several months of travel and study in Europe. He will go directly to Paris, where he will spend several weeks, and then in the autumn make his way down into Italy.

Travelers who are penetrating the Arctic ocean to paint and sketch life in the northland have reached the farthest point of their journey, so writes Dudley Crafts Watson, who is taking a group of thirty-three artists and art lovers on a tour of northern Europe. He says: "This country is beyond words in color and light. We sleep a bit each day and paint all night. We are now 365 miles within the arctic circle. It is cold, but no fog and little rain or snow."

Miss Helen Gardner of the Art institute staff, is spending her summer in Italy and France.

A Japanese room is the latest gallery to be fitted up as a special exhibit at the Art institute. It is being arranged in one of the south galleries in Gunsaulus hall by the curator, Miss Helen Gunsaulus.

In the Children's museum in the Art institute there is an exhibit of copies, in full color, of ancient Crete frescoes from the palace of King Minos. The original frescoes date back to 1500 B. C.

The fame of the Art institute art school as a school is growing. This summer the summer school has a larger enrollment of students than it has had in any previous summer session. There are 504 students this year, as compared with 457 last summer.

In the Arts club room at the Art institute the water colors by Winslow Homer provide a refreshing reflection of outdoor life to be enjoyed these sultry weeks. Camping, sailing, the beach and the sea, all of these in turn have been set down with skill and charm by this great American painter's brush. Some of them are of many years ago, the costumes date them, but the freshness of nature is theirs still, and its eternally young charm.

From Aug. 20 to Sept. 22 the Art institute refectory on the ground floor will be closed.

The autumn classes in the department of museum instruction in the Art institute will begin Oct. 1. At that time Miss Helen Parker, head of the department, will resume her work after a year's leave of absence spent in studying in France, England, Italy, Spain, and Africa.

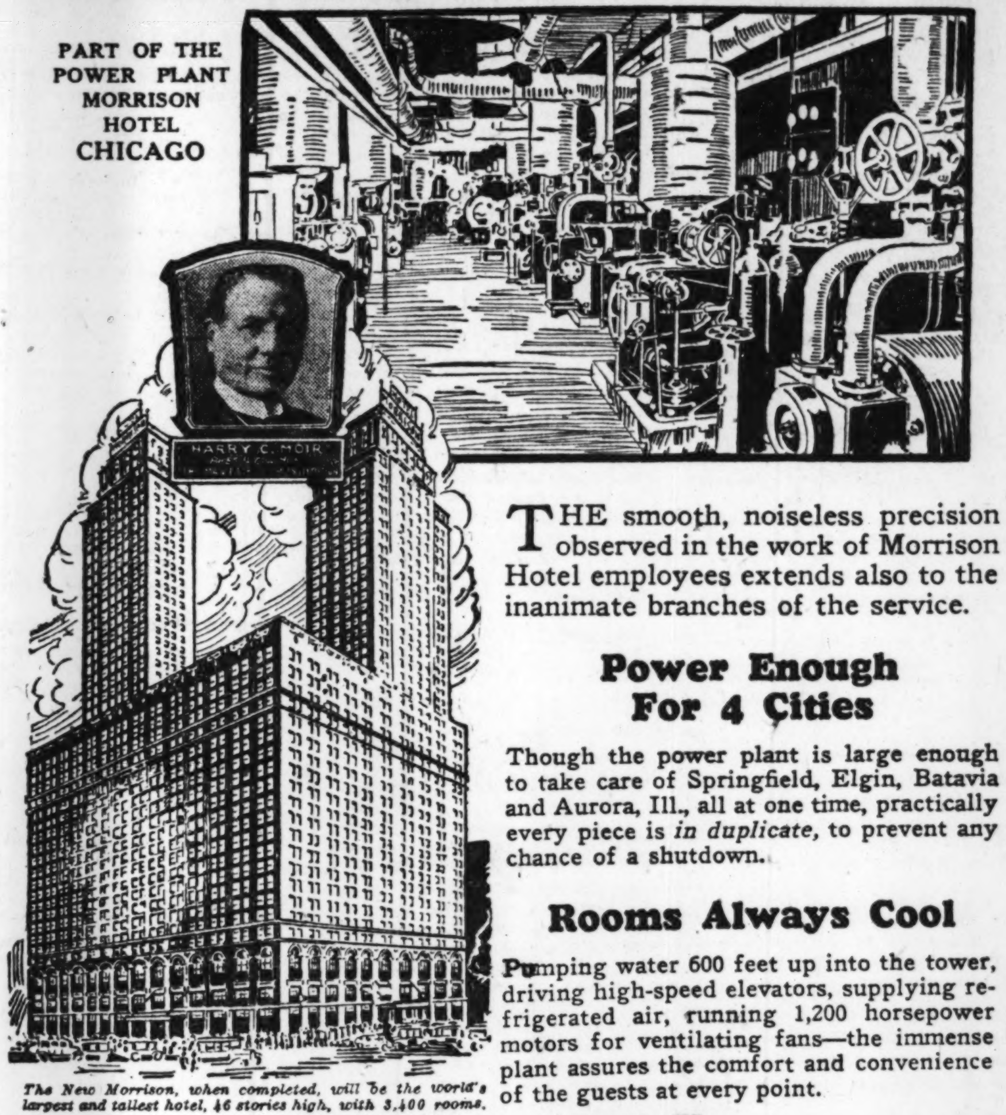
The "Clockwork Efficiency" of Chicago's 46-Story
Morrison Hotel

PART OF THE POWER PLANT MORRISON HOTEL CHICAGO



The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, 46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

THE smooth, noiseless precision observed in the work of Morrison Hotel employees extends also to the inanimate branches of the service.

Power Enough For 4 Cities

Though the power plant is large enough to take care of Springfield, Elgin, Batavia and Aurora, Ill., all at one time, practically every piece is in duplicate, to prevent any chance of a shutdown.

Rooms Always Cool

Pumping water 600 feet up into the tower, driving high-speed elevators, supplying refrigerated air, running 1,200 horsepower motors for ventilating fans—the immense plant assures the comfort and convenience of the guests at every point.

1,944 Rooms, $2.50 Up

Each of the 1,944 rooms is outside, with bath, running ice-water, bed-head reading lamp, and Servidor. Every floor has its own housekeeper; all guests have garage privileges. The location, at Chicago's very center, so enhances subrental-values that they pay all the ground rent, enabling the hotel to charge $2.50 to $5 for rooms that would cost $5 to $8 in any other leading hotel.

The Terrace Garden's table d'hote Sunday dinner is served from 5 to 9 p. m., with dancing and full entertainment program; only $1.50

Moderate rates on a Luxury Ship ~

S.S. George Washington

STAND down at the Battery some day and watch the George Washington coming up the Bay. Three thousand miles of Atlantic behind her and looking as if she had just been launched. Nearly 24,000 gross tons and moving like a yacht.

People who sail on this ship again and again are mostly those who like to travel fast without ever seeming to, who like refined not gaudy surroundings, and ones who are critical of cookery and too experienced to take chances when it comes to long distance travel.

On the George Washington, smoothly running elevators supplement beautiful stairways. Wherever possible, Colonial windows replace portholes. There are promenade decks, smoking rooms, lounges, barber shops and a gymnasium.

RATES are most reasonable. First class from $210; second from $136.25 and Tourist III from $97.50.

The next three sailings of the S. S. George Washington to Plymouth, Cherbourg and Bremen are September 1, September 29, October 27—an ideal time to visit Europe after the tourist rush.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

[Moffett Photo.]

MISS CAMILLE BADGER HENRY.
[Paul Stone-Raymor Photo.]

MISS MURIEL McCORMICK.
[Copyright: De Gueldre Photo.]

MISS MURIEL McCORMICK has forsaken the summer gayeties of Lake Forest for a month's intensive study of the voice, which will be pursued at the summer camp of her paternal aunt, Mrs. Emmons Blaine of Chicago. Miss McCormick and Miss Jane Scriven left last week for the camp, which is not far from Paul Smith's, N. Y., where the President and Mrs. Coolidge are spending the summer.

Before her marriage on July 29, Mrs. Gordon Whitney was Miss Lora Josephine Colvin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Colvin of Evanston. Mr. Whitney is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Whitney, also of Evanston. The wedding took place in the gardens of the Colvin residence, and was followed by a large evening reception.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Camille Badger Henry, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Henry of Chicago, to John Grant MacDonald of Chicago created a great deal of interest this week. The announcement was made by Miss Henry's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Huntington B. Henry of 936 Lake Shore drive, at whose residence the wedding is to take place on Sept. 18.

Mid-August Brings Hours of Leisure

By Mme. X.

WHEN our well to do and energetic fellow citizens of notable social position abandon this part of the land in February and March we sympathize with and envy them, but understand their motive and have no criticism to make. When those of them who have lovely country places depart, as they are doing in droves, at this delectable moment of summer, we feel less reconciled to their going and deprecate it as an evidence of the restlessness of the times. They are not betaking themselves to anything lovelier, more restful, more altogether delectable than the conditions they leave behind. And besides—and here, my friends, lies the real gist of our complaint—their departure makes the work of those engaged in recording the doings of the world that amuses itself so much more difficult.

August is the betwixt and between moment of this part of the year, socially speaking. Nevertheless, for those left at home, it is one of the pleasantest moments. Such entertaining as there is, is on smaller, more intimate lines and one can see more of a few people than is possible earlier in the summer when one sees a little of many. It is like the off season in winter, a cozier, friendlier time. It is possible to relax and even to accomplish some reading.

If any one wants good company, the writer recommends for this more leisurely moment a dip into Will Durant's "The Story of Philosophy." I don't know who Mr. Durant is, nor how he came to have so abbreviated a name. Were I a man writing about Plato, Schopenhauer, Kant, et al., even if I had not been baptized William I'd sign myself so on the back cover of a book so entertaining, so instructive, so altogether readable as this. Will is a name for a baseball player or a pugilist, but not for a student and writer about the world's great thinkers.

When this delectable volume gets too heavy to hold, the summer reader is recommended to take up a delightful piece of literature, lighter in every sense of the word, by a young English dramatic critic, Beverley Nichols. He calls it "Twenty-Five," and says that that is the age when a man reaches his fulfillment. He, by the way, must be twenty-six by now. In it he describes, and frequently "sasses," many of today's notabilities in a gay and charming manner, tilting at such well established celebrities as Kipling, Hugh Walpole, Elinor Glynn, Mrs. Asquith (Dodo), and their contemporaries. He does more than sass Compton MacKenzie; he throws some big, sharp stones at him.

Cynical, but True.

He also talks, in a most complimentary way, about our distinguished fellow citizen, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, though without mentioning her name. He speaks of her as "a very delightful American woman who had been fairy godmother to a great many young authors and artists." He quotes her as saying of Walpole, whom he was attacking:

"You'll find Hugh Walpole's books in every best bedroom in the United States, except possibly in the very best ones, where you will not find works in English but in French, to show that we have traveled. Way out in the middle west there will be a copy of 'The Dark Forest' or 'The Prelude to Adventure' carefully placed on the table near the radiator. It will probably never have been read, but it will be there. That's culture."

Thus spake Zarathustra, alias Mrs. Arthur Ryerson.

Answered young Beverley: "An extraordinary idea. 'How does one get this reputation for culture?' I said: 'My books have just as nice covers as Hugh Walpole's, and there is no reason why they should not also have the benefit of steam heat.'

"'You're too young,' was the only answer I got."

It must be amusing to find yourself in a real book, one that sells for two-fifty—rather like seeing yourself in a moving picture. Anything that gives even a temporary permanency to our very impermanent selves is gratifying, though probably in this particular case Mrs. Ryerson enjoys the reference to her more than Hugh Walpole does young Nichols' brief mention of him in these few not so complimentary words:

"I don't know what it is about Hugh Walpole that I find, no doubt wrongly, a little worrying, unless it is his appearance of complacency. He is so successful, isn't he?"

This "Young man's candid recollections of his elders and betters" are decidedly entertaining.

Notable Wanderers.

This excursion into the realm of books only goes to show you how little there is doing in the social world to detain this observer and chronicler. That charming Fannie Butcher never is driven from her department into mine by lack of stuff about which to write. What will she say to my intrusion into hers? I suppose that she also has an off season with which she has to deal as best she may.

All that I can do is to follow with my eye and typewriter some of the notable wanderers whose presence is so much missed by those they left behind when they started on their wanderings. There are, for instance, the Arthur Meekers, Mr. and Mrs. and charming Miss Mary and young Arthur, who have been making a tour of Holland, one of the best worth while of Europe's countries.

They crossed the Zuider Zee to Friesland, a quaint and little visited island, and landed finally at The Hague, the country's capital. Its name means, as doubtless you know, "The Harbor." It is one of the most picturesque of European national centers. Narrow cobbled streets, high peaked old houses, lovely parks, a charming royal palace, just called, "Huis den Bosch" (House in the Woods), and a fine, though small, art gallery all unite to make as enchanting a capital as one could ask. The Dutch are celebrated for their exquisite cleanliness, as far as their houses and highways are concerned. The porcelain tub and running hot and cold water are not yet installed as a daily fact in the lives of the plain people. But what they can accomplish by scrubbing to impart a glistening polish to their surroundings, is certainly done.

In a little village—I think it was Monnickendam—I once watched a plump Dutchwoman scrubbing her cow, a gentle creature evidently accustomed to the operation. In the same town another woman was vigorously washing the outside of her delightful little cottage. When Washington Irving described how in Broeck, that famous show village, the inhabitants tie the tails of their cows to the ceiling to keep them clean, I wouldn't believe it until I saw it with my own eyes.

En Route to Bar Harbor.

Those two adventurous females, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase and Mrs. James Keeley, were last heard from at Ottawa, the Canadian capital, whence they were motoring to Montreal. Thence they go to Quebec and from there they will turn southward towards Maine, Bar Harbor being their ultimate goal. They plan to return as they went, Mrs. Chase doing the driving. I have forgotten how many thousand miles their speedometer will register by the time they reach Lake Forest again, but it will be a goodly number of leagues. That old Israelitish fast driver, Jehu, would feel like a piker could he return to this mundane sphere and see the ladies speeding o'er the landscape.

August is a favorite month in northern Italy, odd as it seems when you consider that that is a semi-tropical country and supposed to be extremely hot. It is probable that several of our wandering friends may run across each other in Venice about now. The George A. McKinlocks and Mrs. McFadden and her three lovely daughters, also one of Chicago's most popular bachelors, Arthur Heun, are all headed for the queen of the Adriatic, going there by various routes. The city of the doges is a favorite rendezvous for the fashionable world of both England and the continent. The chic thing is to take rooms there and to browse about in those quaint little cafés for meals, or to go to one of the big hotels at the Lido and spend one's days and nights in light attire on the spacious beach, dipping into that placid sea or lying on the sun warmed sands. You'll find there English dukes, French diplomats, Balkan generals, Russian nobles (the latter waiting on table, probably), German new rich, and Italian fascisti. It's a gay, picturesque crowd, more diverse and cosmopolitan than anything we can show in our haunts where pleasure seekers abound.

at Hyannisport, on Cape Cod, this season. The Secor Cunninghams have made it a practice for many years to spend their summers in this quaint old fishing village. To the George S. Paysons, however, belongs the honor of discovering it. A full thirty and more years ago they put in there with their yacht and fell so in love with the quiet, bleak, treeless little place that they bought a site on the top of a wind swept hill overlooking sea and shore line. There they built a simple little cottage much like the salt gray cabins in which the early settlers passed their days.

Today Hyannisport is a verdant spot with tree shaded, well paved streets, bordered with attractive houses set in flowering gardens, and alive with pedestrians and motorists. The Paysons' house has grown with the place and is now a rambling mansion; the garden is a delicious bit of landscaping, a place of burgeoning blossoms, low, vine covered stone walls, shallow terraces and mirroring pools. Their view across the tidal flats toward the west is as it always was, one of the loveliest on that charming coast. At sunset the glowing colors are reflected in the shallow wastes of the creeping tides as the shadows drift out of the distant encircling, wooded low hills. To sit there in silence is to feel the benediction of the passing day and the peace of the coming darkness.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Dick left Lake Forest last Thursday to visit the Cunninghams. This is the first summer in twenty years that the Dicks have spent so long a time in their stately country place on Deerpath avenue. It has up to now been their custom to pass the summer at their camp up in the woods of Wisconsin. But now their children are all grown up and busy with lives of their own and the parents felt the place did not any longer serve its original purpose which was to provide a healthful outing for their four sons and one daughter, so they sold it last autumn to the Wisconsin Dairymen's association.

A Delightful Rendezvous.

It is some fifteen or sixteen years since the Great Lakes Naval Training station was first established. It has gone through several delightful administrations. Admiral Ross was the officer in charge at the start and he it was who directed its construction. He was followed by Capt. Fulham, now Admiral Fulham, and retired. With Mrs. Fulham he made it a rendezvous for Chicago folk. The Fulhams entertained delightfully and made many friends hereabouts. Capt. Moffett followed next, I think. He will always be remembered for his brilliant handling of the station during the pre-war and war days when he increased its capacity so that it turned out thousands of sailor lads for the service of their country in record breaking time. Those were thrilling days and Capt. (now Admiral) Moffett was on the job twenty-four hours a day. After him came Admiral Bassett, an experienced sailor and delightful host, though the fact that his wife was quite an invalid curtailed their hospitable activities somewhat.

There is nothing so full of variety as the lives of the men and their families who take up the sea as their calling, especially if they are part of national service. Our naval officers and their wives have a cosmopolitan air. They have seen more of this globe of ours than even the most energetic tourists, for when they visit any foreign port they have an entrée denied to any ordinary mortal.

The turn of the wheel has brought back to this part of the world a former Kentucky belle who used to spend much time visiting in Chicago. She was then Miss Mary Breckenridge; she is today Mrs. J. B. Hines and her husband, Capt. Hines, has been directing the activities of the Great Lakes Naval Training station since last autumn. Mrs. Hines has rediscovered many old friends here, including Mrs. G. A. Carpenter, Mrs. Arthur Farwell, Mrs. Francis C. Farwell and the two brothers, Henry and George Porter, but everything else she finds changed beyond any recognition. The Chicago she knew in the eighties and nineties of the last century has utterly disappeared and in its place a new and mighty city has sprung up. The Hineses are carrying out the traditions of their predecessors and the station is a delightful rendezvous on a summer afternoon.

Repairs are Needed.

It is a pity that congress, which is so prompt to vote millions for local improvements in remote villages, is so reluctant to recognize the needs of this naval station. From persons outside the station (it would not be etiquette for any one within it to say a word) I hear that it is sadly in need of repairs for which there is no appropriation. If for no other reason, it is "good business" to keep this station going, as it provides a medium for getting young America in the middle west in touch with our national life on the distant seaboard. Probably the most valuable part of the obligatory military training which is required in many European nations is the opportunity it gives men of one part of the country to fraternize with their fellow countrymen and to become acquainted with other parts of their native land. So here's hoping that congress will not let Great Lakes fall to pieces, but will keep it up as one of our worth while schools in citizenship.

The Hineses have three children, a son at Annapolis, a married daughter, Mrs. Kneass of Philadelphia, and a younger one, Miss Mary Hines, who is still in her teens.

Memories of a Prophet.

A most interesting young Russian woman is coming to this country this autumn, Princess Alexandra Krapotkin, only child of that once well known socialist, the late Prince Krapotkin. Well do I remember this venerable figure, a prophet both in looks and outlook. Mrs. Emmons Blaine gave a luncheon for him when he was here some twenty or more years ago. Then he looked like Michael Angelo's famous painting depicting Elijah. A noble head, long flowing white hair and beard, a gentle, though searching eye, and a manner of enormous calm, clothes that seemed to be drapery, though they were really but coat and trousers, and over all an air of benignity that fairly radiated from him. He had at that time only recently come out of Siberia where he had been serving a long term in the mines as punishment for his theories of human rights and justice towards the under dog. His great family estates, for he belonged to one of the old established Russian families, had been sequestered by the government and he had been provided by his adherents with money enough to come and plead the cause of his downtrodden country people in this land of the free and home of the prosperous. He lived long enough to see the revolution and to get in bad odor with the frenzied bolsheviki, who found him too merciful and out of the bloody picture they painted across Russia. He died and here is his daughter coming to tell her story to us.

She herself is a brilliant young person, striking in appearance and with a wide experience of events and knowledge of the conspicuous people who have been making history in and out of Russia. She is, by inheritance, a member of the discarded aristocracy of her native land, and also by inheritance is considered by many revolutionists as a part of their movement, so she has had unique opportunities of seeing things from the inside. Of these activities and of the colorful tapestry which is Russia at all times, she is coming to tell us. It is sure to be an absorbingly interesting tale, vividly told.

A Service of Kindliness.

The "flowers for the flowerless" service began on time last Monday and with real zip. The volunteers who undertake to receive and pass on the flowers, plants and fruits were on hand bright and early last Monday morning at gate 16 of the Northwestern station, and each day thereafter except yesterday and today. Gifts from surrounding gardens flowed in. Twenty-five thousand little circulars were distributed among the passengers of the incoming Northwestern suburban trains so that it is hardly possible for any of us to be ignorant of the opportunity that is ours to sanctify our gardens to a larger use than was theirs before this movement was started as part of a national enterprise of the same kind. If it is to continue and develop here it must have the steadfast coöperation of the thousands who have gardens in the territory lying around the city. From half past seven until half past ten those who give their time and strength to this will be on hand five days in the week. Let them not wait in vain. Think what your gifts will mean to many a dark and sorrowful life, to young and old and ill and lonely!

NEWS OF NEW YORK SOCIETY

Milburn, Polo Head, Selects Crack Team

By Howard White.

NEW YORK—[Special Correspondence.]—Society already is preparing for the round of brilliant entertainments which will be held in connection with one of the greatest outdoor events of the autumn season, the international polo games, to take place at Meadowbrook, Long Island, next month. It is predicted that the attendance of the ultra-exclusive set will break all records, while the matches, including the open championship and the Monty Waterbury cup tournaments, will offer the keenest play seen in years.

Devereaux Milburn, one of the world's greatest polo players and the leader of six international teams, has just selected his four. Members of society were surprised to learn that the ever popular Tommy Hitchcock would not be among those who will swing the mallet under the guidance of Mr. Milburn. This season Devereaux will introduce two of the army's best players. In Tommy's place will be Capt. Charles Gerhardt, at No. 2. Capt Gerhardt played on the army team last summer in England, coming here later to help win the junior championship tournament at Rumson, N. J.

Army's Prize Package.

At the Westchester-Biltmore club recently Capt. Gerhardt proved to be the army's "prize package" when the soldiers won the junior title. If this young officer flashes the same class of play for Meadowbrook that he showed against the Bryn Mawr team he may prove a real star in America's greatest polo classic.

For No. 3 Milburn has selected Capt. Peter P. Rodes, another member of the all army four, who has few superiors at No. 3. He is a terrific hitter and a hard man to ride off. Like Lord Wodehouse and Malcolm Stevenson, Capt. Rodes is a most aggressive player—a firm believer that the best defense is a rattling hard offense.

J. Watson Webb, considered by many as the best left handed player in American polo, will be at No. 1. Webb, who has played in a number of international games is also one of the most adept of mallet men. Playing the ball along the boards and dribbling it to a position where he practically "ties" it up for a hard and timely drive, Watson is without a superior.

As Milburn is playing in true championship form and with four to six weeks ahead for practice, there is no doubt that the Meadowbrook team this season will develop into a wonderfully drilled organization. Both Gerhardt and Rodes know the value of team play, and being mustered in between such heady and polo-wise veterans as Webb in advance, and Milburn in the rear, the soldiers should be able to take good care of the center to ward off any possible flank movements.

Home on the Water.

A palatial summer home on the water may well describe the present residence of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Williams, who returned recently from their honeymoon. They are living and entertaining on their steam yacht, the Warrior, now lying off Glen Cove, and some of the affairs given by them number among the most brilliant offered by the exclusive North Shore colony of Long Island. The yacht is one of the finest in the New York Yacht club and is equal to an ocean liner in luxurious appointments. It carries a large crew who use a houseboat moored nearby as their sleeping quarters.

Mr. Williams is especially active in the Long Island yachting and hunting set and was one of those who entertained the prince of Wales during his visit to this country.

A new speed yacht was added to the New York Yacht club fleet with the arrival of a boat built for Horatio Nelson Slater, whose country home is in Locust Valley. It is called the Rocorchet and replaces the Scaramouche, which Mr. Slater sold last season.

The yacht Ninamoosa, owned by Alfred I. Du Pont, was another of the late arrivals at Glen Cove. Aboard this craft were Mr. Du Pont, his brother, Morris Du Pont, and a Russian prince.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Just Like That.

My next door neighbor was alone so I called on her quite often. One afternoon I mentioned having made doughnuts in the morning.

When I started home she said, "If you come again today bring me some doughnuts for breakfast. I'll only want four." MRS. P. L. S.

Minus Courtesy.

One morning when my mother went down to the basement to use our new electric washing machine, she found it already being run by one of our tenants. Mother, not wishing to make her feel embarrassed, told her it was all right and that she would do her washing as soon as she was done.

When mother came down later, she found the machine opened and filled with dirty, soapy water and the floor the same, waiting for her to clean up.

Cheek? I'll say!!!! R. F.

An Eye for Business.

The cheekiest person I ever met was a former neighbor of ours. He had a large garden covering almost the whole of his back yard. It supplied vegetables for his family. One day as I was in the back yard he called me over to the fence and held a stalk of celery above his head, saying, "Would you like to have this?"

I assured him I would, and came to the fence.

After giving me the celery, and I had thanked him for it, he said, "You can give me the dime any time." W. Q.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Churches Plan Wide Revival Campaign

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

EVANGELISM, nation wide and city wide, promises to be the program for the churches beginning definitely with the early opening of the fall. Word came recently from New York of a program adopted by representatives of the departments of evangelism affiliated with the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, by which the work of all the churches will be coordinated, beginning with Sunday school and church rallies and continuing with house to house visitation, evangelistic sermons, week night meetings and instruction for new members. Dr. Charles E. Burton, secretary of the National Council of Congregational churches, chairman of the committee to present the interdenominational program, issued the statement.

Others associated with him were Dr. Charles L. Goodell, executive secretary of the commission and member of the Methodist Episcopal church; Dr. George C. Mahy, Presbyterian; Dr. Jesse M. Bader, Disciples, and Dr. William Horace Day, Congregationalist, an ex-officio member.

"The churches in coöperation," said Dr. Burton, "should begin early in the fall their program of evangelism, giving special attention to the study of the community, definitely locating the unchurched, and rallying all the Christian forces to this work."

The Episcopal churches will also have a national campaign of evangelism. A Chicago local committee has just been appointed by Bishop Charles P. Anderson as follows: Clergy, Dr. Duncan H. Browne, the Rev. Herbert W. Prince; Dr. Frederic S. Fleming; laymen, Courtenay Barber, Leslie H. Allen, George K. Gibson.

On next Sunday morning the Catholic Order of Forester bridge at St. Mary of the Lake seminary, Mundelein, Ill., will be dedicated. An outdoor mass will be celebrated in the Grotto at 11 o'clock and the dedication will immediately follow. Members of the order, their families, and friends will bring their lunches and spend the afternoon in a grove specially provided for them. Provision will also be made for those not bringing lunch.

The fifth annual convention of the Jesuit Educational association, central states division, will begin tomorrow at Loyola university and will continue until Aug. 23. At the meetings the Jesuit educators from the 12 colleges and universities of their order in the middle west will discuss the problems of Catholic higher education in the United States.

The silver jubilee of Mary Olivia of the Order of Sisters of Mercy will be held today at the chapel of St. Xavier's convent, 4928 Cottage Grove avenue. Solemn high mass will be celebrated followed by a reception. Sister Mary Olivia's brother is the Rev. J. H. Crowe, pastor of St. Ita's church, Magnolia and Catalpa avenues. She also has three sisters who are members of the Mercy order. Her special gifts and accomplishments have been in music and for two years she has been on the faculty of the Mercy High school.

Today at 11:15 o'clock the Rev. Gregory M. Cloos, recently ordained in Rome and appointed to Queen of Angels church, Sunnyside and Wilson avenues, will celebrate solemn mass at Our Lady of Lourdes church, Ashland boulevard and Leland avenue. Dr. J. M. Scanlan will preach.

Episcopal young people will meet in a conference at Taylor hall, Racine, Wis., Sept. 2-6. It will mark the beginning of fall work in the churches. Later the young people will hold a mass meeting in Chicago and will present Bishop C. P. Anderson with the money they have raised towards the cathedral fund.

The women's building at College camp, Lake Geneva, Wis., will be dedicated today at 4 o'clock, standard time, under the auspices of the national Y. W. C. A., and will then be turned over to the Y. M. C. A. college to be used for the women attending the camp at the summer conferences. A fuller notice appeared last Sunday and in the daily TRIBUNE Friday.

The interdenominational Bible conference at Dixon, Ill., closes today. Dr. J. M. Dean, Pasadena, formerly pastor Second Baptist church, Chicago; Dr. W. R. Lane, London; A. K. Harper, Iowa; Dr. J. M. His congregation is now taking a ballot regarding plans for remodeling or building the church plant. Chaplain Myers was educated at Syracuse university, New York, and Western Theological seminary, Chicago.

as merciless as the pests it kills

OUT of a roomful of flies and mosquitoes and roaches BLACK FLAG won't leave a single survivor. It's the deadliest insect-killer ever discovered. It kills them all!

They haven't a chance—they breathe BLACK FLAG and die. The secret, vegetable ingredient strangles them. It is the surest, swiftest death ever discovered for insect pests. It is the reason why BLACK FLAG succeeds when all other methods fail. Deadly to bugs—but absolutely harmless to humans and animals.

No bug is immune. No kind of bug is immune. BLACK FLAG rids a house of fleas, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, moths—completely wipes them out! Try it. BLACK FLAG comes in liquid and powder. Use the form you prefer. They're equally deadly! At drug, grocery, hardware and department stores. Powder is 15c up. Powder Gun, 10c. As for the liquid, look at the low prices given below. Just compare them and see how much you save.

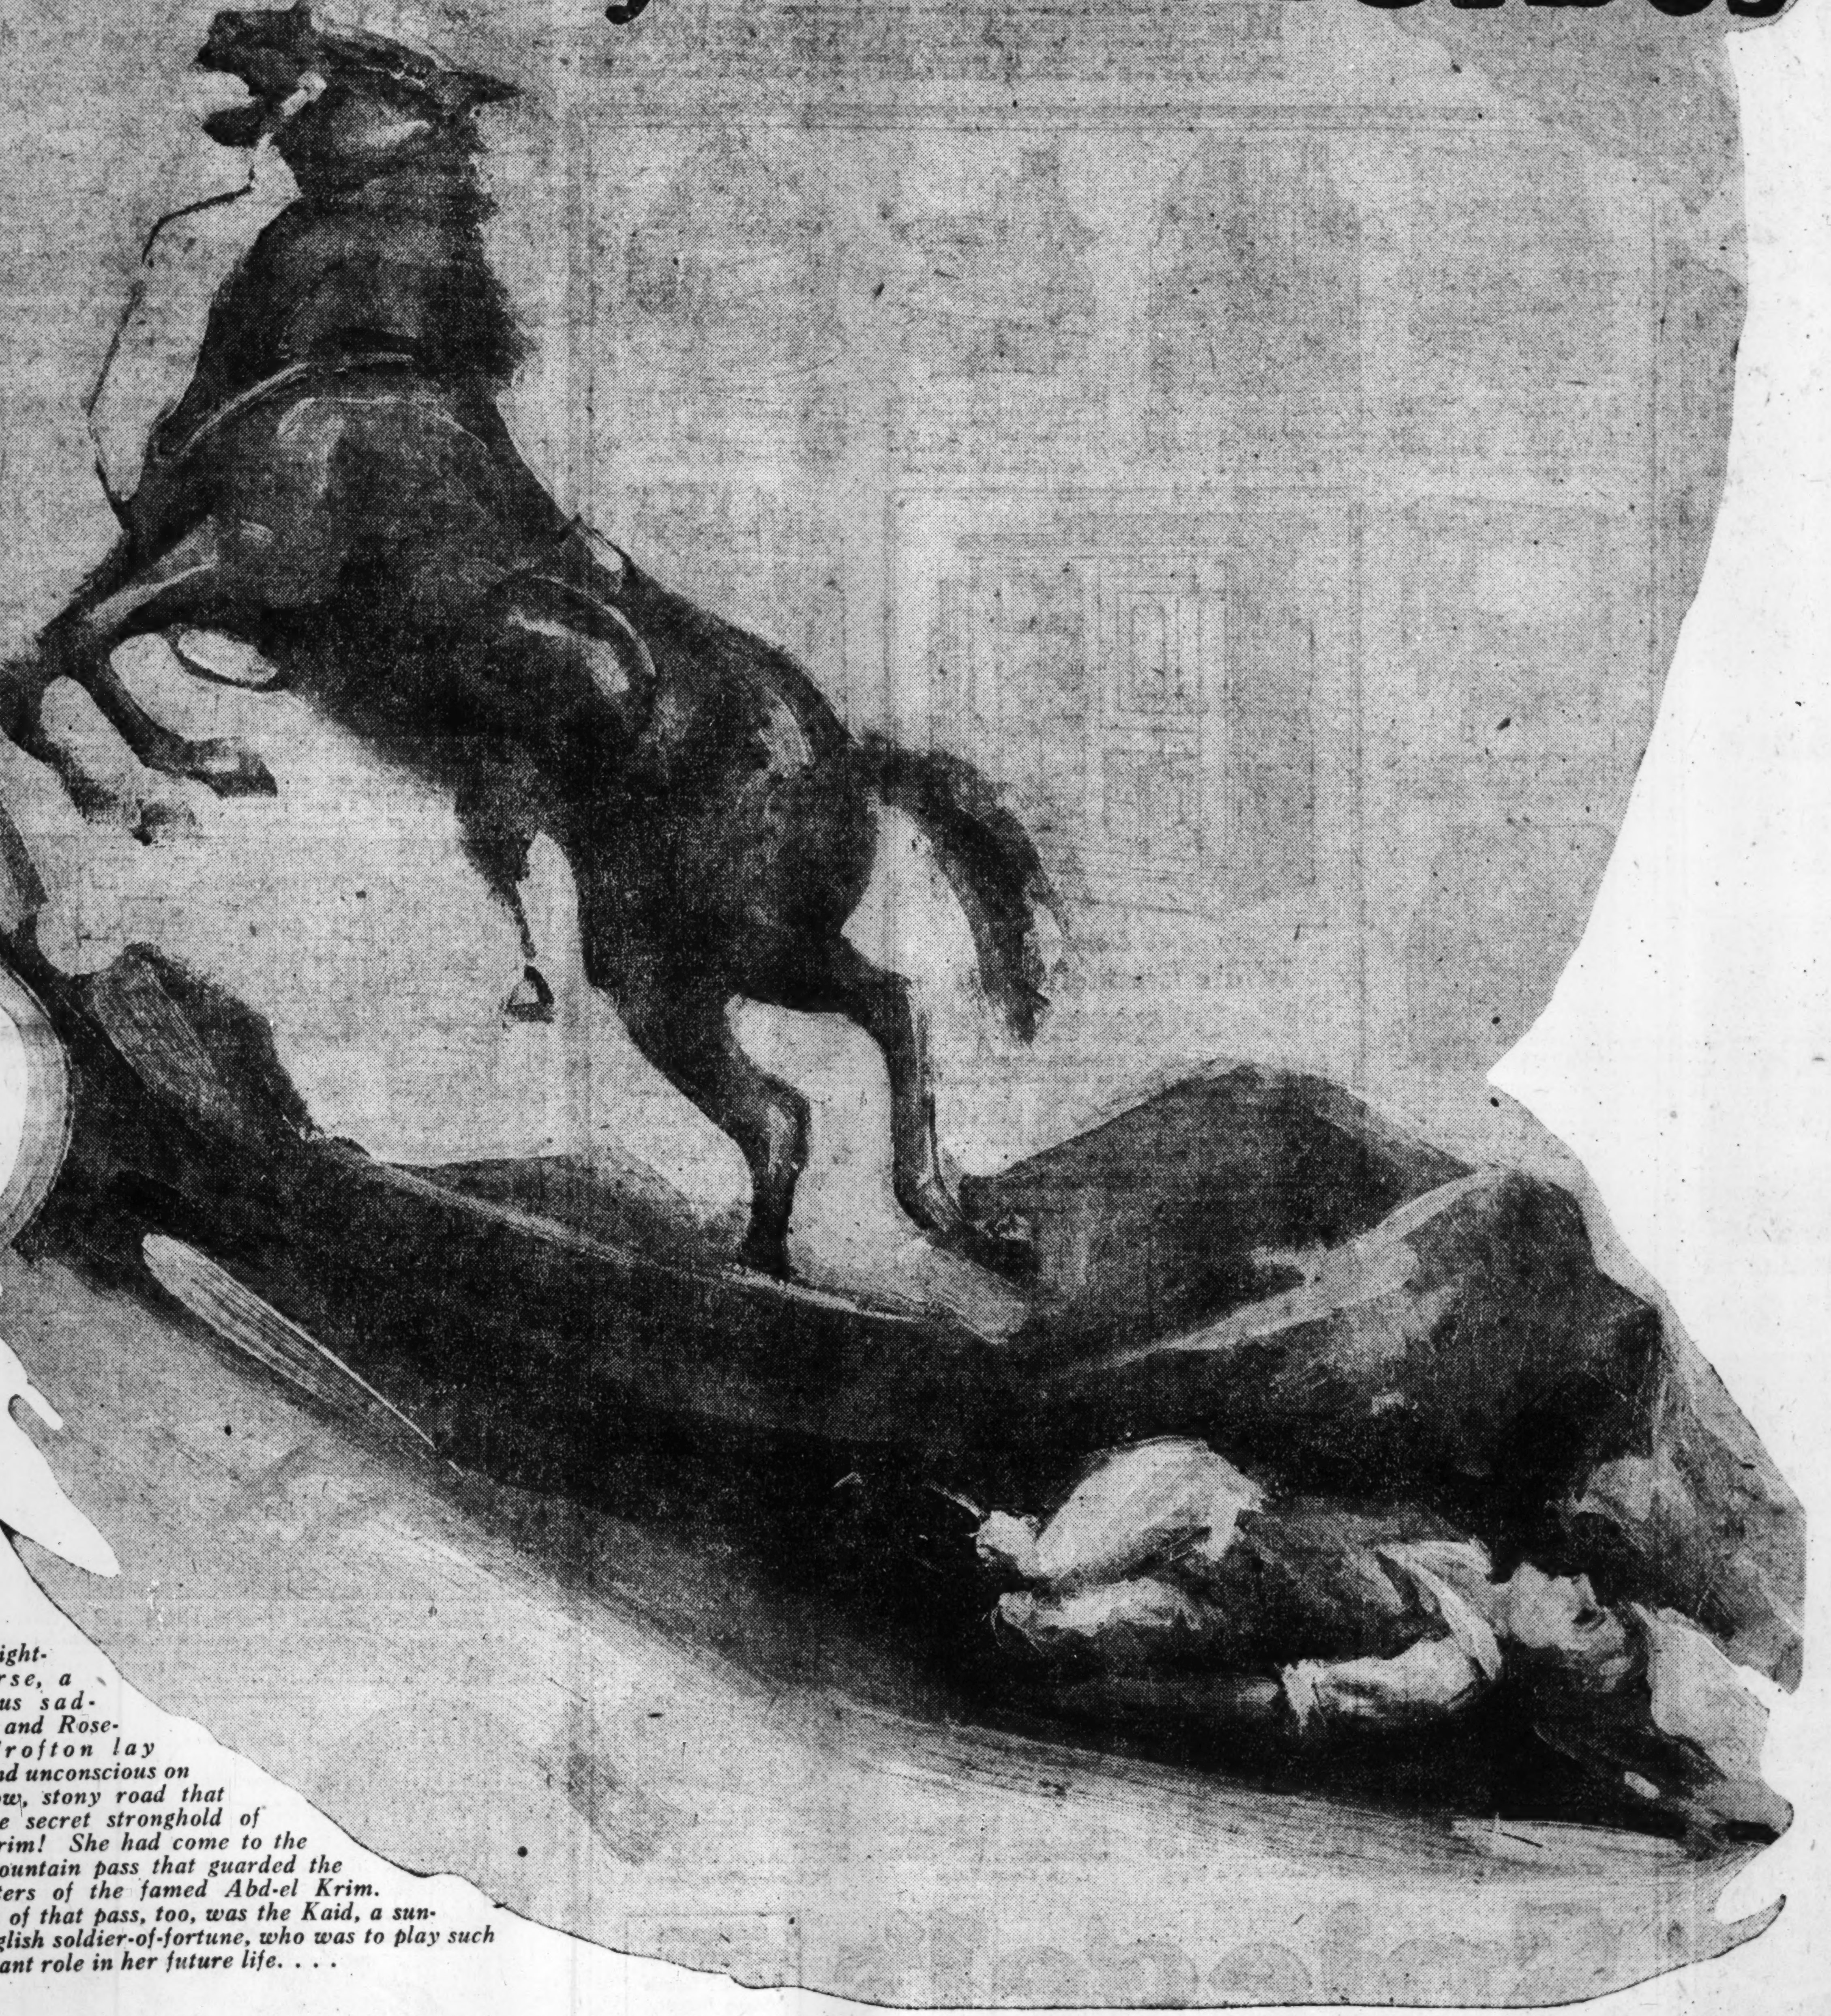
King's Mate

by Rosita Forbes



. . . a frightened horse, a treacherous saddle-girth, and Rosemary Crofton lay bruised and unconscious on the narrow, stony road that led to the secret stronghold of Abd-el Krim! She had come to the hidden mountain pass that guarded the headquarters of the famed Abd-el Krim. . . . Back of that pass, too, was the Kaid, a sun-baked English soldier-of-fortune, who was to play such an important role in her future life. . . .

WHAT brought her to this unknown spot in the Algerian Mountains . . . by what trick of fate did this delicately reared English girl become aware of the secret plans of the Riffs? . . . "King's Mate," a new Tribune Sunday serial by Rosita Forbes, holds the answer. It's a glamorous story of romance and war in the heart of Algeria. It's filled with the color of the desert and told by a woman who has traveled all over the country of which she writes. Don't miss "King's Mate," the most fascinating serial story of the year!

"I'M not sure that I want to win," said the girl.

"We always win in the end. It's inevitable," returned the man, and from the look in his eyes it was obvious he referred to many kinds of battles.

"It is a poor sort of war," went on his companion, unheeding, "when you've had enough, you retire into winter quarters, with all the comforts of civilization, while your enemies starve in the mountains."

Capt. de Vries settled himself more comfortably in a hollow of the old stone wall which surrounded the government's palace at Fez. "In fact, Abd-el Krim has your entire sympathy," he remarked, as he studied his companion's profile. It was very effective, he decided, against the blue of a Moroccan sky. Sunshine warmed the pale hair to honey color and dusted freckles, fine as pollen, over a skin which had the texture and flush of petals. The face was attractive, yes, but too decided, reflected the Frenchman. The regularity of features and determined sweep of the jaw left nothing to the imagination. He was silent as he thought of another woman, the last! She had been very slender, pale, a little sad, and she'd had the most beautiful hands in the world. Unfortunately, she'd also a husband with considerable influence in the senate! That was why Gaston de Vries, boulevardier at heart, Parisian to the last cell of a sophisticated brain, was an exile in Fez. "Me, I hate the colonies!" he told himself for the thousandth time. It was the habitual end of all his reflections.

"If you look at the mountains any more, mademoiselle, I shall begin to suspect you of an interest in the kaid."

The girl turned, her eyes speculative. They were amazing eyes, golden green, like brambles in the autumn, and their lids were quaintly three-cornered, fringed with lashes so dark they looked painted.

"The kaid is your local mystery. What would you do without him? It would be as if we in England were deprived of our weather—we should have nothing left to talk about!"

De Vries propped his exceedingly good-looking head on his hand, an elbow among the stones. "He leads us by the nose, that man, providing he exists at all! Sometimes I imagine the kaid is a composite character evolved from all the—what you say—scallywags who surround Abd-el Krim. There are a score of Europeans up there in the mountains—one cannot suppose it is the Riffs who do such good work with their guns."

Rosemary Crofton looked back at the mountains. They held her, appealing to her imagination as the outposts of another world, where men fought for intangible things against overwhelming odds. "Abd-el Krim alone," she said, "could not have held out so long. There must be some one behind him."

"You see, our mystery appeals to you. Have it as you like, then! There is a modern Napoleon among those crags, and it is to his genius we owe this infinitely tedious campaign."

"I should have thought you would have known all about him. By this time the Riff must be full of spies." Rosemary's voice was, as usual, direct.

In response to it, the Frenchman lost his note of mockery. He answered her as if she were a man, but grudgingly, conscious that it was a waste—of what he did not define.

"The mountaineers are superstitious. They have always believed that, in their greatest danger, a stranger would be their salvation. It is a legend buried as deep in history as their religion, or their incredible independence—you know the Riffs have never been conquered."

ROSITA FORBES

The author of The Tribune's new Sunday serial, "King's Mate," is one of the most famous Englishwomen of her day. An intrepid explorer, she has penetrated into parts of the Near East where few white men have ever dared to go. A few years ago she startled the world by penetrating, disguised as a Bedouin woman, as far as Kufara, in Libya, unvisited by Europeans since 1879. She journeyed through China during the perilous time of the war between the North and the South and went through Syria in the spring of 1920. INSTRUCTION.

A FREE COURSE IN CHARACTER READING.

The heritage of everybody is happiness—yet few people are entirely happy. Most unhappiness in home life, in work or in business is due to failure to understand the people around us. Most of us do not know how to analyze the people we meet. Happiness and success comes to the few who are able to know at a glance just how the people we meet are handled. This is a character reading.

The reason more people do not take up character reading is because they do not realize how easily they can master this art thoroughly. During the past several years I have made thousands of people happy and successful through my teaching of character analysis.

I believe that character reading should be a part of our regular Chicago High school course so that our future citizens will be equipped to find happiness and success in life and business and, in order to arouse public interest in this subject, I am organizing a class of 25 ladies and am giving my regular 4 lesson course, absolutely without charge of any kind, to 25 interested ladies who will pledge themselves to attend the class each week for four weeks. That's all, no fees and nothing to buy. My first free class will be held after Sept. 15. Make your application for this free course by mail only.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR BIG THINGS
THIS FALL.

Do you ever wonder what it is all about?

Do you envy your friend or neighbor who is really getting ahead?

Does your wife have more worries and fewer pleasures than some wives you know?

Will your children have the opportunities that you and your wife planned for them?

Do you owe money? Do you own your own home? Have you a car?

Are you accomplishing something worth while?

This is the time of year to sort of take stock—get your bearings—plan your future and get out of the rut.

But, planning alone will not help you—you must act—you must carry out your plan. Let me help you.

I am 34 years old—full of energy and willing to use it. Ten years ago I was a small town worker in a grocery store. I was young and thought of little besides pleasure.

I got married—that means I had to have more money. My wife expected big things of me. I got a job as traveling salesman and made good, but I was away from home for weeks at a time. My wife kicked, but what could I do? I couldn't stand an inside job again with its small pay.

My wife said: "Let's move to Chicago and get into a city salesman's job—good money and home every day." We came. Quite a job from selling groceries behind a counter. I worked hard and made good.

Promotions followed.

Today I am vice president and sales director of this firm, one of the largest in its field in Chicago. I own my own home. I carry $75,000 life insurance and have just bought a Cadillac sedan. I own several pieces of real estate. I own stocks and bonds and I am a club member. All this because I started something.

My boyhood chum is still behind the grocery counter.

A year ago I started several new salesmen. These men had no previous sales experience.

During the last 12 months several of these men earned $300 per week. Many others averaged $150 per week and upward.

I want several new men—experience means nothing if you are a willing worker and will co-operate with me. I will make the next four months the biggest four months of your life. Call any time tomorrow.

SALESMEN.

This is addressed to salesmen and saleswomen and to those who want to be salesmen or saleswomen, who are thinking about how they can make more money.

The selling of Real Estate under the CALDWELL PLAN is the soundest, surest, most profitable and permanent line of sales work that a salesman or saleswoman can engage in—and we can demonstrate and prove that—by the experience of men and women right here in Chicago.

Scores of men and women who have never had real estate experience [and many who have never had any selling experience at all] have been taught by our executives the most profitable living they have ever had.

We cannot make millionaires of office boys—but we have proven that we can show salesmen and saleswomen how to make more money than they ever made before—and we have shown people with no sales experience at all how to sell and make money.

Many now have more cash in bank than they ever had—have automobiles and the other comforts of life that go with success.

Any big earning opportunity requires real work and hard work in proportion to the earnings—that's all you have to furnish.

If you are willing to be taught a high grade, sound business, where you will meet other men and women who once started in just like you. If you want to make more money than you are now making if you are open to being shown—

If you are really ambitious—if you believe in yourself—and if you will work it is a mathematical certainty that we can show you how to make more money than you are making, and we can prove it.

We are planning now for our fall and winter sales work and can place a few of the right kind of men and women.

You furnish the willingness to work and learn—we furnish everything else.

Our reference is any bank.

Come in and talk it over with men and women who once started just like you.

Vice President and General Manager.

$35.00 WEEKLY
DRAWING ACCOUNT FOR LADIES WHO READ THIS LETTER.

Dear Miss Farrell:

Sixteen months ago I was working as a cashier in a restaurant on La Salle-st. I read your advertisement for ladies to do special work. I came in for a confidential interview, not because I expected to change my position, but because I knew you were a character analyst and I wanted you to tell me about myself.

You impressed me greatly and convinced me that I could handle your special work, and I quit the fairly good and permanent position I had and took up the special work you offered me.

I was a slow starter, but you helped me, and under your efficient suggestions I have made good. I am sure you will be pleased to know that my actual earnings have averaged better than $510 per month for each and every month I have been with your concern. I want to thank you most sincerely for the great interest you took in making me successful. Myrtle Davis.

Come to Miss Farrell's own private office and learn just how you can fit into our organization with a $35.00 weekly drawing account. Call any time Monday.

Live in Streeterville

The Hughes Brewsters Lived the Fashionable Life of Social Leaders

The Hughes Brewsters, in the magnificent nineties, lived north of the river, away from the constant hubbub of business. Leaders in the "Four Hundred," they entertained the "beau monde" at dignified dinners, gay garden parties, and stately balls.

Streeterville today is the home of those discriminating people who reign in social activities; its immediate environment makes this inevitable.

180 East Delaware

Adds convenience of living to this convenience of location.

BUILDING COMPLETED.

Its exclusive character, intrinsic beauty of design and execution, and convenience are the outstanding attributes of this new group of luxuriously conceived apartment homes. The building incorporates the ultimate in tested and approved appointments of unquestioned good taste. On the ground floor is an exquisitely furnished lounge, an Old English tea room with excellent cuisine, and a commissary.

They are unfurnished—three, four, and five rooms, convertible, if desired, into six and eight. The apartments are arranged to give infinite comfort and efficiency. The walls are canvased and paneled. Marble mantels and period design lighting fixtures grace the living rooms. Crystal lighting fixtures, maids' call in the dining rooms. Chambers have full length mirrors and large closets. In the bathrooms—colored tile wainscoting, showers and shampoo sprays, Venetian mirrored medicine cabinet, linen closets. The kitchens are equipped with mechanical refrigeration, all white cooking ranges, and enameled steel cabinets.

Maid service is optional. High speed elevators of micro precision, operated by efficient attendants, whisk you in a few seconds to your floor. A vacuum heating system regulates precisely the temperature and humidity throughout your apartment. Rental includes mechanical refrigeration, electric light, gas, laundries, and driers.

Prospective tenants, of course, are being chosen with discrimination.

3 TO 5 ROOMS

100% CO-OPERATIVE

PRICED FROM $4,275

A 17-story building of unusual design and decoration and enjoying the ideal location of the city, situated one block east of Michigan-blvd., one block south of the Drake Hotel and the same distance from the lake. it is in the heart of the newest developments which are making the district the site of the city's more exclusive apartments. This section of Chicago has until now been available for home ownership only to those who could afford a large initial outlay of money and continued high cost of maintenance. "201 East Deleware Place," alone offers the advantages of this locality on an almost unbelievable basis of economical investment and low maintenance charges. $1,500 payments will secure for you an apartment with monthly charges of less than half of the normal rental.

YOUR INSPECTION INVITED

"201 East Delaware Place" is most complete in its appointments. Harmonizing with the general character and design of the building, each living room of beamed ceiling is artistically decorated; textured walls, wrought iron fixtures show an adaptation of early Spanish and Italian styles to the convenience of modern homes. Here each chamber has its own bath of vari-colored tile with shower and the finest of fixtures. Mechanical refrigeration and ventilation are but a few of the items of this perfectly equipped building. Maid and valet service are available in the building for use at your convenience.

TODAY

is not too early to visit the building and make a reservation of the apartment of your choice.

A representative at the building will be pleased to escort you and explain the details of our plan of purchase. Phone at the building Superior 9183.

WHY HESITATE?
Chicago tenants have purchased nearly $100,000,000 worth of co-operative apts., so this plan of home ownership must be practically safe and economical.
We have modern apts. of 4 large rooms, with extra in-a-dor bed at 2820 Cambridge-av., East of Broadway, at Diversey, which require an investment of only $5,600, with the entire cost of upkeep, including coal, taxes, insurance, janitor service, repairs, etc. Only $36.21 per mo. Coal alone would cost that much for a house. It would take most of your $5,600 to pay for a vacant lot in the suburbs.
For $5,600 you can own a home in the Lincoln Park district, with service, comforts, conveniences and low upkeep. For 3 times that amount you can buy a house in the suburbs with responsibilities, inconveniences and burden yourself with a high upkeep.
Terms on purchase of apts, if desired. Agent at building.

NORTH.

1120 Lake Shore Dr.

CORNER OF ELM STREET.

THE APARTMENTS IN THIS BUILDING ARE SPACIOUS, EXCEPTIONALLY WELL LIGHTED AND VENTILATED AND HAVE EVERY MODERN CONVENIENCE FOR ENJOYABLE LIVING.

The total monthly operating cost of a five room apartment under our 100% co-operative plan is as low as $117.84; and in the 7 room apartment as low as $169.40. There is only one Lake Shore-dr., and it unquestionably is the finest location for residential purposes in Chicago. Its convenience and beauty have made it Chicago's fashion center and one of Chicago's most attractive real estate investments.

THINK THIS OVER.

1. THE BUILDING IS ON A CORNER. There is no other lot on Lake Shore-dr. available unless one wrecks an expensive mansion.

2. THE LAND VALUE of the lot at 1120 Lake Shore-dr. HAS INCREASED 30% since we first offered these apartments to the public, but we are still offering them at the original price.

3. OVER 80% OF THE APARTMENTS ARE SOLD. The building is a thoroughly successful 100% co-operative project right now.

4. ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE. The names of the group who will be your neighbors are available to you.

5. THE BUILDING IS CONSERVATIVELY FINANCED. It has only one loan owned by the New York Life Insurance company.

6. A FEW APARTMENTS ARE STILL AVAILABLE.

The equities range from $12,800 up. You may purchase an apartment in this building with as little as $4,500, paying the remainder out of income rather than capital. This is the time to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity.

PLANS, SPECIFICATIONS, AND SCHEDULED PRICES WILL BE SUPPLIED UPON REQUEST.

Why not come with your family to the building and see these delightful apartments! There is no urge to buy—just courteous attention when you require it.

WHY PAY RENT?
FOR LOVERS
of reasonably priced beautiful co-operative apartment homes we have developed a building of four and five rooms, such as you would expect to find only along the Lake Shore-dr. at $5,000 to $6,000 more than our prices.

There are four and five rooms having large canvassed living rooms and big paneled dining rooms with Spanish bracket lights. One and two bedrooms, bright kitchens with built-in cupboards, large Universal gas ranges and genuine porcelain enameled refrigerators.

A glistening white tile bathroom with showers, pedestal lavatory, built-in bathtubs. Excellent closet space; also cedar lined chest closets and other ultra-modern features.

The construction throughout the building, the halls, lobbies, etc., is the very best. Storage space and modern laundry facilities in the basement. The very latest Kewanee heating plant.

Can you imagine all this, in the best section of beautiful Rogers Park, two blocks from the lake, with cash payments as low as $1,000 and monthly assessments as low as $47.50?

We have representatives there all day to answer your questions, but they will not urge you to buy. The apartments are at 1522-28 Fargo-av., one block from the Jarvis-av. L station and the Sheridan-rd. busses.

We sell to discriminating people only and invite your thorough investigation.

KITCHENETTE APTS.
SUPERB LOCATION

The Avadon is set in the heart of Chicago's yacht harbor district in that narrow strip bordering Belmont harbor, now recognized as one of the three most desirable residential locations in Chicago.

Almost at your feet lies Belmont harbor and Lake Michigan, with its myriad yacht and pleasure craft at anchor.

There is probably no other city in the world where so magnificent a residential colony lies so close to a large body of water—surely this is a residential location second to none.

Look the world over and you will find it difficult to match this remarkable residential location in any of the world's largest cities.

In close proximity to Lincoln park and Lake Michigan—golf, tennis, swimming, boating, yachting, and riding are but a few of the recreations available to the favored residents of THE AVADON.

Location, transportation, and atmosphere combined to make the locale of the 434 Melrose Apts. an ideal residence for Chicagoans of the better class.

THE AVADON Apts., combining unusual accommodations and popular rentals, hold forth an appeal that is not to be resisted by the discriminating.

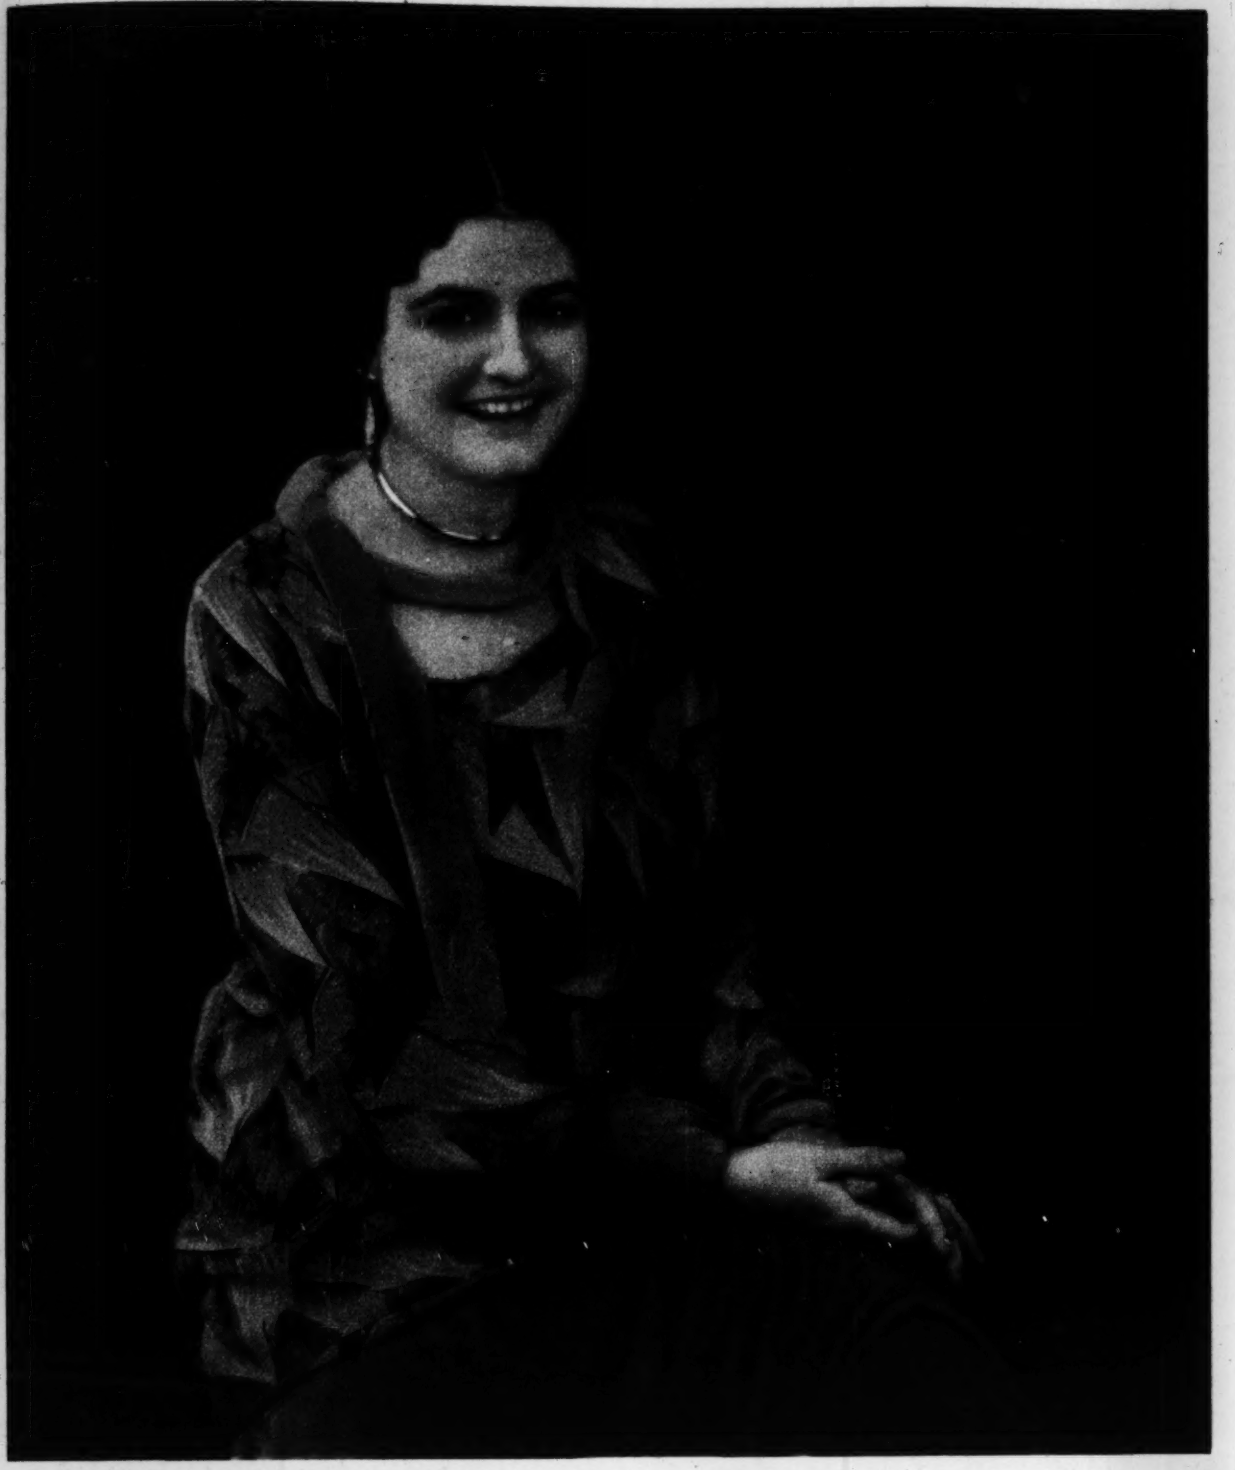
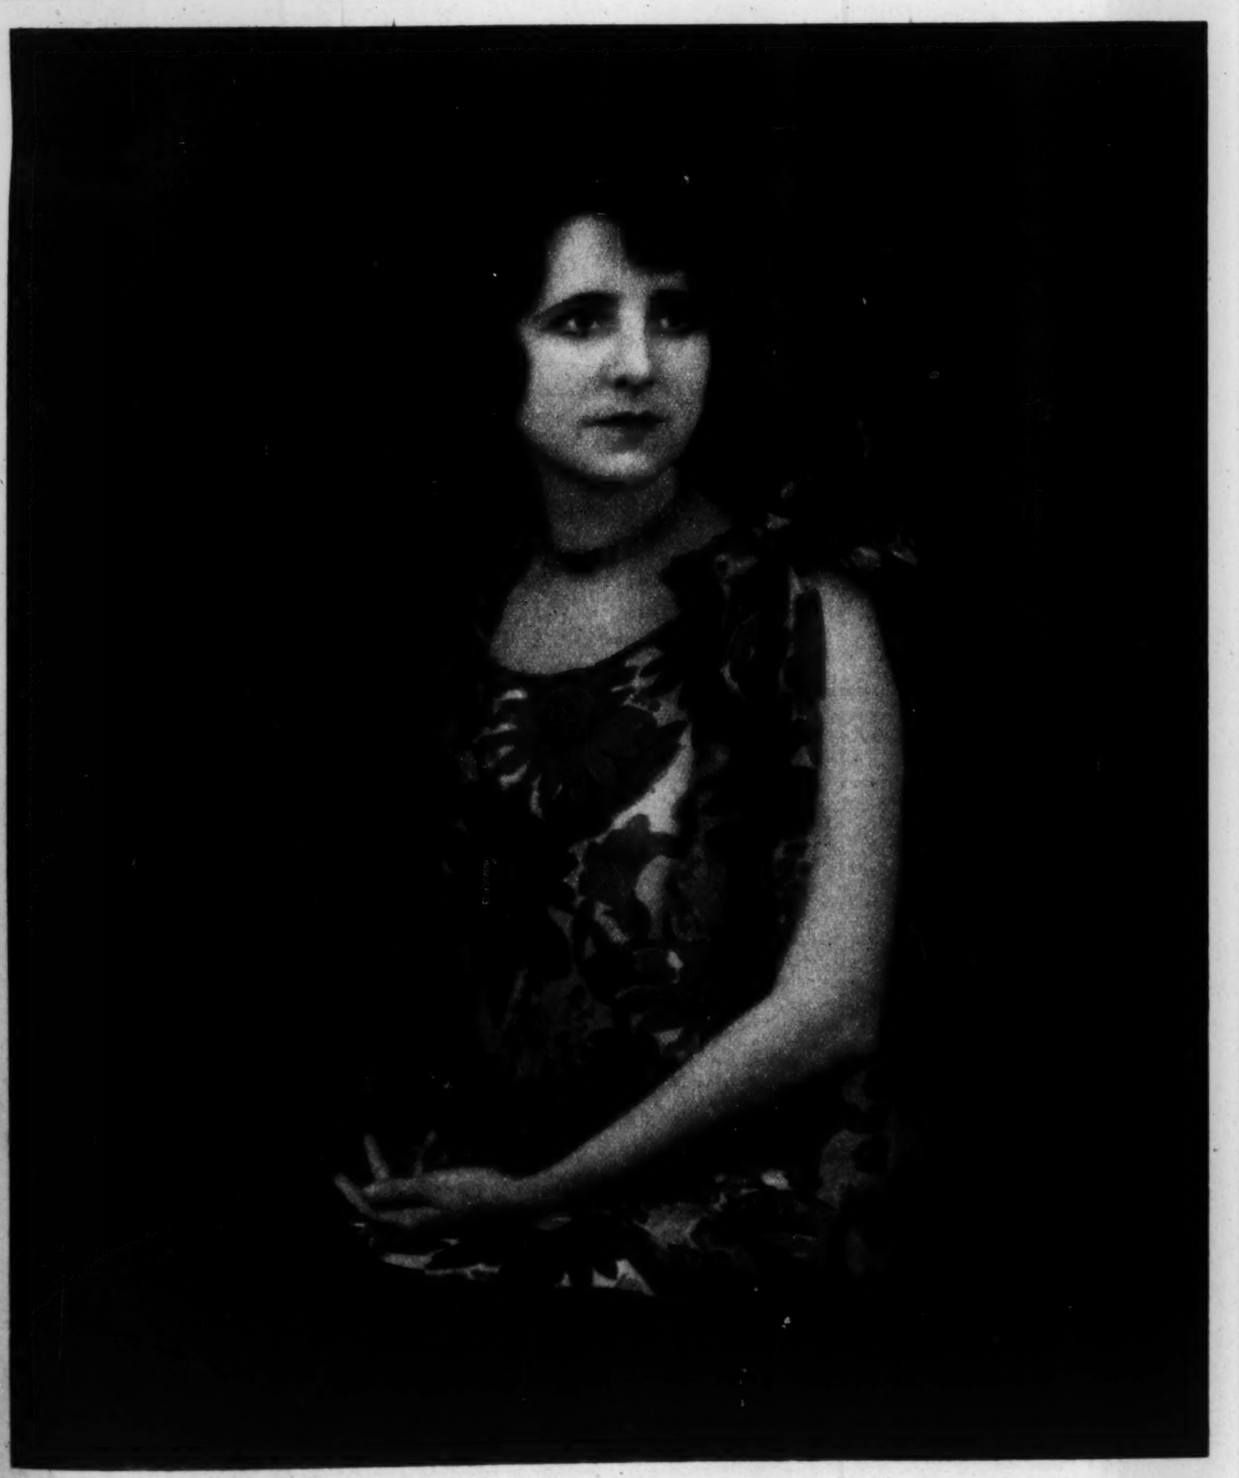
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

August 15, 1926



MISS KATE PIER-ROEMER recently used her hyphen and her talent in the Chicago run of "If I Was Rich."

MISS MARIA MONTERO is a dancer who has been taking her meed of popular approval in the cabarets and the night shows.



MISS BEVERLY BAYNE, an idol of the movie-goers in the early days of filmed drama, has been performing in the varieties.

MISS ANNA FITZIU was a Chicago chorus girl in the first days of "The Wizard of Oz," and now is a diva of the opera-houses.

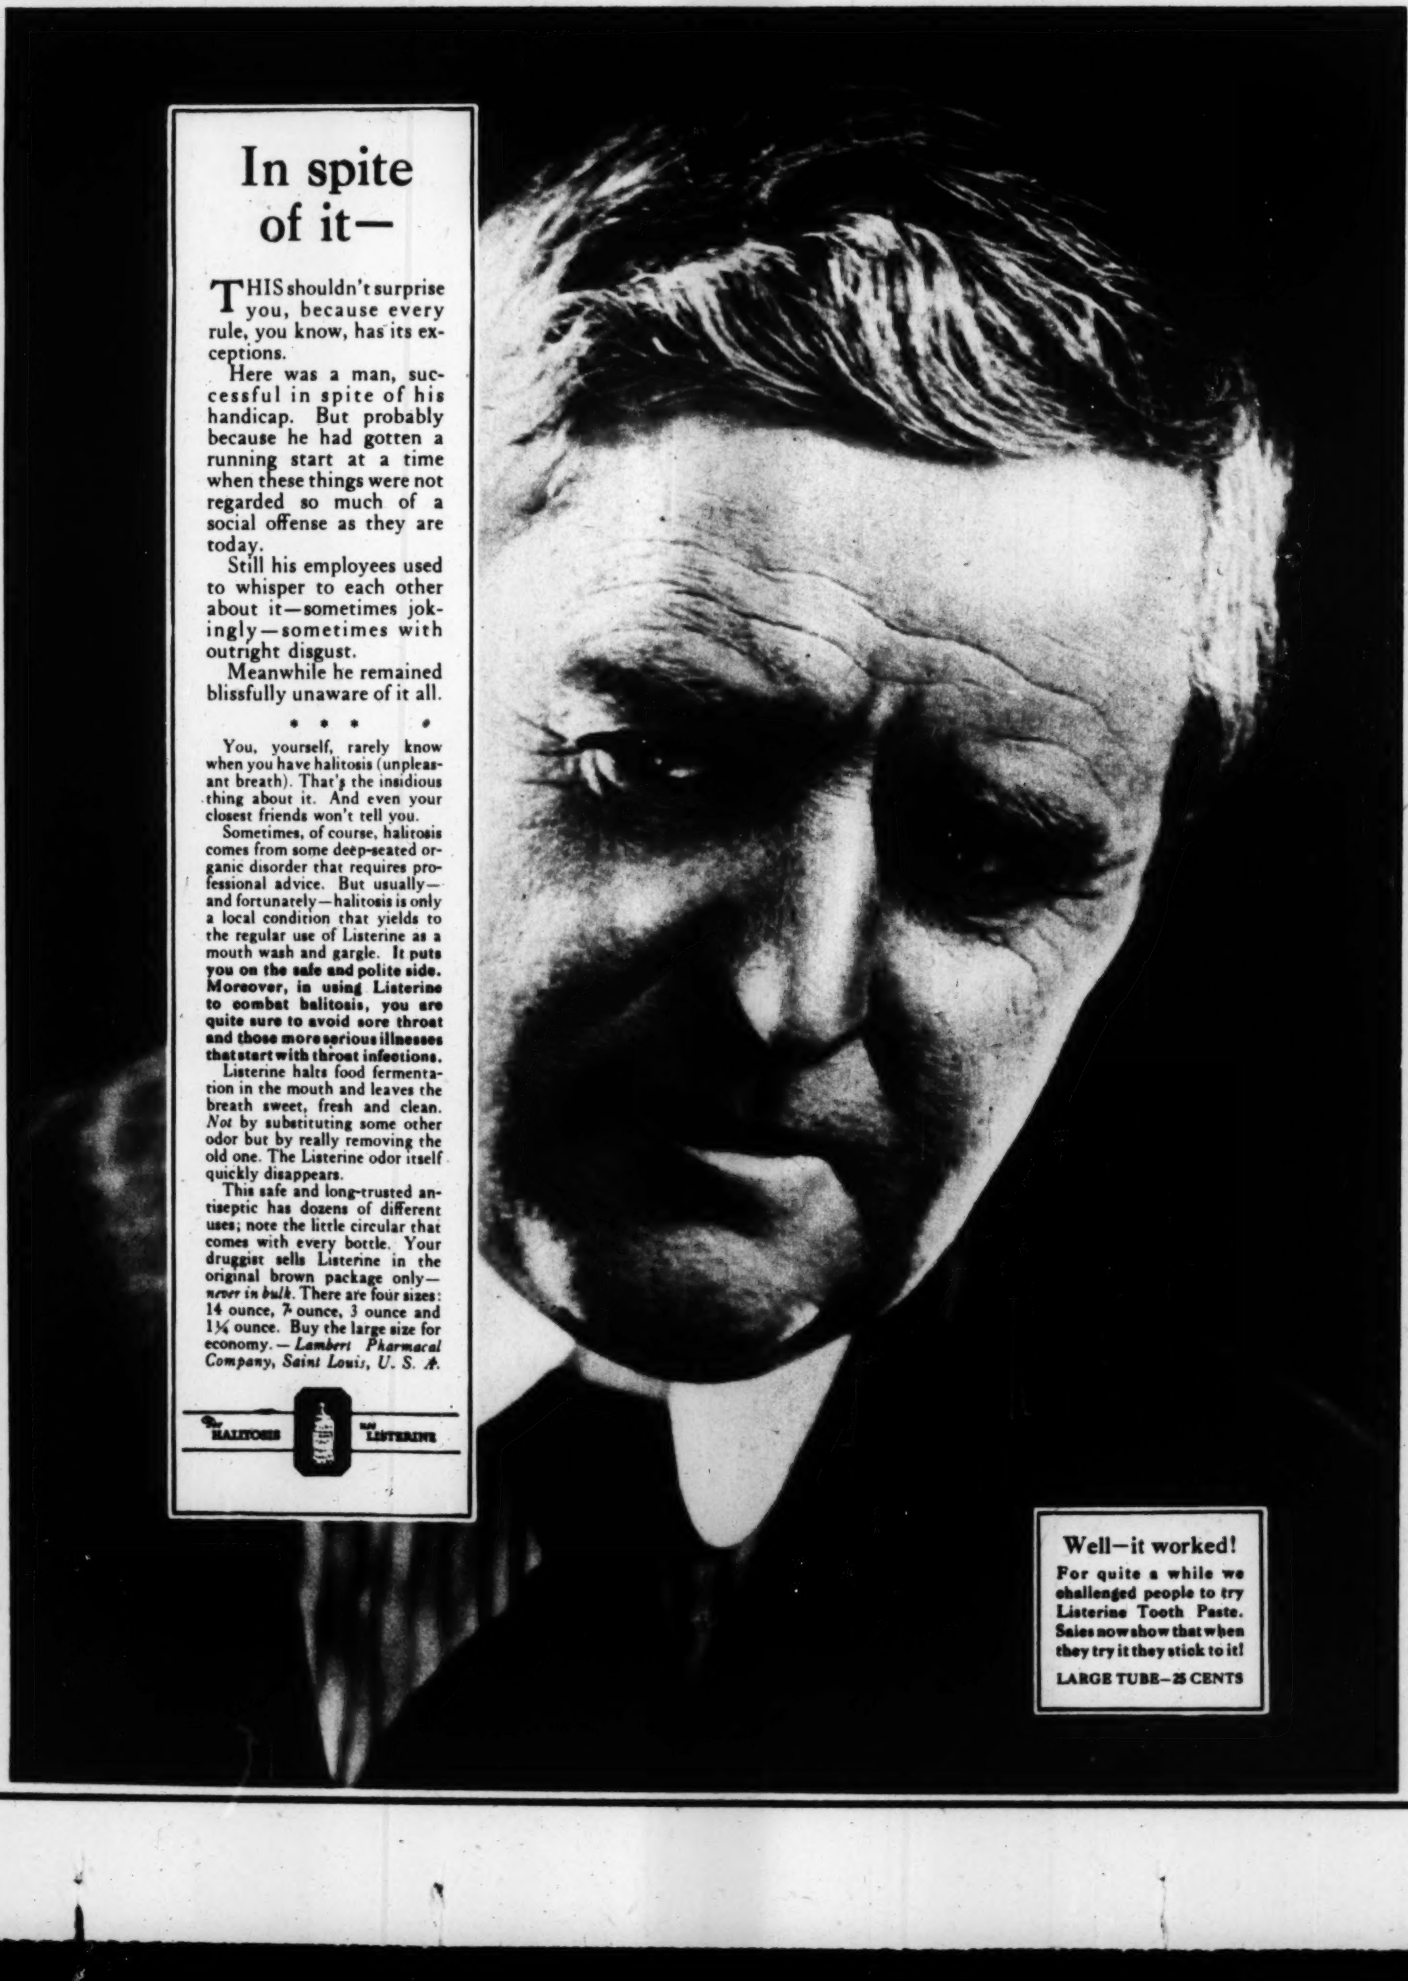
CROOKS, BEWARE!—Here's one of Chicago's "finest" in training for the annual track and field meet of the department. He is Herbert Hein, anchor man on one of the police tug-of-war teams. There are many physiques as powerful as Herbert's hidden under the blue uniforms of Chicago policemen. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood)



In spite of it—

THIS shouldn't surprise you, because every rule, you know, has its exceptions.

Here was a man, successful in spite of his handicap. But probably because he had gotten a running start at a time when these things were not regarded so much of a social offense as they are today.

Still his employees used to whisper to each other about it—sometimes jokingly—sometimes with outright disgust.

Meanwhile he remained blissfully unaware of it all.

* * * *

You, yourself, rarely know when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). That's the insidious thing about it. And even your closest friends won't tell you.

Sometimes, of course, halitosis comes from some deep-seated organic disorder that requires professional advice. But usually—and fortunately—halitosis is only a local condition that yields to the regular use of Listerine as a mouth wash and gargle. It puts you on the safe and polite side. Moreover, in using Listerine to combat halitosis, you are quite sure to avoid sore throat and those more serious illnesses that start with throat infections.

Listerine halts food fermentation in the mouth and leaves the breath sweet, fresh and clean. Not by substituting some other odor but by really removing the old one. The Listerine odor itself quickly disappears.

This safe and long-trusted antiseptic has dozens of different uses; note the little circular that comes with every bottle. Your druggist sells Listerine in the original brown package only—never in bulk. There are four sizes: 14 ounce, 7 ounce, 3 ounce and 1½ ounce. Buy the large size for economy.—Lambert Pharmacal Company, Saint Louis, U. S. A.

The HALITOSIS Safe LISTERINE

Well—it worked!

For quite a while we challenged people to try Listerine Tooth Paste. Sales now show that when they try it they stick to it!

Make Your Face Fortunate

Faces are fortunate indeed if Nature has topped them with a head of glorious waves, but there is no need to be discouraged if the good lady was a bit forgetful in your case. You can make your face fortunate—by framing it with hair permanently waved.

The Eugène Method of permanent waving brings sleek, flat waves that are just as natural!

It is so gentle that none of the hair's natural texture is ever lost no matter how fine the hair that it waves.

Its mildness, and the preservation that it insures, is due to an entirely different principle.

Most methods of permanent waving first drench the hair in chemical solutions, then bake it until it is dry and rigidly fixed into form.

The Eugène Method winds the hair dry, then softens it with tiny jets of clean, white steam until it relaxes comfortably into permanent, natural looking Eugène Waves. The hair dries gradually and naturally with no loss of suppleness. The Eugène Method is slightly more expensive than other methods, but an ever increasing number of discriminating women are finding its gentleness with their hair well worth the trifling difference.

May we give you a little booklet which tells you more about the Eugène Method? Perhaps, too, we may be able to direct you to a shop where you may inquire firsthand about it. Just drop us a note or a post card, and we shall forward the booklet to you at once.

WONDER WHAT A HORSE THINKS ABOUT when a dare-devil rider hangs on by his heels and performs those thrilling lariat stunts which set the rodeo fans cheering? This is Tommy Kirnan of Iowa Park, Tex., trick rider and roper. He's performing in Grant park this week at Chicago's world's championship rodeo.

(Photograph copyright by R. R. Doubleday)

JUST LIKE U. S. CALVARYMEN—Here are four reasons why the rodeo draws so many thousands of spectators. This is only one of the many death-defying thrills these girls offer. They are Bonnie McCarroll, Ruth Roach, Velma Tindle, and Bee Kirnan.

(Photograph copyright by R. R. Doubleday)

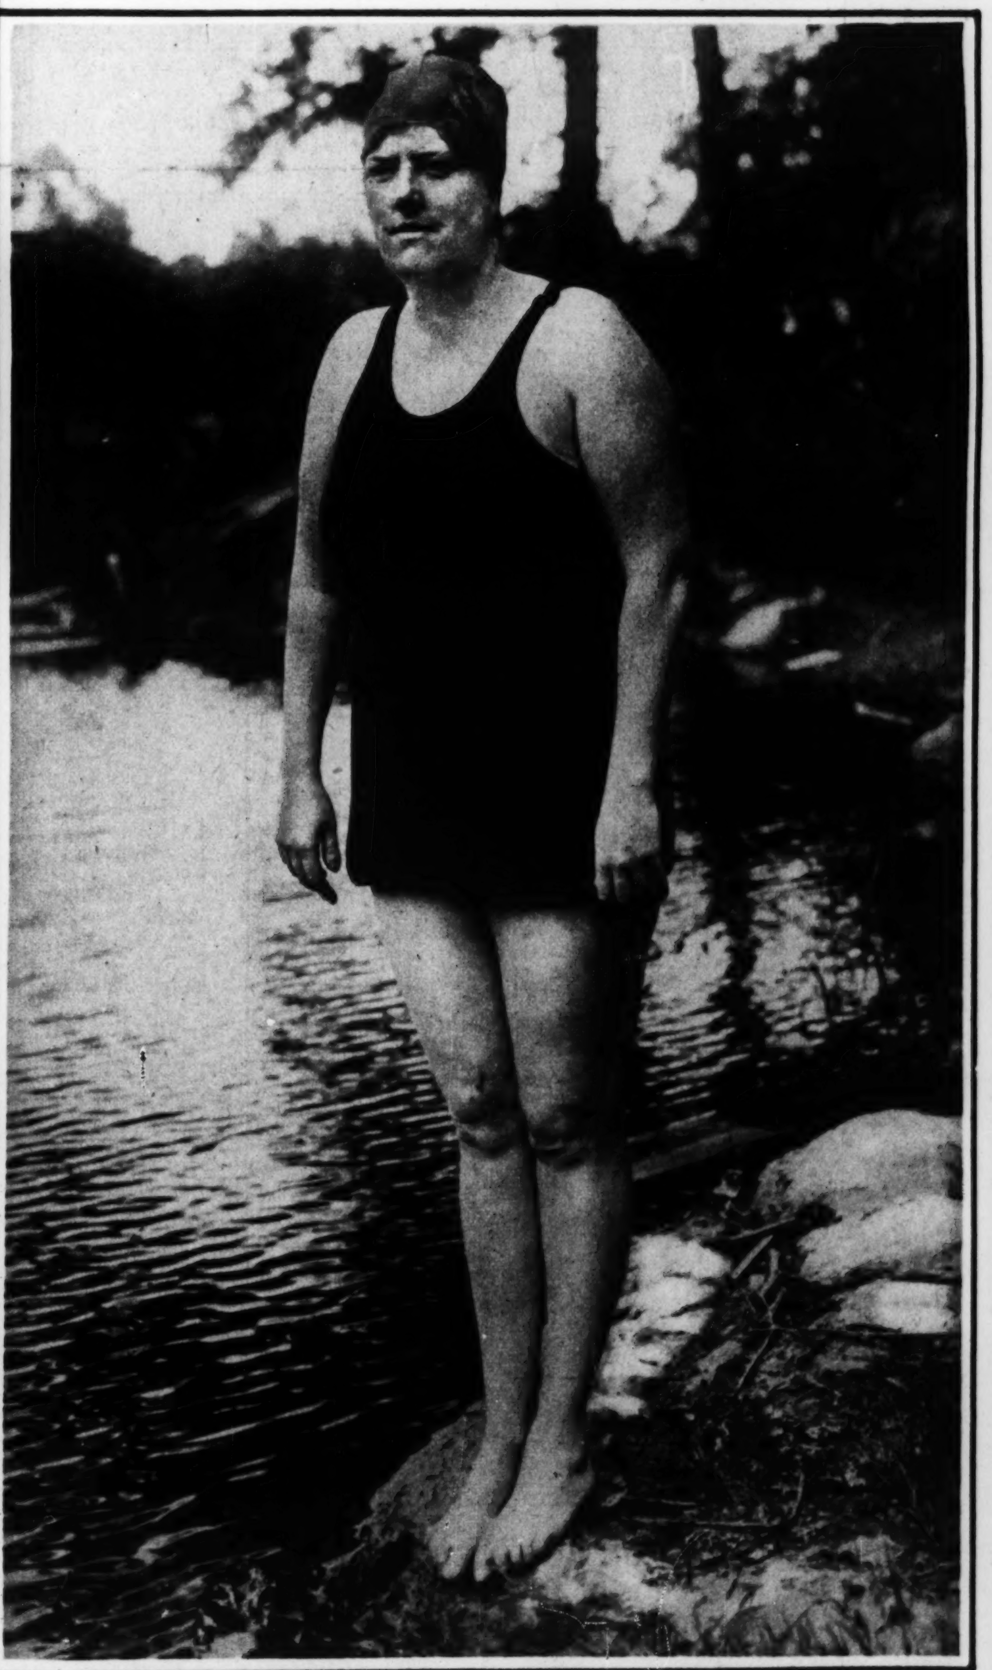
(Photograph from Wide World)

JUST AS EASY—Idaho has produced some of America's best jockeys, but none of them has anything on Mabel Strickland of Bruneau Valley, that state, when it comes to handling a fast-moving horse. Mabel was world's champion woman rider until last year, when she lost the title to Tad Lucas in Chicago's rodeo. She's trying to win back her crown in the rodeo in Grant park.

(Photograph copyright by Robert Burns)



FAILED IN SIGHT OF GOAL—This American girl, Miss Clarabelle Barrett of New Rochelle, N. Y., all but won the honor of being the first woman to swim the English channel. Starting from Dover, England, for Calais, France, she buffeted the tides and waves for 21 hours and 25 minutes; then she had to be taken out of the water on account of her exhausted condition when only two miles from the French coast. She said she would try again.

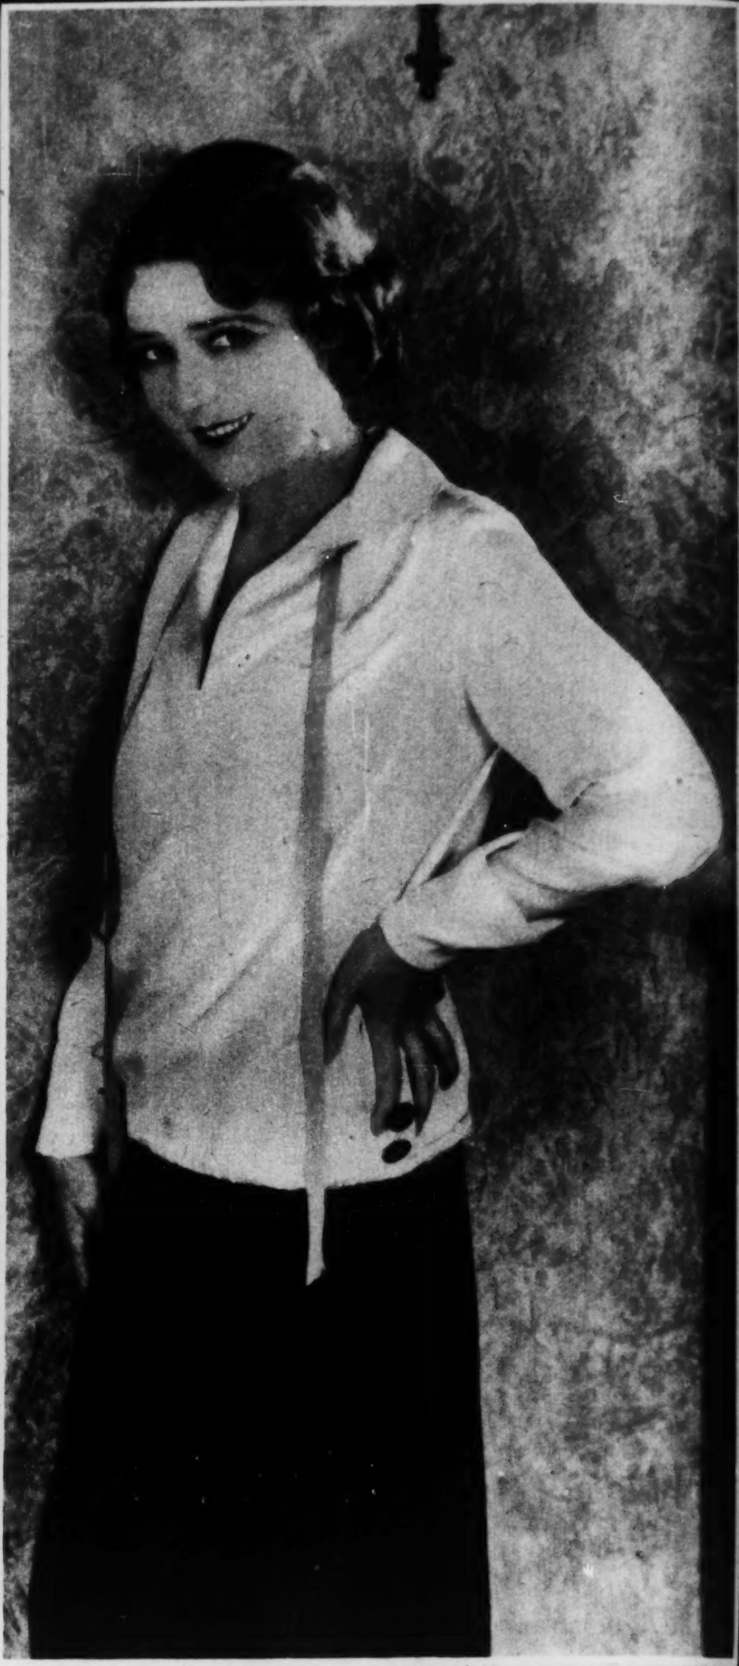
TULLIO CARMINATI and CONSTANCE TALMADGE were snapped thus in one of the scenes of "The Duchess of Buffalo." They look worried, and when you see the picture you'll admit there was good reason for their mental state. Mr. Carminati was at one time leading man and managing director for Eleanora Duse.

LYA DE PUTTI and EMIL JANNINGS have made a new picture—"Variety"—that is a wiz! The story, one of show life, gives them great stuff to work with, and their work in it is great stuff. They appear thus in one of the scenes. "Variety" was made in Germany.



MARY PICKFORD had some new pictures taken not long ago, and here's one of them for you. Aren't you glad you read THE TRIBUNE?

BABE RUTH AND HIS PALS had the time of their lives at Sally Joy Brown's White Sox-Yankee party at Comiskey park. The Home Run King likes the kids, and when Sally Joy Brown of The Tribune brought a small army of them out to see the game, the Babe was eager to be photographed with them. Ruth is in the center, having just as much fun out of the party as are the youngsters.

A CHICAGO PRINCESS AT PLAY—At the fashionable Watch Hill beach in Rhode Island, where society spends the dog days, our photographer found Princess Edward Lobkowicz of New York and Chicago, and Mrs. Lauden Wainwright of Hewlett, Long Island. The princess was Miss Anita Lihme, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Bai Lihme, who were Chicagoans until a couple of years ago.

Happy, Healthy People

Thousands have corrected constipation, skin and stomach troubles—found glorious health and happiness by eating one simple fresh food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food. The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active, daily releasing new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day, one before each meal: on crackers, in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, in small pieces. For constipation dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and at bedtime. Dangerous habit-forming cathartics will gradually become unnecessary. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days.

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-766, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"AS A PROFESSIONAL GOLFER, I became run down from overwork. I had indigestion, could not eat, had no life of any kind. I also suffered from constipation till I gave up all hopes of ever getting better. Some friend advised me to try Fleischmann's Yeast. I did so. My friends are surprised at the change in me since I started taking Yeast. All complaints are gone. I feel like a different man." Jack Yorgan, Chicago, Ill.

"MY LITTLE GIRL DORIS was all run down—no appetite—and began to have boils on her nose and face and even up her nose. Salves did not do any good and my husband asked me to try Yeast. In a few weeks she was rid of the boils and began to pick up. Now she has a splendid appetite and has never had a boil since."

Mrs. W. R. Parker, Norfolk, Va.

"ABOUT THREE YEARS AGO I was suffering terribly with boils. A friend suggested Fleischmann's Yeast. I took three cakes a day. At that time I noticed symptoms of a new boil. It simply passed away. I am happy to say that I have never had another boil since. Now there is always some fresh Yeast in the corner of our ice box. I still take Fleischmann's Yeast just to keep fit." Theodore E. Marr, Baltimore, Md.

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion—clears the skin—banishes constipation.

"THE FIRST WEEK AT COLLEGE, I heard one of the girls praising Yeast. I had been troubled with sluggish intestines and their result, a very blotchy skin. So I decided to try Fleischmann's Yeast. The results were marvelous. Yeast has wonderful powers in correcting constipation. I know a number of people who are also eating Yeast with splendid results. I still continue to eat Yeast regularly, as it certainly is wonderful."

TURNING BACK FIVE CENTURIES, the town of Landshut in Bavaria recently staged this elaborate festival in commemoration of an historical wedding there in 1475. Ancient games, contests, and folk dances followed the parade. The picture shows the marchers in medieval costume. The bride is riding in the royal coach of many colors. Duke George, the bridegroom, rides alongside the coach on horseback.

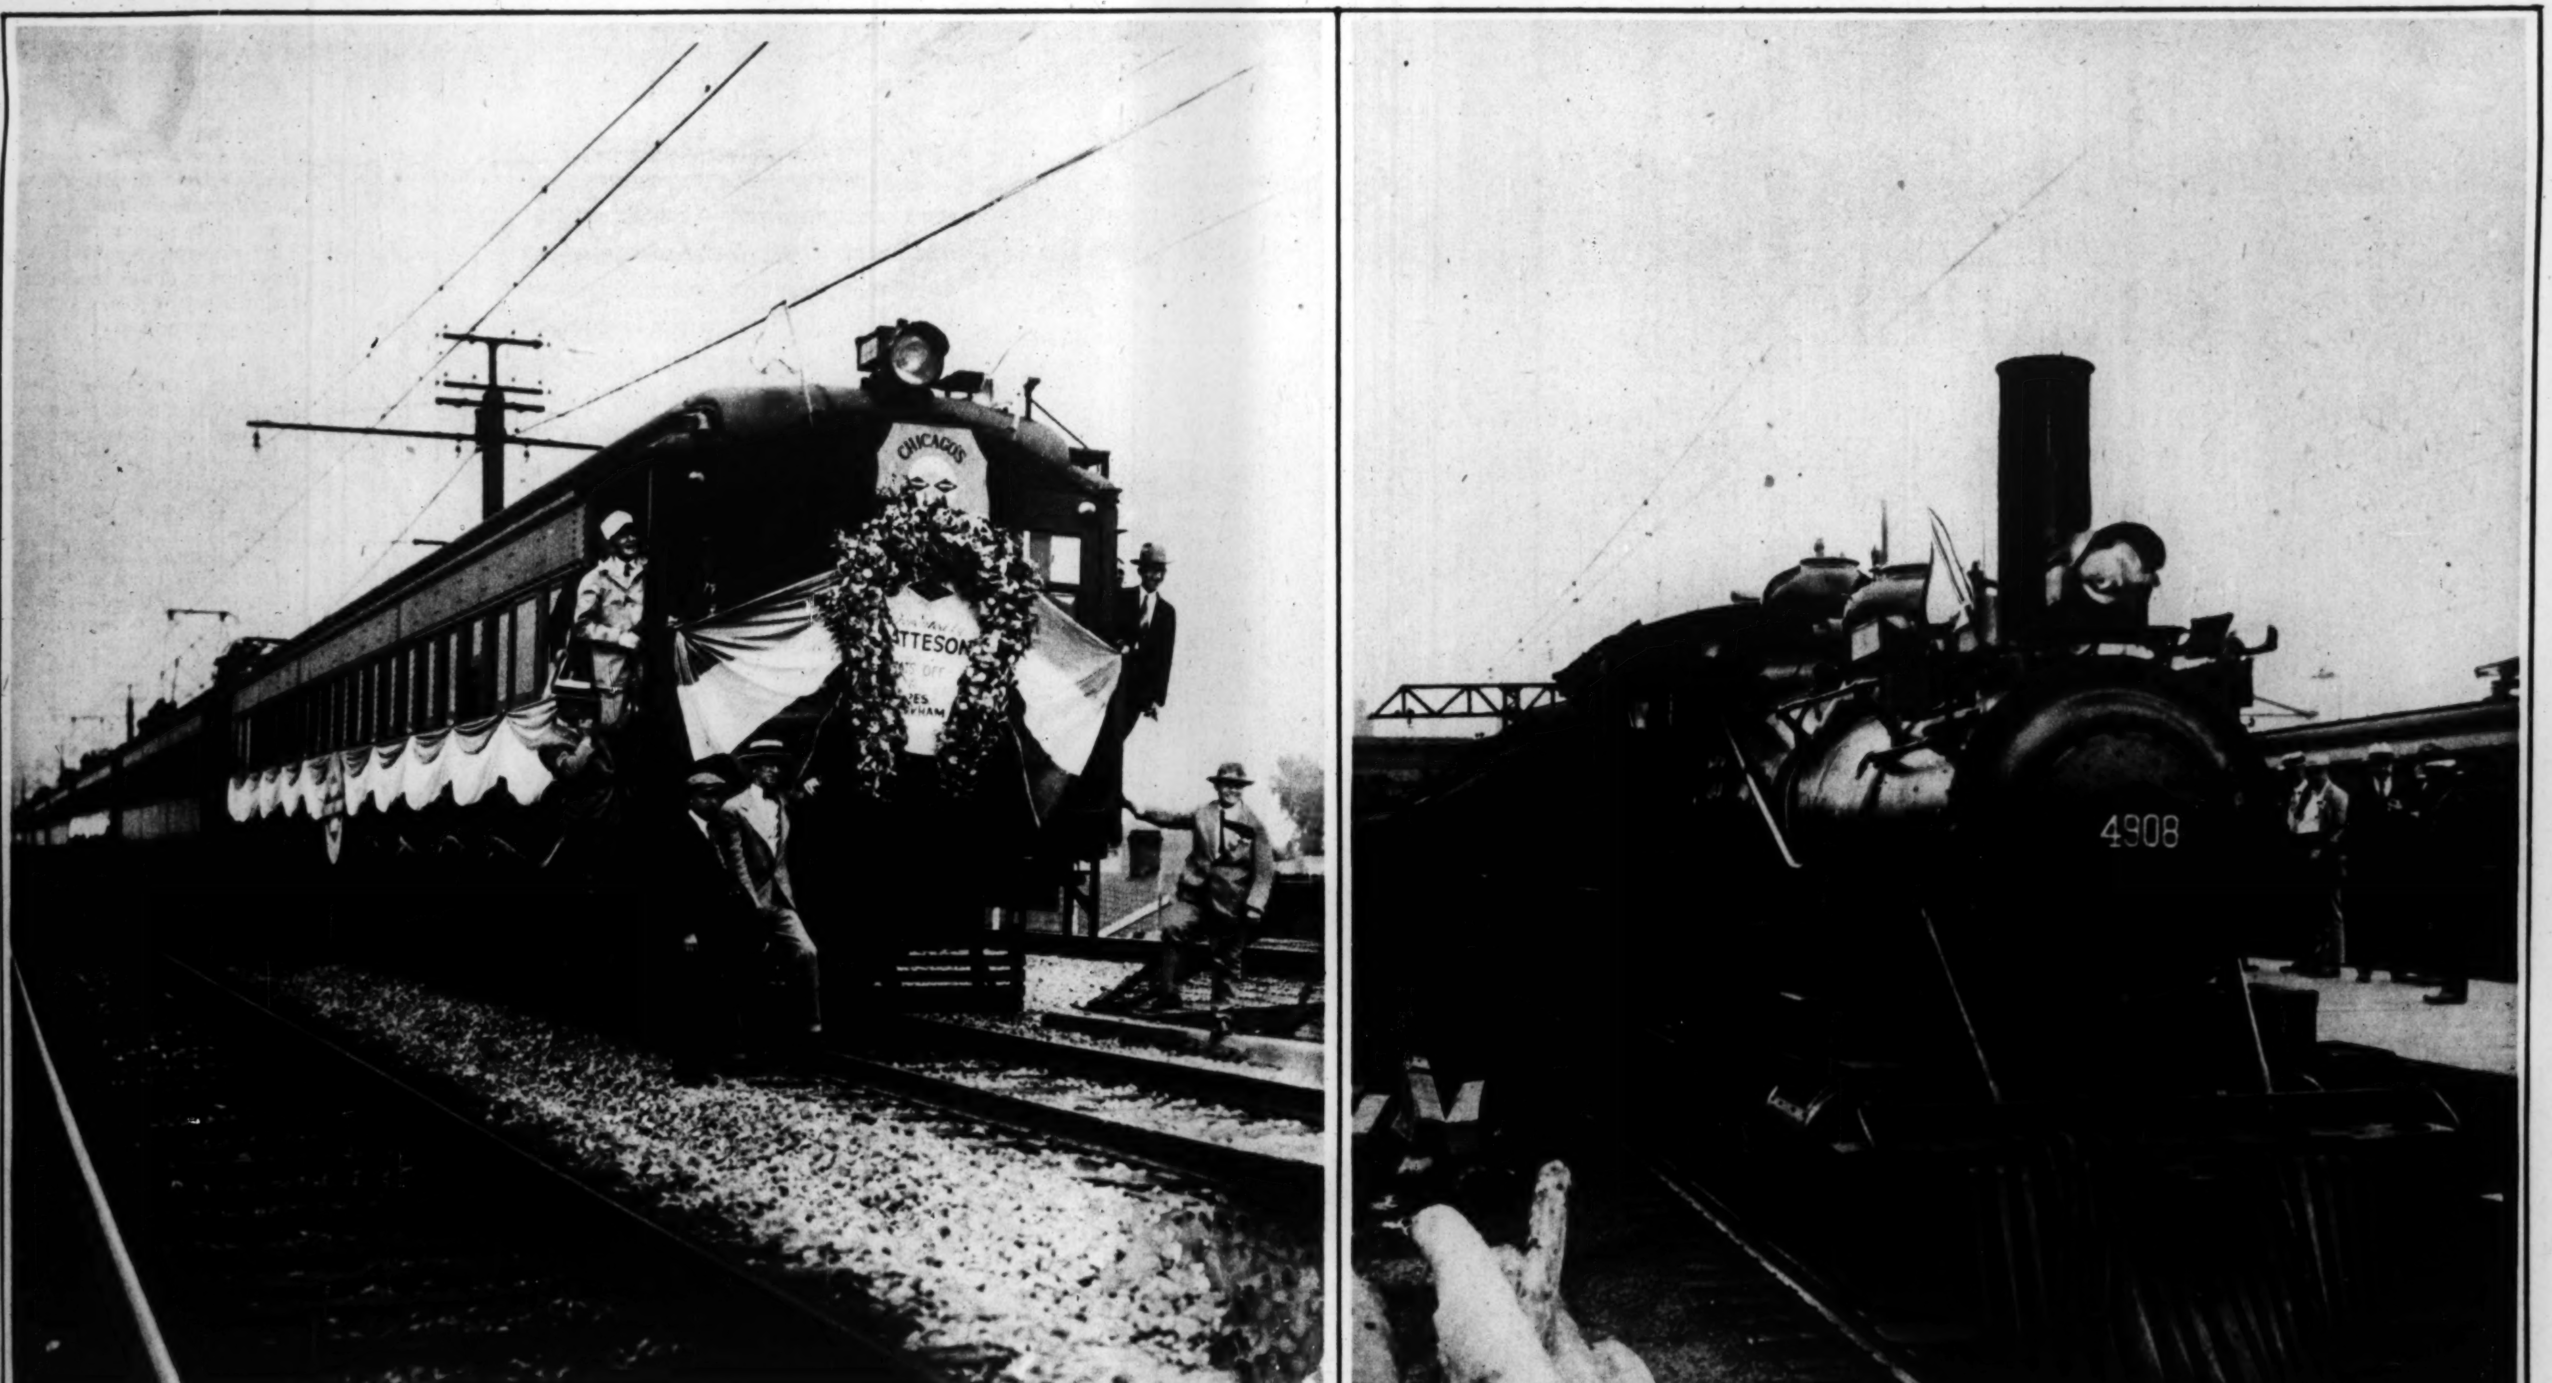
AMERICAN GIRL CONQUERS THE ENGLISH CHANNEL AND SHATTERS ALL RECORDS—The first woman to swim the treacherous seas between France and England was Miss Gertrude Ederle of New York City. She covered a distance of 31½ miles in 14 hours and 34 minutes, thereby breaking the marks of her masculine predecessors and establishing one of her own that may stand for all time. At the left the 19 year old world's champion is pictured as she appeared in training in France. In the center she is shown in a photograph dispatched by cable and telegraph as she stepped into the water at Cape Gris-Nez under a multiple coat of grease for her heroic and successful struggle against icy and mountainous waves. At the right Miss Ederle appears as the sidewalks of New York and Papa Ederle, the German-born butcher, know her off stage.



ANOTHER STEP FROM COVERED WAGON DAYS is pictured in these Illinois Central suburban trains. The tea kettle engine at the right, one of the oldest in the I. C. suburban service, drew the guest train from Randolph street to Matteson when the road celebrated its electrification with a parade, a pageant at Soldiers' field, and a banquet at which 2,200 diners acclaimed the era of electricity. Within a month only electric trains of the type shown above will be seen in I. C. suburban service, marking a giant step towards a smokeless Chicago.

AW, IT'S TOO HOT FOR FAIRY TALES! So the youngsters at Columbus park, one of Chicago's playgrounds, dive into the pool to cool off. But Miss Ida Chiappe of Chicago's public library goes right along with her "Fairy Ring," as she calls her weekly hour of stories. And everybody seems happy with the class as it is being conducted in our picture. (Tribune photograph)

GRAFLEX

Many illustrations that you admire in this section were probably made by the Graflex. With it any one can get pictures that show similar vigor and sharpness.

The Graflex way is simple and sure. While making an exposure you watch in the hood a reflection of the subject. Until you trip the shutter the image is there, right side up and under control. You know at a glance whether focus is sharp, you see what the view includes.

Fast shutter speeds (up to 1/1000) catch exciting scenes. Slow speeds (down to 1/5) permit snapshots in the woods or indoors. The big anastigmat admits so much light that detail is obtainable with shorter-than-ordinary exposures. Posing and pausing are seldom necessary—the picture has spirit!

The Latest Graflex

Cooke Anastigmat f.2.5, three times as fast as the fastest lens heretofore offered on a Graflex, is a feature of the latest model. Rain or shine, early or late in the day this camera can make a striking negative. Its full name is 3¼ x 4¼ Revolving Back Graflex, Series C. Price $260.

Prices of Graflex cameras now begin at $58.50.

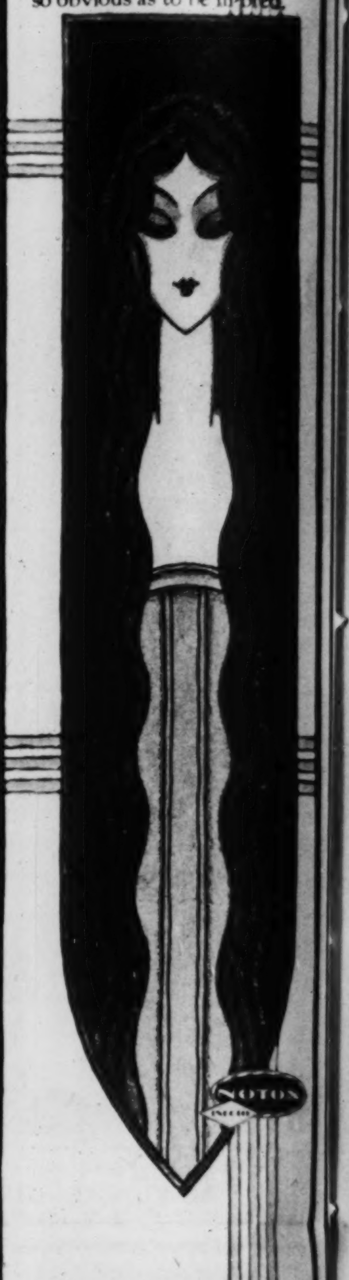
A Problem
As Eternal
As Woman

GRAY hair has been as eternal a question as woman herself and, until two years ago, as unanswerable.

For as time has gone on women have realized more and more that, though beauty owes much to artifice, the least suggestion of artificiality is unpardonable. So women of refinement—until they learned about Notox—avoided hair colorings. Their effects were so obvious as to be ill-bred.



Now an ever-increasing number of truly patrician women consider the correction of their gray hair with Notox a regular part of their program of looking fit.

The conversion to its use of the very women who were most opposed to colorings is an achievement that Notox owes to its unique principle. That principle is new to science, but as old as the world. For it is nature's own method of coloring the hair.

A hair is really a very slender thread of fibres protected by a lustrous, translucent coloring. All the color of the hair is in the inner thread. The outer shell contains no pigment.

Yet that delicate sheath is responsible for half the beauty of the hair.

When hair turns gray, it simply means that nature no longer supplied color to its threads.

And once the hair has turned gray it is futile to try to reproduce its original color by painting over the gray.

That is what other colorings did and that is why their effects were so flat, so unreal. They blanketed half the hair's beauty.

Notox disregards such methods and follows nature's. Notox replaces the lost color in the inner fibres of the hair, where nature put it originally. No color remains on the delicate, lustrous surface of the hair. Its shimmering sheath is left visible. And so nature's combination of light and color is again attained.

Notox is unchanged by any sort of waving, shampooing, permanent waving, or steam baths. It is safe too; and so easy to apply that hundreds of thousands of women use it with perfect success in the privacy of their own homes.

Indetectible, safe, permanent—and so convenient—Notox is the preparation which womankind has awaited since time immemorial.

Notox is sold and applied in beauty shops; and sold in drug and department stores. The makers of Notox, will, upon request, recommend a beauty shop near you where you may have Notox expertly applied.

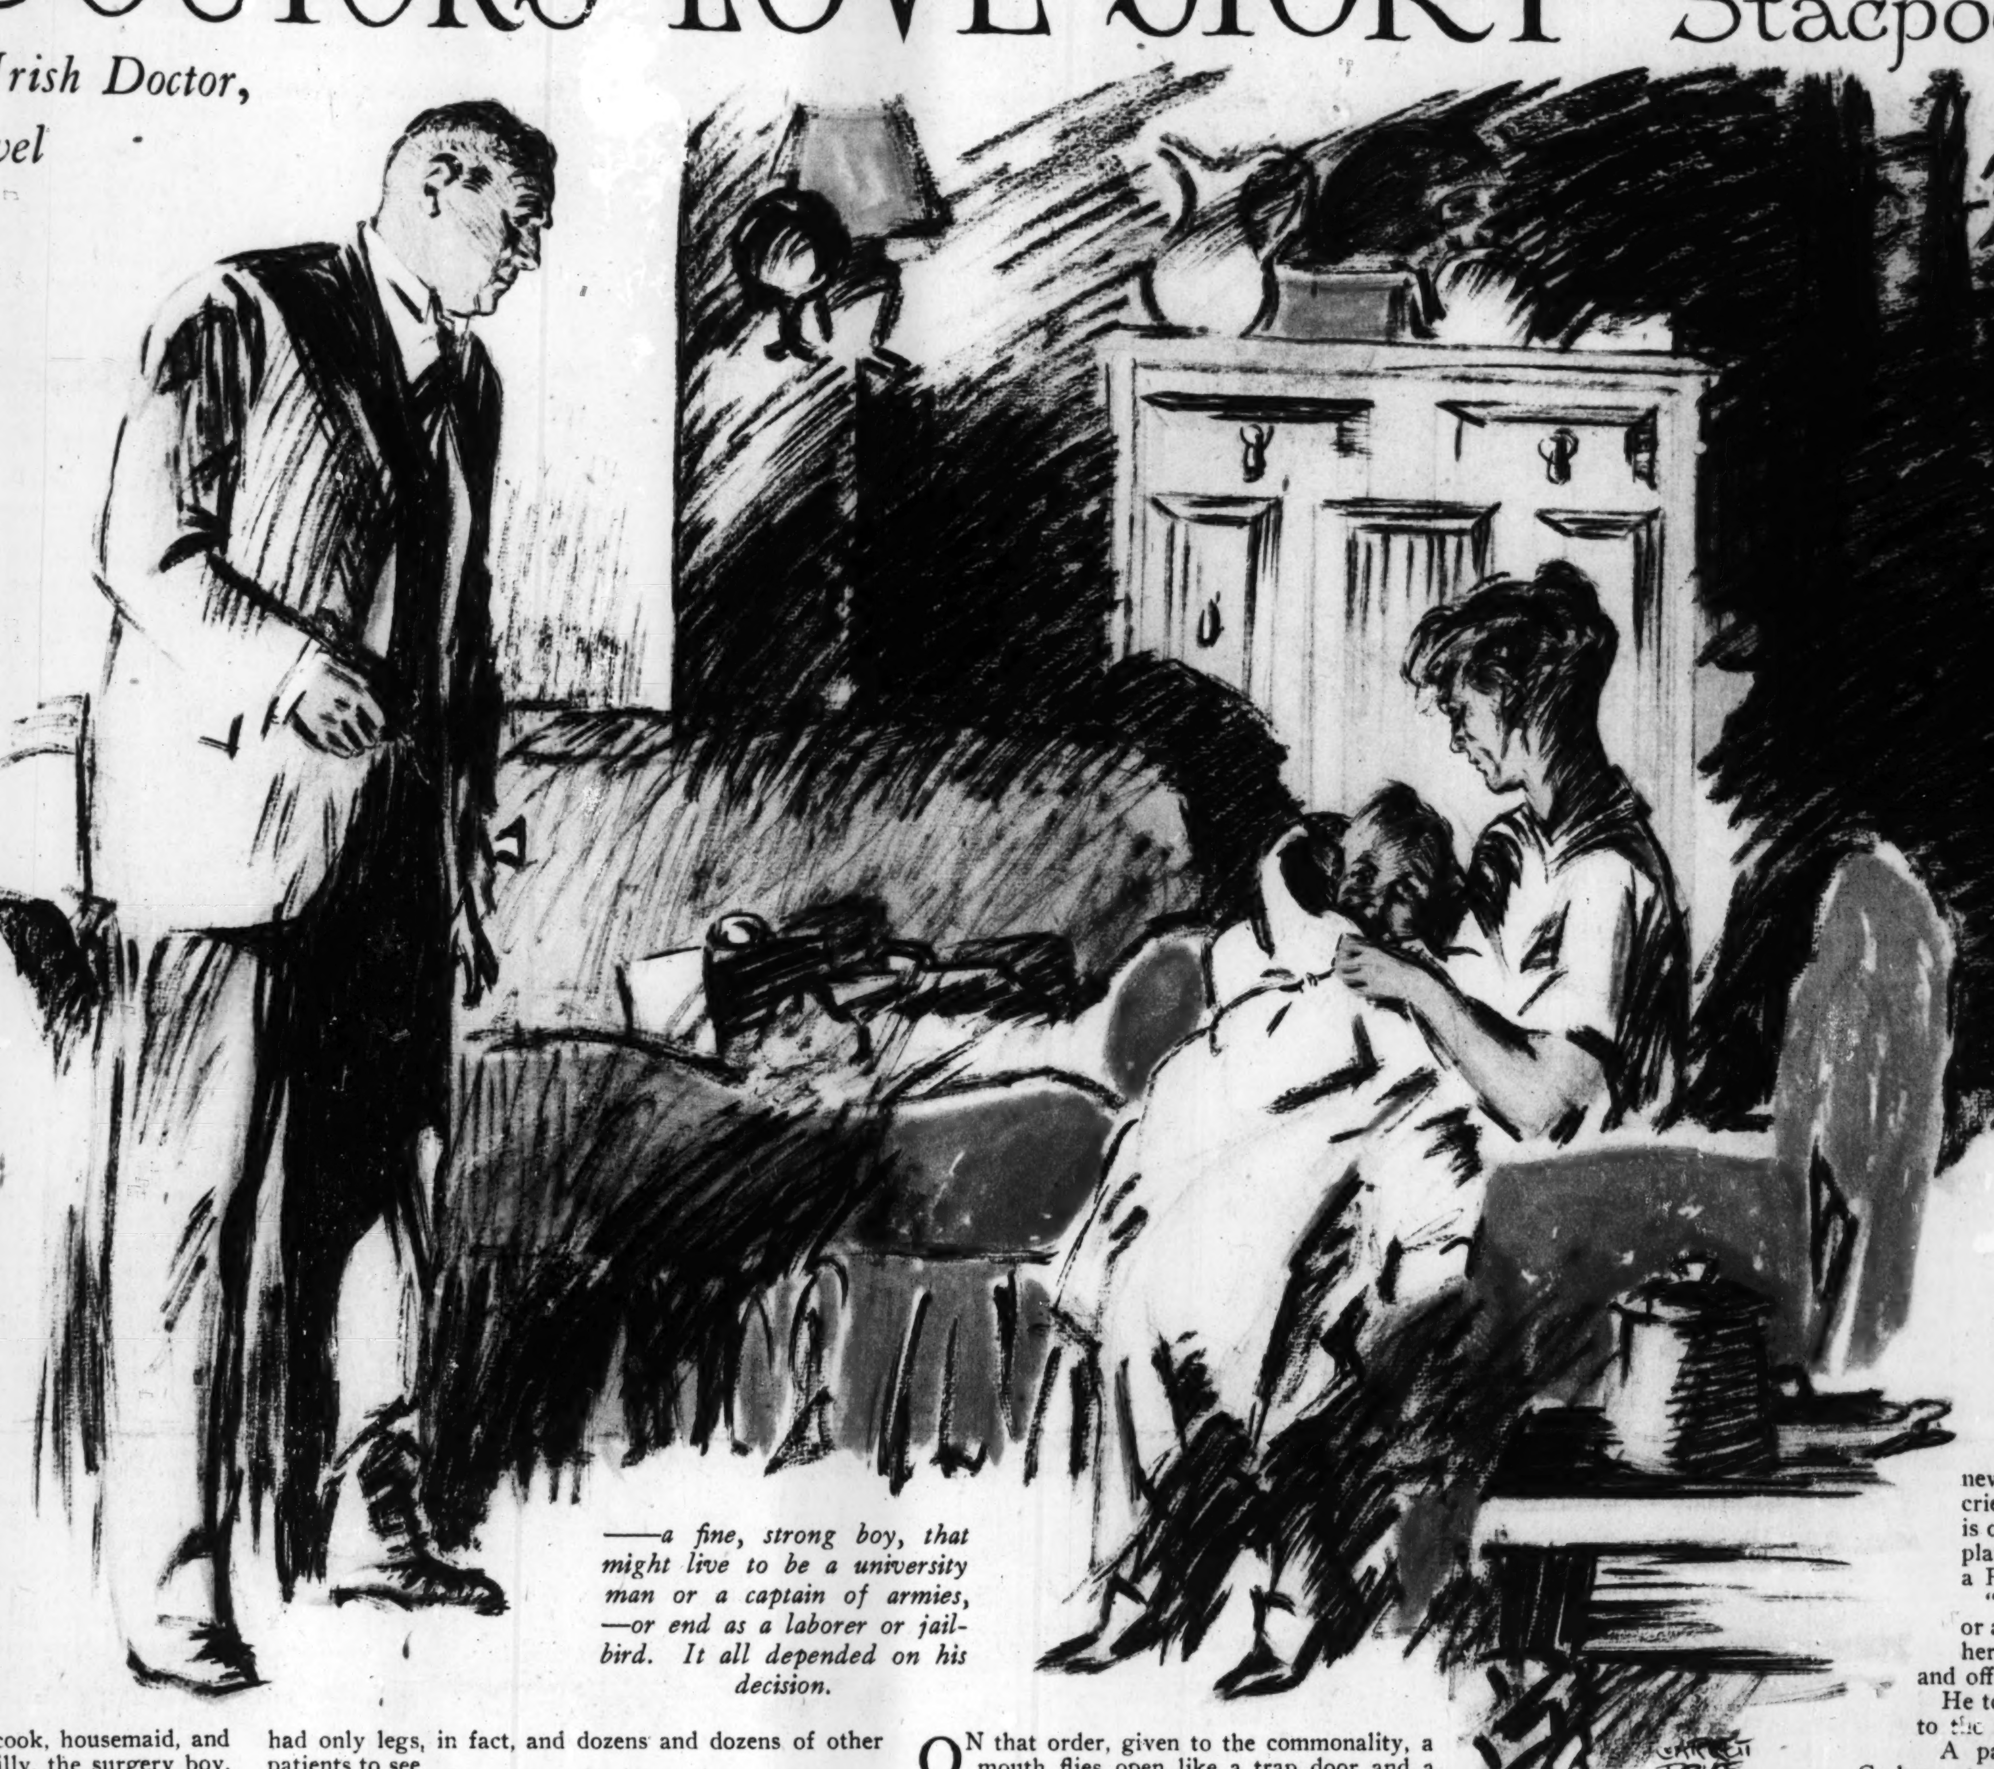
The DOCTOR'S LOVE STORY

by H. DeVere Stacpoole

The Story of an Irish Doctor, Who Found a Novel Cure for the Ills of a Wealthy and Beautiful Patient, a Woman Who Was Lonely



——a fine, strong boy, that might live to be a university man or a captain of armies, —or end as a laborer or jail-bird. It all depended on his decision.

DR. O'FLYNN'S practice stretched from his surgery in Little Endell street round and about as far as Gordon square on the north and half down Drury lane on the south. It was a mixed practice, and though the surgery was frankly a converted shop and though his work took him to slums like those in Sardinia street, he had a few good patients, such, for instance, as the Burkes of Gordon square and the Hon. Miss Corkran of Cunningham Mansions, all Irish and Catholics, like himself.

O'Flynn was of the peasant stock that supplies such good recruits to the priesthood and the medical profession: fifty and over, fresh faced, with a twinkle in his eye, a humorous tongue, and a careless manner. He was friends with all men and women, with Irishmen in high office in London, with the police of the Bow street district and the criminals hunted by the police, with the publicans and the sinners on whom the publicans lived, with anarchists and old apple women.

Careless in dress and manner, he sometimes contravened the strict dictates governing the rules of medical procedure; acting generally on the impulse of his heart, he sometimes even transgressed the laws of ordinary life, doing things that no English professional man would ever dream of doing—like, for instance, the the thing I am going to tell you about presently.

Norah, fifty-eight, from Kerry, cook, housemaid, and general factotum, made up with Billy, the surgery boy, the whole of the doctor's ménage. Billy would arrive every morning at eight, departing at five. Norah rarely went out, except to mass; she had no holding with the "ould trash" of English people round about; aching always to be back in Tralee, she led the life of a prisoner in the Bastille, bound by the chains of household duties and barred from escape by her absolute, unflinching, almost incredible devotion to the doctor.

For the sake of O'Flynn she even permitted children to play on the house doorstep. You must understand—and this is an important part of the geography of my story—that the shop door was the way of ingress for patients, the house door with its night bell and speaking tube was sacred to the doctor and private callers, children, never being driven away from it, haunted it, urged by the passion for doorsteps that seems part of a child-mind's makeup. Imitation tea parties were given on it, perambulators anchored off it, and hop-scotch pitches chalked on the pavement in front of it, just as tennis courts are laid out in more fashionable resorts and just as the rotation of games visits the pleasure places of the well to do, so here the top season, the marble season, and the chestnut season followed one another with a regularity unalterable by war or the death of kings or the shifting policies of the parliament of Westminster.

One day, returning to his doorstep and his midday meal, the doctor found a message awaiting him. Norah delivered it verbally as she uncovered his chop.

"Miss Corkran sent word after you were gone askin' you to call immediate, and I tould the chap that brought the message you wasn't an airoplane," said Norah, dish cover inverted in her hand, "and to tell her you was out on yer rounds and wouldn't be back till past noon."

"Bother Miss Corkran," said O'Flynn. But "bother" wasn't the word he used. It was always the way with rich patients, urgent messages to come at once, sent at impossible times, and he had experienced trouble and enough with the Corkran woman ever since her dog had died a month ago.

It was in the man's rough and ready nature to use the word "damn" in connection with her and it was in his nature to understand and appreciate her, this attenuated woman of thirty-five, all spirit and affection, yet lonely, somehow, as Robinson Crusoe; without chick or child, ever ready to help the poor, yet somehow without the power of making friends amongst the rich. Instinctive as a dog and for that reason, perhaps, trusting in and loving O'Flynn.

A love that had no more to do with sex than Battersea Park has to do with the Albert Memorial.

A delightful friend—for whom he would have walked barefooted down Drury lane, but the devil of a patient. She had just that fault, just that bit of selfishness in her nature that made her forget a doctor wasn't an aeroplane, had only legs, in fact, and dozens and dozens of other patients to see.

He didn't hurry himself over the meal, and when he started on his afternoon rounds he left Miss Corkran almost the last on his list, arriving at Cunningham Mansions about four.

It lies close to Gower street, this great hive of flats, inhabited by the special breed of London people who live in flatland—a creation quite distinct from the race of London people who still inhabit houses.

The entrance to Cunningham Mansions is bleak as the entrance to Pentonville prison. There is no porter; if the lift is down the boy who runs it will take you up; if it is not down, you ring and wait.

As his patient lived on the first floor, O'Flynn did not bother to wait; he went up the stone stairs, knocked at the door, and was admitted by Margaret.

Margaret was County Dublin pure and simple, a stout, matronly woman with chestnut colored hair worn flat on the forehead, and a Dublin accent which is to the accent of Kerry as cockney to West Somerset.

"Is Miss Julia in?" asked the doctor.

"In," said Margaret. "Faith, where else would she be? She hasn't set foot to the ground since here you were last, achin' and pinin' on the sofa and me near driven distracted with her."

She took his hat and, leading him down the passage, ushered him into a sitting room filled with twilight and the pleasant flickering light of a fire, the perfume of violets, and the fragrance of China tea.

Every room has a soul born of the spirit of its inhabitants or inhabitant, and this room, with its books in dainty bindings, its gadgets to insure comfort, its priceless porcelain, and its three paintings from the brush of Daubigny, was a fairly faithful reflection of the dainty, dreamy, supersensitive, and supercivilized soul of its owner.

By the couch stood a table with tea things for one, and near the table a chair with a cushion on which had once reposed the dog.

Miss Corkran, on the entrance of the physician, laid down the "Wild Swans of Cool" that she had been reading.

It is a thing to be read by twilight or firelight, and this super-refined sensualist had evidently been trying to do both. She held out a ringless, attentuated hand to the other, but she did not offer tea.

The Corkrans of Castle Corkran were a very old Irish family and the O'Flynns were just the O'Flynns; perhaps that was the reason she did not offer tea even to this tried friend, or perhaps it was because, being bound up in herself, she didn't think.

He took his seat beside her with a few words and picked up a book that had fallen from the couch to the floor. He noted the title as he placed it on the table by the tea things, "Have animals souls?—yes!"

"And now let's look at your tongue," said he.

ON that order, given to the commonality, a mouth flies open like a trap door and a tongue protrudes itself even to the roots.

But the Corkrans are different: moving and moistening her lips, wiping them with a lace edged handkerchief, she presented a tongue on a salver, so to speak, a tongue fresh and innocent as the tongue of a child.

"Hm," said O'Flynn.

He took her pulse, a pulse soft as a six year old's, even and full of vitality, if not of robustness.

"Bad," said O'Flynn. "You haven't been doing as I told you—O, there's no use in talking of neuralgia when ye won't listen to me advice. Here you've been lying ever since I saw you last."

"O, no, I haven't," cut in the patient. "I've been up and about——"

"Up and about! It's up and out I told you to be. It's not your body, it's your mind that you want to take out for a walk; I told you that last time and I won't tell you again; there, now, you have it plain."

Miss Corkran sighed.

"Here you are," he went on, "just with your books and yourself—sure that's no way to be living with a great big world outside and all its people wanting you."

"I can't bear people," sighed Miss Corkran. "I know it's wicked and all that, but I've tried it—ever since—no matter——"

She plaited her handkerchief, and to O'Flynn there came the suggestion, and not for the first time, that Julia Cockran in the years before he had been her doctor and friend had experienced a cross in her affections.

"Maybe you never tried the right people," said he. "I come to you for money for the poor souls down in Sardinia street or Drury lane and out leaps your purse, never a friend of the poor better than you. Well, get into a cab and come down and see them; the salt of the earth they are, and the welcome of God they'll give you."

But Miss Corkran shook her head; she could do anything for the poor but touch them. Poverty, squalor, and dirt horrified her; she hinted as much, and then she slipped back to her ailments, imploring of him a sleeping draught for that night.

O'Flynn wrote the prescription:

Sol sach ust (solution burnt sugar) M. XX
Tr Lav co (tincture of lavender) M. XX
Aq ad z ft Haust
To be taken at bedtime.

"Send it down to Roberts of Bond street," said he. "There's not another chemist in London I'd trust to make it up."

Outside he talked a moment to Margaret on the landing.

"O, don't be asking me how she is," said he. "Haven't you eyes in your head as well as meself? It's dying she is for the want of that dog. Where's your senses not to have got her another!"

"Dog," cried Margaret. "I tould her that, and it's seven fits she went into at me words. 'Never another, never another!' cries she. Lost she is over that whazin', plate faced brute of a Pakinese."

"Well, it's a dog or an undertaker for her," said O'Flynn, and off he went.

He took his way back to the surgery on foot. A patient like Julia Corkran stands out strangely in a practice like O'Flynn's. He had seen that day twenty-one patients besides those who came to the surgery, working people, small shopkeepers, struggling to make two ends meet, women to shudder over, and men sure to be jailed again within the month, and the only one of the lot craving pity was Julia Corkran.

"She's never known trouble and that's what's the matter with her," said O'Flynn to himself as he went his way.

And she was worth five or six thousand a year; this woman without a family had what would have brought joy and well-being to fifty of such families as formed the staple of his practice.

He thought of this and then forgot the whole matter as he turned into Wise street to see the last patient on his list, an old woman living down a foggy court and dying of cancer.

The fog, that gray Bloomsbury fog of autumn that seems to rise from the past, was dimming the lamps of Endell street when he reached it. Carter's, the grocer's and oil shop next door to the surgery, was casting its glow right out on the sidewalk and on his doorstep, half revealed by the light of the nearest lamp and the reflected glow of Carter's, was a bundle propped against the door.

He bent down. It was a baby. A baby wrapped and wrapped in a dirty old shawl, with other things underneath, no doubt, to make it warm and comfortable, for it was asleep, the match he struck revealed that; also that its face was dirty.

Beside this living bundle was a small tin of salmon tucked close up to it, almost hidden by the shawl.

O'Flynn flung the match away and looked up and down the street. Not a soul, nothing but the bell of a muffin man, unseen in the mist, and the far murmur of traffic from the streets beyond.

It wasn't his first experience of the sort. Only a few months ago a three months old child had been left in his surgery, in a basket, like a turkey. A London doctor, if he is known to be a man of good heart among the lower orders, is liable to this sort of surprise.

It had been sent promptly to the parish and the fact advertised as a deterrent to similar contributors, yet here was another—and bigger than the last.

He bent down and picked the bundle up, kicked the tin of salmon on to the pavement, and opened the door with his latch-key.

Upstairs in the sitting room, with the bundle on Norah's lap before the fire, unwrapping produced not only a fat child of one and a bit, just rousing from sleep and winding itself up to cry, but a feeding bottle with a long, unhygienic rubber tube and teat.

Norah popped the teat in its mouth, and after a second's indecision it chose the better part and sucked.

The doctor, standing with his back to the fire, watched it as it sat, its black, beady eyes taking in the points of this new environment as it fed. It was a boy.

The other had been a girl. The other had been very well dressed, had worn a veil and little woollen gloves, and with his terrible knowledge of London and local life he could have put his finger on the district it came from and on the sort of woman who had deserted it.

This was quite a different proposition. This was a slum baby.

Now, people in the slums don't desert their babies. They do all sorts of other things, but they don't do that, and O'Flynn must have been blind, absolutely blind for the moment to have been led astray as he was. Blind, or anyhow half blinded, by the great new idea that had suddenly seized him.

Here was a creature that God had put in his hands, a human life in the bud, a fine, strong boy that might live to be a university man or a captain of armies or might live to be an outcast brought up by the parish, and ending maybe as a laborer or jail bird.

It all depended on his decision.

"Norah," said he, "fetch me down that old tin bath in the attic and bring up a can of hot water and a towel; I'll hold the child. After that you can fetch me the little old soft blanket you'll find in the chest in me bedroom. Don't be asking questions. And while you're giving him his bath I'll nip down to the surgery and polish off the patients."

Two hours later a taxi drove up to Cunningham Mansions, and O'Flynn, a bundle under his arm, knocked at the door of the Corkran flat.

Margaret opened to him.

"Here's your dog," said he, "left at me door by the Holy Virgin herself. Not a word out of you. Take it in to her and tell her you found it on the door mat. I've given it three drops of soothin' stuff and it'll sleep till the morning, and the Lord have mercy on your souls if you don't treat it like a Christian."

THERE is nothing like decision when you are dealing with women. Had O'Flynn been a weak man or a man not of the order to which he belonged he might have been arguing with Margaret still and this story would never have been written. As it was, he left her bludgeoned with the baby in her arms and an order to let him know "how she takes to it."

But the strongest minded man cannot destroy the small worry that bores like a termite and that comes very often in the form of an afterthought.

He had got into bed that night with the satisfied feeling that comes of a day's work well done, and he was congratulating himself on the last stroke.

It was one of those things that rarely come to a man's hand. The woman wanted that which all women want, consciously or subconsciously—a child. Just as a hen will take to a porcelain egg she had taken to a dog; this was the real thing, if she would only, so to speak, sit on it. His knowledge of women and life told him that most probably she would. On the other hand, the child wanted to be saved from the cold world where it had been left on a cold doorstep.

O'Flynn had had all superficial sentimentality rubbed off him long ago, but his good warm heart, going out to the creature, had measured the distance, the distance he had carried it that night, the distance from poverty and neglect to wealth and the saving power of love.

O, it was a curious and grand business entirely; he ran it all over in his mind as he lay there in the dark before closing his eyes—and then, and not till then, came the small worry that had been waiting to trip him.

Funny thing, that tin of salmon. What did the unfortunate creature who had left the baby mean by leaving a tin of salmon with it?

Holy Mike! It couldn't be that she'd left them both to be come back for! Nonsense! Where was the sense in a thing like that?

Carter's, the shop next door, sold salmon. The poor round about had three grand passions in the way of food, salmon, sardines, and fried fish and chips. Could she have been to Carter's, bought the salmon, and then left the baby and it while she went off for something else? Nonsense! There was no other shop near by, and even if there was no woman in her senses would do a thing like that, and if she had she would surely have knocked at the door to ask, or the police would. Well, there was no use in bothering over an insoluble problem, and, like a sensible man he turned the worry down and went to sleep.

O'Flynn never read the papers, or only the Freeman's Journal, sent him every week by an aunt in Dublin, so he did not see a paragraph in next morning's Daily Mail relative to a baby lost by Mrs. McGinnis of Conway street, W. Said baby having been taken out by Noreen, an elder sister, from whom it had been snatched by a tall man with a long, black beard. Noreen, according to the Daily Mail reporter, being a child of ten years and her memory and tale confused and contradictory.

O'Flynn saw nothing of all this and heard nothing of it, for his rapid cash and panel practice brought no gossipers to his consulting room. The only report that reached him was a scrawl from Margaret received next evening, four words in pencil on a half sheet of note paper: "She's took to it."

He left it at that, well satisfied to leave it at that, and days passed and a week slipped by and a week on top of that, till one Friday Norah burst in on him.

"That baby," said Norah, "it's Mrs. McGinnis' down in Conway street!"

"What baby?" asked O'Flynn, who was in his shirt sleeves unpacking some drugs.

"What baby—why, the child you took off to Miss Corkran's! I heard be chance, not two minits ago, from Mrs. Strahane, when I went to get the pitatoes, and, says she, wid her big goggle eyes weighin' them out, 'That poor Mrs. McGinnis,' says she, 'never a word or whisper she's heard yet of her baby.' 'What baby?' says I. 'Why, the baby she lost,' says she, 'that was snatched from young Noreen by a big man with a black beard, bad cess to him, it and a tin of salmon the creature had bought and was fetchin' home to her mother—sure, where have you been that you haven't heard talk of it?'

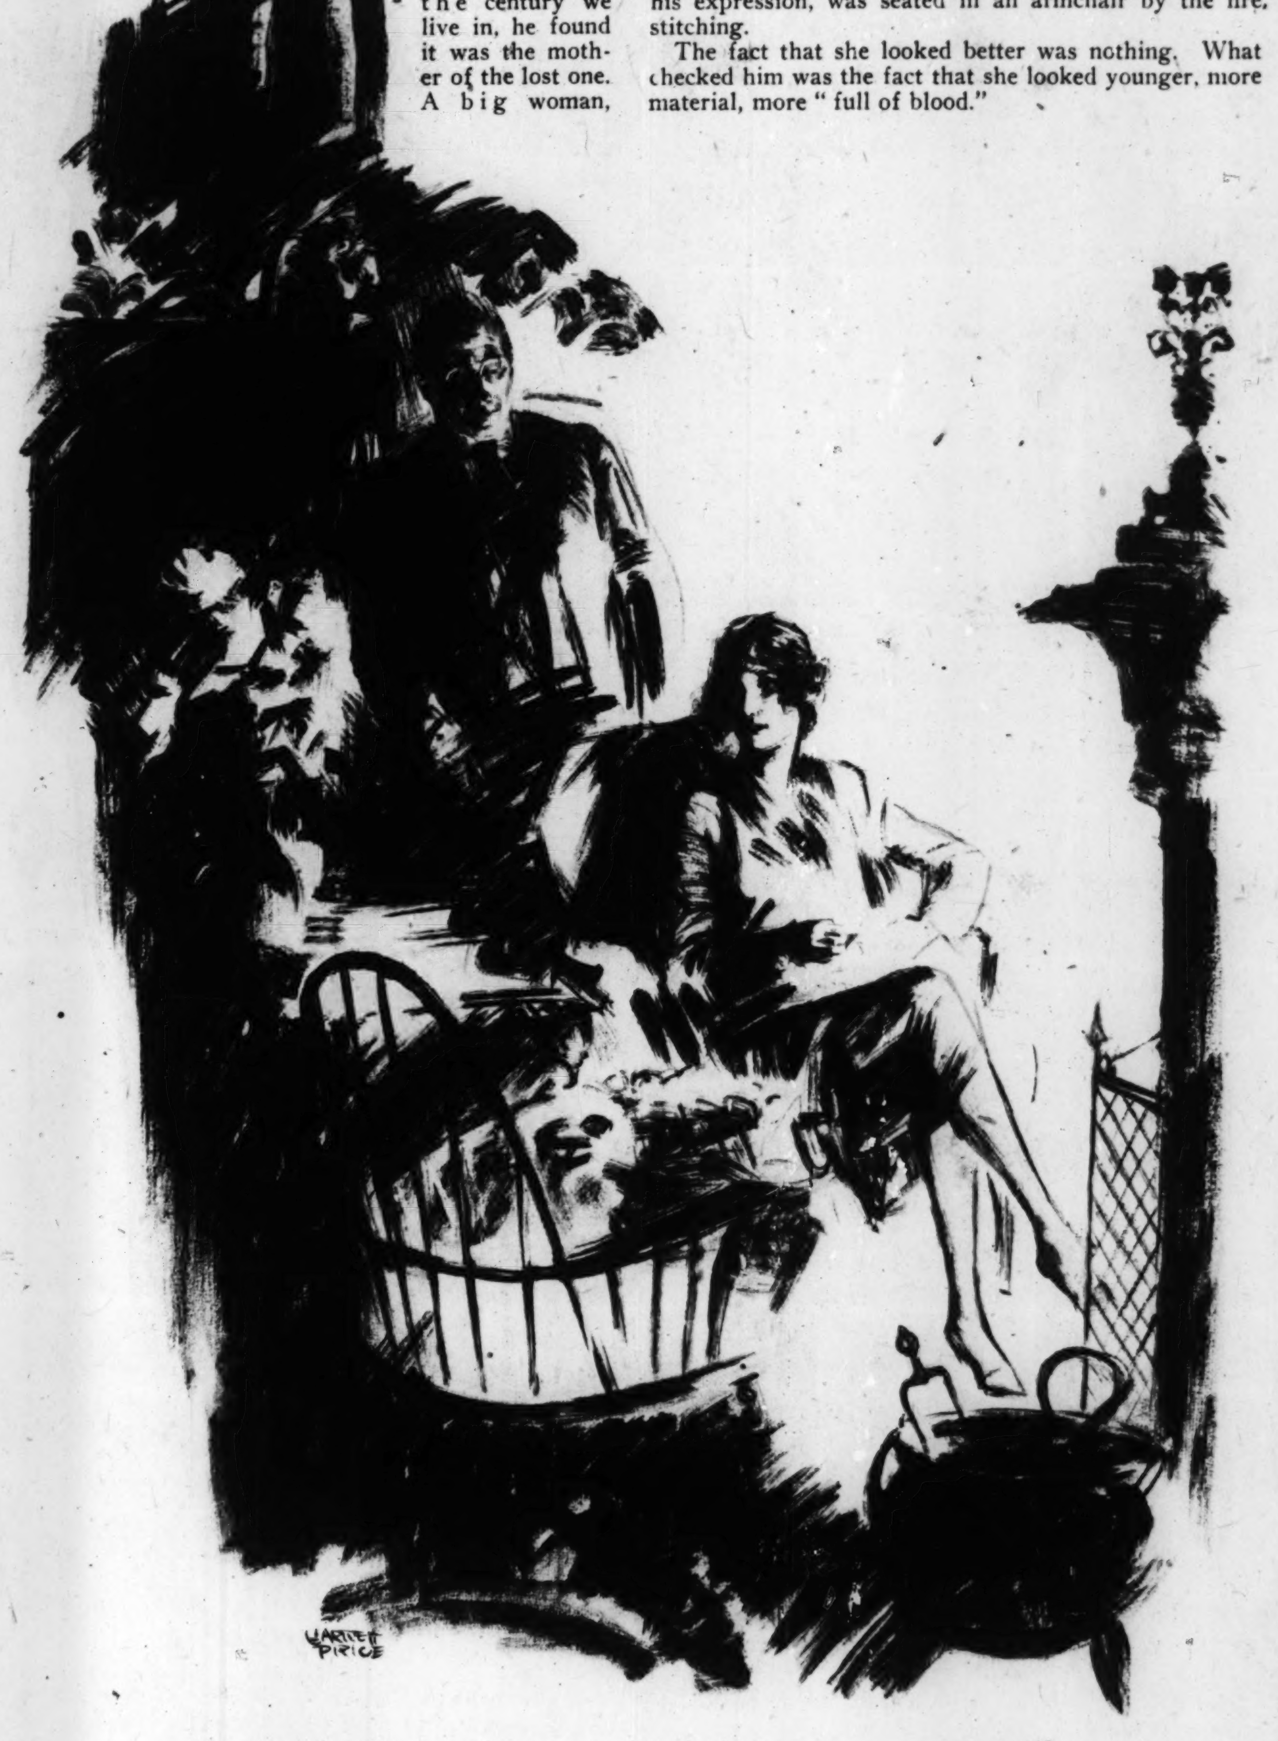
"'Mindin' me own business,' says I, 'and two more pitatoes in the pan, please, to turn the scale!' She and her goggle eyes, talkin' to distract me with her short weights—and back I come hotfoot to tell you."

O'Flynn scratched his head.

Somehow or another he was scarcely surprised; a subconscious buffer had been building itself up to take the shock.

"Conway street," said he, reviewing that Irish quarter, more Irish even than Sardinia street or Tamplin place. "Well, I'll be down that way this afternoon and I'll have a look. Maybe she's right and maybe she's wrong, but don't breathe a word to any one till I see what's doing."

There was a Mary McGinnis in his case book, and, sure enough, an hour or so later when he turned into Conway street, a place disgraceful to civilization, humanity, and the century we live in, he found it was the mother of the lost one. A big woman, pounding clothes in a washtub and surrounded by her tribe, happy to all appearances, vigorous, scolding, but breaking into a freshet of tears at the mention of the tragedy—whose other name was Pat.



What checked him was the fact that she looked younger, more material.

He gave her half a crown as a contribution to her sorrow, and then, singling out and attracting to himself Noreen, took her by the hand to the little corner shop to buy her some sweets.

Noreen, black haired and violet eyed and in old burst boots that belonged to an elder sister, had lied steadfastly, if not consistently, to all and sundry over this business, but she did not lie to O'Flynn. He had the way with him where women and children were concerned, and he had the whole story in two minutes under promise of secrecy.

She had been that fateful evening to Carter's to buy a tin of salmon, carrying Pat. She had planned to visit Naylor's front window in the street beyond to have a glimpse at the Christmas tree which was being exhibited, though it was nearly a month before Christmas, which she had seen once already and which she proposed to see every evening, if possible, just as people go again and again to see a play. But Carter's had kept her waiting a terrible long time, so long that only by running as hard as she could pelt could she do the business in hand and get back without the chance of a skelping.

But she couldn't run with Pat, so she stuck him in the doorway where she had played so often and which seemed quite safe, him and the salmon, and she hadn't been more than a minute looking into the window before she ran back to find Pat gone.

O'Flynn asked for no more, not even the genesis of the supposititious big man with the black beard. He knew. She had not dared to confess her crime. Pat had been "took" from her and invention had come to her aid. The big man with the black beard took all the scolding and skelping.

He left her happy with two ounces of licorice balls and a scarcely relieved mind, for she had come almost to believe in her own story. Then he turned north toward Cunningham Mansions.

Pat had got to be returned.

There were no two ways about that.

You can't knowingly rob a mother of a child, even though the mother is a Mrs. McGinnis and her habitat Conway street, W.

He arrived at Cunningham Mansions in a distinctly gruff mood. Margaret let him in. She was all smiles.

She showed him in without a word—a wonderful fact where she was concerned—showed him into the sitting room where Julia Corkran, her legs off the sofa, to use his expression, was seated in an armchair by the fire, stitching.

The fact that she looked better was nothing. What checked him was the fact that she looked younger, more material, more "full of blood."

He listened to her wonderful story of the poor mite that had been left at the door, scarce heeding, he knew the story so well; scarce listening, occupied almost entirely with the change in her, a change of which she herself seemed absolutely unconscious.

Then he followed her into her bedroom, where there was a fire, and where by her bedside stood a glorified cot, in which his majesty, Pat, filled with the finest of milk, was sleeping the sleep of the just.

A new hygienic feeding bottle was on the dainty dressing table; things were warming by the fire.

He took it all in and then, as he watched her bending over the cot, he took in the tremendous fact that he had made this woman a mother.

He had come to tell her the child belonged to another woman and had to be given back. He left without doing so. He could not bring himself to the words or the act. He told himself that he would just as soon take a pistol and shoot her, and then he told himself that, all the same, it had to be done.

This mental discussion took place as he came along New Oxford street in the direction of where he lived.

His mind, made agile by the stimulus of the business, sought hither and thither for an avenue out of this perplexity. Maybe Mrs. McGinnis would consent to part—or at all events, stand off and adopt an attitude of benevolent neutrality for the child's sake.

The contrast of the Corkran flat and the McGinnis menage appeared before him, deluding him for a moment to believe that no woman in her sane mind would rob the child of its present and prospective advantages.

For a moment only. He knew the poor and he knew his people. He knew that if Pat were to be discovered in Buckingham Palace, in the monkey house of the zoo or the children's ward of the workhouse infirm[illegible], it would be all the sa[illegible] to Mrs. McGinnis. She did not want a future that she could not visualize for the child. She wanted Pat.

There was nothing wrong about Conway street to Mrs. McGinnis, who lived ther all her married life—nothing but the absence of Pat.

No. There was only one way out—restitution—and arrived home, he called Norah down, closed the door of the sitting room, and opened his mind.

Norah had to do the business; it was a woman's business, anyhow. She could see Margaret and have a talk with her, and between them they could break it to the poor creature.

Norah did not like the thing a bit, but she assented. She never said a word to show her feelings. She wa that sort.

"I'll go when I've done me cookin'," said Norah. And she went.

She was back just before O'Flynn had returned from his evening round, back and sitting in the kitchen with a shawl over her head.

"I couldn't find it in me heart to do it," wailed Norah before he spoke a word. "I couldn't find it in me heart to do it. It's the life and all he is to her, and she wid her beautiful face like the Blessed Virgin hangin' over him. Sure, what's Mrs. McGinnis, lettin' him run wild about the shtreets wid that girul? Hasn't she enough childer not to be botherin' about the cratur? You tould me yourself the place was like a warren wid them. Childer or not, she can stick. Hand nor foot will I li for her to fetch him back."

"Then," said the doctor, "I'll just have to fetch him myself."

"Not you," said Norah, suddenly divesting herself of the shawl and furiously addressing herself to the peeling of some potatoes waiting in a bowl.

She was right in a way. As things were standing O'Flynn would never have had the heart to do the business. But things were not going to stand like that.

It was next day at noon that he received a note from Margaret, the gist of which ran:

> "For the Lord's sake, come at once. Her aunt, Miss Hancock, has called, and won't believe her. She's here now and I'm keeping her till you come, though maybe she won't believe you, either.
>
> "MARGARET DRISCOLL."

O'Flynn whistled. In their simple mindedness neither he, Margaret, nor Julia had ever thought of this

If she wouldn't believe Julia and Margaret, she certainly would not believe him.

He said this to himself as he got into his overcoat and put on his hat. Then, feeling like a man who holds the ace and queen and knows the king is out, he got into a cab and drove to fetch Mrs. McGinnis.

The routing of Miss Hancock though a most satisfactory business was spoiled for the visitors by the conduct of their ally.

Mrs. McGinnis, despite O'Flynn's fine words and promises and despite Julia's fears, refused to part with Pat. She took him away with her wrapped in a blanket. She showered blessings on all and sundry from the angels down; but to the suggestion that he should be "left for a bit" she was deaf, and to Julia's tears she was blind. She was, in fact, in the mental condition of a cat who has just recovered a kitten. Her one instinct was to carry him off—and she did.

O'Flynn walked home followed by the vision of Julia.

"I've just got to write to her and tell her the truth," said he to himself; and, sure enough, that evening when the patients were done with, down he sat to the most difficult job he had ever undertaken, for he found when he came to the business that he had to tell her the truth on more points than one.

His heart was moved in him. Julia, the friend and sometimes troublesome patient, had turned into something else.

It was that vision of her standing in her loneliness by the fire that did it—though maybe it had been creeping on him for a long time, this new feeling so impossible to express fully in words.

"I didn't know when I left him on your doorstep I'd left my heart with him," wrote he, "but there it is for you to love and to hold or to kick with your foot." He pursed his lips in thought, then he went on and on, covering three sheets of paper and ending, "If you feel you want to say 'no,' don't say it, just send me a telegram with one word, 'impossible.' Send me it so I may get it before five o'clock tomorrow evening. If I hear nothing then I'll know it's all right and I will call and see you the day after tomorrow."

He sent Norah to Cunningham Mansions with this note.

Next day he went about his business as usual. Five o'clock found him in the Strand. He had seen the last of his patients an hour ago, but he couldn't go home yet—he went along looking at the shop windows till he reached Charing Cross, then he came slowly back.

Arrived home, he shut the hall door and came to the foot of the stairs:

"Norah," he called out, "has there been any telegram for me?"

"Telegram?" came Norah's voice. "No, sir; there's been nothin' but the ould rate collector botherin' to see you."

"God bless him!" said O'Flynn.

CROSSED WIRES BY John T. McCutcheon

THE STORY SO FAR:

A WEALTHY American family, the Craytons, meet a bogus count, Pierre de Barsac, in Paris. He tries to win Virginia, and her mother favors him, but Mr. Crayton is suspicious. A young American, Harry Rasher, accompanies them back to America. Virginia becomes interested in Rasher, but is shocked when he says he has been a truck driver. Rasher's real name is Bacon, and he is extremely rich. He takes a job with the Craytons as chauffeur. In New York Virginia invites De Barsac to accompany them on the motor trip home. They are held up and Rasher is wounded trying to protect Virginia. She thinks she loves him and her mother summons Mr. Crayton. Richard Wellborne is called by Rasher to take his place is chauffeur. Mr. Crayton is threatened with financial disaster. His wife offers to save him with her own fortune, but only if he will consent to Virginia's marriage with De Barsac. A mysterious credit of $600,000 is arranged for Mr. Crayton. Wellborne decides he can help Rasher best by diverting Virginia's attentions from the count to himself. Virginia is interested immediately, but she agrees to sacrifice herself and marry De Barsac, so her mother's money may save Mr. Crayton's fortune. Virginia sprains an ankle, and Wellborne carries her to their hotel. Wellborne suddenly finds himself deeply in love with Virginia, but determined to be loyal to Rasher, who also loves the girl, as Wellborne thinks. De Barsac borrows $28,000 from Mrs. Crayton after she has told him she wishes Virginia to marry him. Mr. Crayton consents to the marriage, but he warns his wife that if Virginia is unhappy Mrs. Crayton will be to blame.

INSTALLMENT XXIX.

Wells Plays John Alden.

VIRGINIA CRAYTON, left to herself after the momentous decision of her mother to announce her engagement to Count de Barsac, was torn by conflicting emotions. She didn't love the count and was certain she never could. If she married him, all that was beautiful in life would be over. She tried to imagine what such a union would be. He probably would treat her with kindness, but as for the companionable relationships which a happy marriage implied she knew she could not expect them. Her money would provide the means with which he could amuse himself in social activities far removed from the family hearth, and perhaps she might be glad to insure his absence at this price.

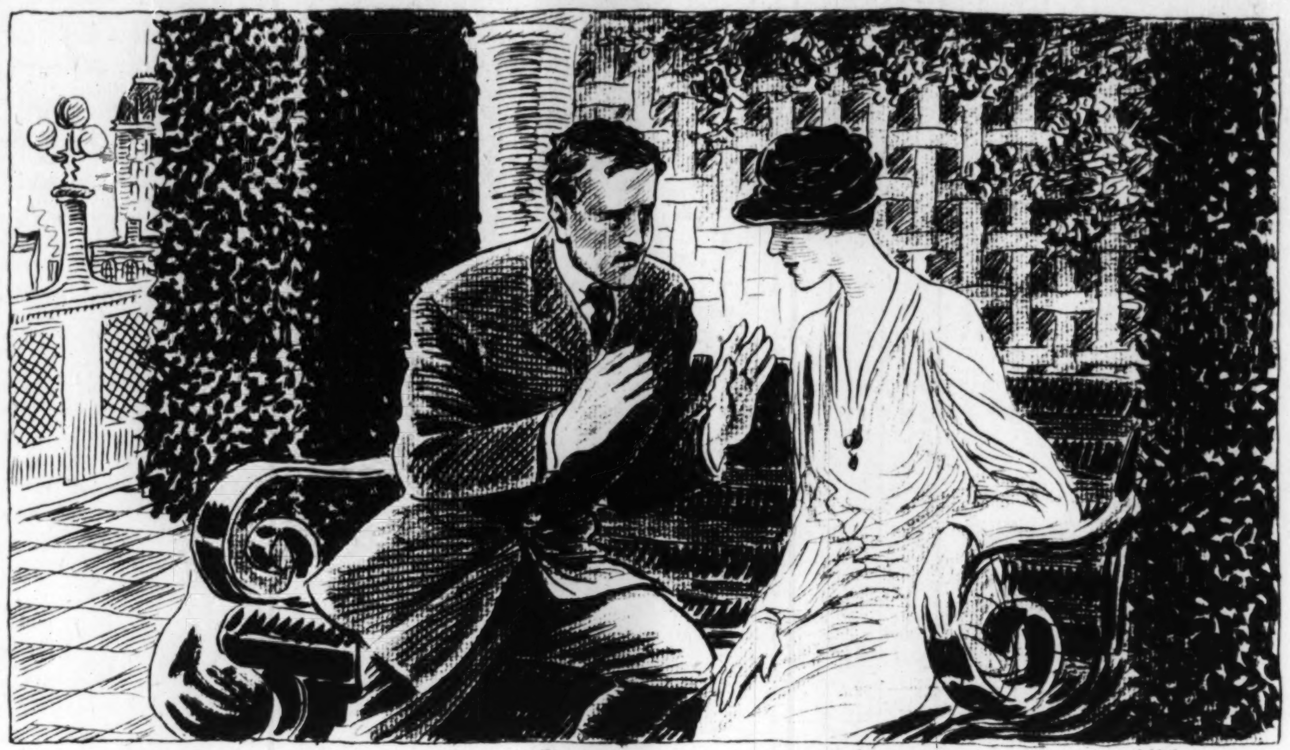
She had noted in the chatter of her girl friends a growing cynicism about the married state. "It's all right while the bloom lasts, but when you settle down to the dull routine, then's the time to look around." One of the younger girls had created a mild shock by proclaiming that "five years is enough with any one man."

Perhaps, reflected Virginia, even a marriage for love would in time slump into a monotonous routine with the thrill all gone. If this was true, then what did it matter who one married? Even a faithless Count, spending her money on other women, might at least be polite and courteous as long as his freedom of action was not curtailed.

On the other hand, a girl was entitled to hope for some of the thrill and beauty of a genuine, honest, all pervading love. This she could not expect in a commercial marriage such as would be the one with Count de Barsac. Her only gain would be the pleasure of being addressed as "countess," and the novelty of this would soon wear off.

Her thoughts turned wistfully to Wells. He, too, might be an adventurer, or at best an improvident son of good parents, but he had great charm of manner and a whimsical humor which was most appealing. Life with him would be delightful, at least until his restless spirit tired of the restraints and obligations of married life.

She thought of Rasher. There was an intriguing mystery about him, but she felt that he could never sweep a girl off her feet in a mad, impetuous wooing. He was more restrained and probably more dependable. Much of his charm lay in the mystery with which he had hedged himself, whether intentionally or from diffidence.



"It would be terrible! And think of Harry Rasher!"

But Wells—her eyes softened and she felt a quickening of her pulse. Why did the mere thought of him produce this clamor within her?

She resolved to see him. After her engagement was announced she could not do so. She must then say a definite farewell to the real interests of her heart and prepare for the martyrdom of marriage with De Barsac.

A chambermaid carried a note to Wells and in a surprisingly short time came the answer. It was a palpable evasion, an attempt to avoid seeing her alone. Instead of offending her, she smiled happily and sent another note. "I'll be waiting for you on the roof garden. Please come. I'll keep you only a few moments."

A few awkward steps which she negotiated on her injured ankle took her to the elevator, and presently she was on the roof garden, quite deserted at this time of day. Wells joined her a moment later. He was intensely serious and ill at ease.

Virginia held out her hand, but he affected not to see it. His eyes avoided hers—telltale signs which confirmed the girl's suspicions. He was in love with her, but for some reason did not wish to betray himself.

She indicated a place on the bench beside her and he sat down. They were screened from any chance waiter. From the streets came the subdued roar of traffic. The air was soft.

"One would suspect you were afraid of me," she challenged, smiling. And as he did not respond, she added, "I wanted to thank you for your help with my twisted ankle. There has not been a chance to tell you how really grateful I am—unless I made the chance myself. That's why I sent for you." Her voice trembled slightly as she continued, "There may not be another chance." He shot a look of startled dismay at her—an illuminating look, she observed—and then subsided into a deeper dejection than before.

"I don't want you to think I am ungrateful."

"I could not think that, Miss Crayton," he said, in a low voice. "I simply thought I'd better not see you again—alone."

"And why?"

"I think you know."

VIRGINIA made no comment to this—mute evidence that she did know. It made it all the harder to say the next words, but she steeled herself to utter them.

"Mr. Wells, my mother——" she paused and added lamely, "I don't know why I am telling you this—my mother is preparing to announce my engagement to Count de Barsac.

"No!" He sat bolt upright, panic and consternation in his eyes. His restraint was gone.

"O, Miss Crayton, don't, please don't! He isn't good enough for you. It would be terrible! And think of Harry Rasher!"

"Rasher? What do you mean?"

"Why, Rasher is a million times a better man than that—than Count de Barsac. Rasher is a prince, if there ever was one. And you are thinking of passing him up for this—pardon me, Miss Crayton, I can hardly trust myself to speak of him. But surely you don't—you can't care for De Barsac? I can't believe you do." Virginia was awed by his earnestness.

"You speak of Rasher. Why?" she asked. "Mr. Rasher has never shown any interest in me—any real interest. He has been nice—and he did me a great service. I'm not forgetting that. But he has said nothing which might indicate more than a friendly interest."

"O," exclaimed Wells, loyally, "he felt, he must have felt, he was not in a position to, you know. He was your chauffeur—how could a chauffeur declare himself without risking grave offense for his presumption?"

Virginia's eyes twinkled with mischief.

"And can't chauffeurs have interests, and is there any law against declaring them?" she asked, banteringly.

"Please don't, Miss Crayton. I'm miserable enough without that." And then, as though fearing he was getting on dangerous ground, he quickly resumed pleading the cause of his friend Rasher.

"I can't tell you, Miss Crayton, all about Rasher. He is my friend, and if you knew him as well as I do, you would realize how infinitely better and cleaner he is than this count. We went to coll—that is, we've been friends a long time. I'll be sorry to offend you, but Rasher knows all about De Barsac, and he's no good—absolutely. Marriage to such a man would be a frightful mistake. Please believe me, I know what I am talking about." In his earnestness he seized her hand and she did not withdraw it.

"And so you are pleading the cause of your friend Rasher. He must be very nice to inspire such friendship. You must like him a great deal."

"I do," he exclaimed tensely and with an unconcious pressure of her hand that made her wince.

Covered with confusion, he dropped her hand as though it were a hot coal. "O, pardon me. I didn't realize what I was doing." They were both blushing furiously.

"Has Mr. Rasher authorized you to be his special advocate?"

"Well, no—not exactly. He sent me along to try to prevent, if possible, your engagement to this Count—and I naturally assumed the reason to be that he cared for you himself. I don't see how he could help caring."

"Thank you. That's very nice. But suppose I tell you that I like your friend very much, but that I do not love him. What then?"

"What then!" echoed Wells. "Why, simply that you don't really know him—know what a fine chap he is." He hesitated. There was a temptation to tell her who Rasher really was, but he refrained. If Rasher loved her he would want to win her love for himself and not for his fortune

Virginia was regarding him through half closed eyes, misty and eloquent. Wells read in them a message that could not be mistaken, and with a sigh of despair he hurriedly arose. He could not trust himself further. He must rush away before the madness of the instant swept away all thoughts of loyalty to a friend.

She arose quickly and stood facing him. Both were intensely solemn. Wells' eyes fell before her glance, and thereafter he talked with eyes averted.

"Please, Miss Crayton! Don't do this dreadful thing. Don't announce your engagement—at least not for a day or two. I'm going to wire and have Rasher come at once."

In a panic of emotion he brushed her hand in what was meant to be a handshake and forgetting that politeness demanded that he help her to the elevator, he rushed away. A flood of happiness filled Virginia's eyes—followed by a look of crushed despair. She sank upon the bench and buried her face in her hands.

Wells did not pause in his headlong flight until he had reached the telegraph desk and had sent a wire to Rasher:

"Come at once, dead or alive."

THE BLACK ABBOT by Edgar Wallace

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

HARRY, LORD CHELFORD, occupies Fossaway Manor with his half-brother, Dick. Chelford is engaged to Leslie Gwyn, whose brother, Arthur, is his solicitor. Dick engages a detective, Puttler, to investigate the appearance of the Black Abbot, supposed to haunt the estate. Some one fires several shots at Leslie. The hidden Chelford treasure is sought by Gwyn and by his clerk, Fabrian Gilder. Gwyn discharges Gilder. The latter, writing with vanishing ink, promises to marry Mary Wenner, Chelford's former secretary, if she will lead him to the treasure. The girl restores the letter to legibility after it fades. A masked figure frightens Gilder and Mary from the hidden treasure room in the abbey. Later Gilder finds the cylinders, supposedly filled with gold, have been removed, except one, which contains a priceless missal. Leslie, in love with Dick, breaks her engagement to Chelford. Gwyn has gambled away Leslie's fortune of £250,000 and £50,000 of Chelford's securities. Gilder proposes to Leslie, offering to square Arthur's accounts if she will marry him. Thomas, an ex-convict who had been a footman for Chelford, is found slain. Chelford disappears.

ARTHUR steals a blank check for £50,000 with which Gilder meant to square his debts, and tricks Gilder into giving him a letter promising him a loan of that sum. Then Arthur flees to Paris. Leslie vanishes during the night. She is taken to the secret rooms in the abbey by Chelford, whom she finds stark mad. Leslie manages to lock and bar a door leading from Chelford's quarters to hers. On the road Dick loses a bag containing the habit of the Black Abbot. It is picked up by Gilder, who charges that Dick is the Black Abbot. But when Gilder opens the bag to prove his charge, the Abbot's habit has disappeared.

INSTALLMENT XVIII.

Dick Faces Death.

A HIGH official from Scotland Yard had arrived and was interviewing Dick in the library.

"I am wholly responsible. I have always known my brother was queer, and about a year ago I was certain that the horrible taint of madness which his poor mother transmitted to him was developing in a way which could only have one end. I begged of him to see a medical man, but he hated doctors. I brought down the best alienists from London in various guises, sometimes as bailiffs, and occasionally as prospective buyers of our property, but in their presence he behaved so rationally that it was impossible to get a certificate.

"My own position was a very delicate one. I am, as you know, the heir to the property. Any step I took meant that the estate came into my hands, and that eventually, when poor Harry died, as one doctor told me he must die in a few years, I should be branded with the stigma of having put him away, and I was anxious to save the family name. My chief anxiety was that he should never marry."

"Wasn't it easy enough to take the girl into your confidence?"

Dick was silent for a while.

"No, in this case. There were reasons why——"

And the official, dimly understanding, changed the subject.

"Then you were the Black Abbot?"

"Mostly," confessed Dick. "My brother was terrified of the Abbot and would never go out if there was a rumor that the Black Abbot was about. I was especially anxious to keep him in the house, where, under my eye, there was no chance for him to indulge in these extraordinary paroxysms that have really alarmed the countryside. The man whom the villagers feared, and whom they call the Black Abbot, is really Harry. I was a very silent Black Abbot," he smiled faintly, "and I had no other purpose than to keep Harry indoors. I'm going to say I did not always succeed."

"I'm afraid the truth will have to come out now," said the official, shaking his head.

"I wish it had come out last week," replied Dick bitterly.

"Do you think your brother is responsible for the disappearance of Miss Gwyn?"

"Undoubtedly. He must have attracted her to the window and persuaded her to come down into the grounds. He was very plausible; no man would dream that he was not sane, only I, who have seen——" he drew a long breath—"what I have seen. I'll tell you this, Colonel," he said, with sudden vehemence, "not all the lordship of Chelford, not all the estates, not even the Chelford treasure, would make me live again my life of the last five years! There are times," he said, his voice trembling with passion, "when I feel I would like to dig up the Abbey and scatter its stones in the dust, raze this house to the ground, and turn the place into a public park." He laughed at his own excess. "I am talking like an idiot. This place belongs to a family that knows not Harry. He is just a terrible accident. My dear mother often told me how worried my father was about Harry, his queer, secretive ways. And yet in a way he is a sportsman, one of the best shots in England as a boy, a great runner, and a wonderful fellow over a country, until about eight years ago, when this treasure bug got into his brain and he shut himself away from us all and gave his mind and his soul to this wild chase."

"The gold?"

Dick shook his head.

"No," he said. "If it were only the gold, that would have been an intelligent interest in life."

He described Harry's search for the elixir, the famous Life Water of which the ancient Chelford had written in his diary.

"It is probably no more than a flask of a native wine—Arac or the like," said Dick. "Poor Harry!"

MISS WENNER had intended leaving by the early morning train, but had changed her mind. Possibly the arrival of Fabrian Gilder had been a factor. She had one solution for Leslie's disappearance.

"Have you searched the Abbey? she asked, not once, but a dozen times.

Dick was weary; the Abbey had been his first thought. He had suspected this was Harry's hiding place, and with his own hands had taken a basket of provisions for him, but this, he saw, was untouched.

There was one possibility about the underground cavern, and that was the second door, and he had ordered the blacksmith and his assistant to be at the stone tower at two o'clock that afternoon, with instruments, one of which had to be procured from London.

The presence of Miss Wenner was not as distasteful to Gilder as he thought it would have been. To use a phrase of childhood, she was "on his side." In very truth, Miss Wenner was on anybody's side if they happened to be agreeable to her.

They were walking through the rosary before lunch, and certainly the trend of Mary Wenner's remarks was very comforting to a man who had been so badly rebuffed.

"If I had my way, Fabrian dear" (she assumed all the rights and privileges of an engagement which was somewhat illusory and he made only a feeble resistance), "If I had my way I'd put you in charge of this case. After all, you are the very man to solve this mystery, and I must say you could have knocked me down with a feather when you told me you were fifty—you don't look a day more than thirty—and you've got experience, you're a lawyer, you're up to all kinds of artfulness——"

"Not to all kinds," said Gilder with a grim recollection of a certain blank check.

"Well, to most kinds," conceded Miss Wenner. "And what are they all doing? This Dick Alford and this so-called detective? They're just standing around, scratching their heads, whilst you could go, as it were, to the real heart of the mystery. Don't deny it—I'm sure you would, Fabe."

"Don't call me Fabe, Mary," he asked gently. "If you want to call me by my Christian name, let us have all the three syllables."

"You're a man of the world, Fabrian" (she accentuated the word as she would have done "Mary Ann"). You understand the ins and outs of everything. Why don't they come to you like men and say, 'Mr. Gilder, what is your opinion of this mystery?' Instead of which, they don't so much as ask you if you've got a mouth!"

"Perhaps they know that," said Gilder in good humor.

He lifted his head suddenly, a frown on his face. He had heard a shot; more than a shot, the whirr and whine of a bullet.

"What—"

Something fell at his feet with a "plop!" He saw a little hole, and, stooping, dug out a bullet with his fingers.

"Where on earth did that come from?"

DICK had heard the shot and was running across the lawn.

"Did-you——" he began.

Plop!

They heard it again, and presently Dick saw leaves fall from a laurel bush and heard the thud of an impact. One of the police who were still patrolling the grounds shouted to him, but he could not hear what he was saying, and raced across to him. Nearer at hand, he saw that the man was pointing to the ruins.

"It came from there," shouted the constable, and Dick changed direction.

He was flying up the slope when the third shot sounded, and this time he located it with fair accuracy. Somebody was shooting from the tower.

Happily, he had made preparations for the blacksmith's visit and there was an assortment of lanterns near the entrance. He stopped long enough to light one, and, slipping back the catch with his knife, he pushed aside the stone corner piece and ran down the stairs. The room was empty. He tried the mystery door; that, too, was closed. Somebody shouted his name from the landing above and he answered:

"Come down, Gilder. There's nobody here."

Gilder descended the steps gingerly and looked round with his keen, shrewd eyes. And then he remembered and pointed to the slab.

"Have you tried that? I meant to tell you before."

"What is it?"

"I don't know, but I rather think that the stone turns on a pivot. If that is the case, there are pretty stout supports underneath that will want cutting through."

Gilder sprawled flat on the floor, his ear to the crack.

"There's nothing there that is audible," he said. "Can't you smell anything?"

He put his nose to the crack.

"There's a petrol light burning down there, or else it has been burning recently."

Flat on his face, Dick sniffed.

"Yes," he said, and called: "Leslie!"

There was no answer. He called again, with a like result.

Gilder went up the stairs and searched amongst the tools that had been brought in readiness for the afternoon's investigation. He selected two saws and a second lantern, and, lighting this, he descended to Dick's side.

Throwing off his coat, he rolled up his sleeves. The thin blade of the saw worked down between the stones and after a while he began sawing gingerly.

"It's wood," he said. "You'll find yours is the same."

The wood was like rock, and both men were hot before they had half sawn through the support. Presently Dick drew out his saw. He had gone through the oak and had heard the loose end fall below. A few seconds later Gilder's saw passed through the last obstruction. Gingerly he put his foot on the edge and pressed down, and the stone trap swung open.

They looked down into a dark vault; and now the smell of the burning lamp was very pungent. Dick lowered the lantern and peered down. He could see no sign of human life. He caught a view of the end of a bed, a table, and, on the floor, a rifle. He reached the bottom and, swinging his lantern round, called.

"Leslie!"

A mocking echo came back to him from the little cavern at the far end of the apartment.

HE called again, his voice hoarse with anxiety. He had seen two little shoes by the side of the bed. Her hat was on the floor, crushed into a shapeless mass. Picking up the rifle, he felt the barrel; it was still warm, and under the tower there were four empty cartridge cases. And then, holding his lantern high, he saw the rungs in the rough face of the wall, and jumped to the conclusion that she had escaped that way. Within a minute he leapt up, caught the lower run and ran up the ladder to the top, oblivious to one or two ominous cracks as his man weight came upon the old ironwork. The grille at the top stopped him. He had seen it, but thought it might be movable.

"They couldn't have gone that way," he said breathlessly as he came down to the ground.

"Then where on earth have they gone?" Gilder asked irritably.

They searched every inch of the long room, pulled the bed from the wall, but beneath was solid stone pavement. The table seemed fastened to the floor; they could not move it.

"Do you notice anything about this floor?" Gilder asked suddenly. "It is not level."

Gilder went in search of a hammer, and the two, now reinforced by Puttler and the Scotland Yard man, went over every inch of the wall and flooring, tapping and sounding. They struck no hollow place. The four men took hold of the side of the table and tried to drag it from its foundations, but they might as well have tried to move the wall itself. It had a thick oaken base, from which ran three pillars supporting the enormously heavy top.

It was very clear to Dick what had happened. The girl had been attacked, and, having discovered this opening to the sky, had procured a rifle by some means and had fired up the shaft to attract attention. Then she had been overcome and—what?

The water ran down through a crevice in the solid rock about six or eight inches wide. It was impossible that any human being could have gone down that narrow slit, but, to make sure, he had the edges of the water-worn rock broken away. The blacksmith by this time was waiting above. Dick had him brought down with his tools; the second door might yield some sort of solution.

For half an hour they worked with jacks and levers and presently, with a deafening crack, the lock parted and the door was pushed open. There was revealed a room similar in shape and size to that which Mary Wenner had discovered, with this exception: that there were no stone benches and in the center of the apartment was a circular hole. Dick knelt by the side and held down his lantern; he heard the faint 'clug' of water, and saw the light reflected at a considerable depth.

"Well, there's nothing there," said Gilder, peering over.

Dick tied his lantern to the end of a cord and let it slowly down to the depths. Thirty feet below, as near as he could judge, the bottom of the lantern touched water. The old builders had builded splendidly. The green, weed-grown sides of the well seemed intact. And then his heart almost stood still. A hand was thrust out, seemingly from the solid brickwork of the well; a white hand on which flashed and sparkled a single diamond that he knew well. And from below he heard a muffled voice and in his agitation the cord which held the lantern slipped from his hand into the water.

He cursed aloud in his rage at his own criminal carelessness.

"Give me the other lantern!" he called, and, pulling the other hand over hand, he untied it and flung it aside, fastening in its place the lighted storm lamp that Puttler handed to him. "And get a rope—quickly!"

But there was no rope nearer than Fossaway Manor, and he fumed in his impatience and would have made an attempt to slip down the treacherous sides of the well if Puttler had not restrained him.

After an eternity one of the detectives came running back carrying a rope and, dropping the free end, they fastened the other to a crowbar and placed this across the open doorway. Dick slipped down the rope, the handle of the lantern between his teeth. The sides were wet and slimy and presently he came to the place where he had seen the girl's hand.

It was a small airhole about six inches by four. He tried to look through with the aid of his lamp, but he could see nothing but a rough rock wall. He called the girl by name, but no answer came and the word "Leslie" came echoing back from the interior.

And now he saw that these little apertures occurred at regular intervals. The first two were hidden by overhanging water weeds, but from below they were visible. Some sort of natural stone gallery existed on the other side of this stone work, and he remembered having heard at some remote period that the Abbey had been built upon an early English catacomb. In all probability each of those apertures represented a distinct "landing" or a place where some natural winding staircase touched the wall in its revolutions.

He had made a rough loop for his foot, and they passed him down a crowbar at the end of a cord. With this he attacked the hole in the wall, but found himself engaged in an impossible task. Nothing short of an explosive could blow these holes larger. He was almost exhausted by his efforts, and they had to haul him to the top for a rest. Puttler was anxious to go down, but Dick insisted upon being lowered again. This time he took with him a rod, to the end of which a small electric bulb had been attached. The flex ran along the rod, which was a bamboo cane, and terminated in a small battery in his pocket. He switched on the light and pushed the bulb through the opening. He could see now that the wall, which he thought was natural rock, had been roughly hewn, but he could not see the floor, nor more than a foot in either direction. Withdrawing the rod, he put in his hand and felt around, but could touch nothing but the outer facing of the well.

"Look out!"

The warning shout was Gilder's and came from above. He drew out his hand quickly.

"Away from the wall—push with your feet!" yelled Gilder.

He had a glimpse of a grimy hand thrust out from one of the square airholes, saw the flicker of steel, and felt the rope giving as strand after strand was slashed. Then, with a crack, the rope parted, and he went down, down, until the bitterly cold waters engulfed him.

He struck the bottom with his feet and paddled up to the surface again. He was instantly chilled to the marrow. He saw the lantern come down towards him, and heard Gilder say:

"Hold to the cord just enough to keep you afloat."

Dumbly he obeyed. His eyes were fixed on the airhole. So, too, were the eyes of Puttler, who, flat on the ground, his head and shoulders over the edge, covered with his revolver the place where the hand had emerged.

The cut end of the rope was passed down to him. By reaching up he could just grip it, but not sufficiently to obtain a sure purchase. Cramp had attacked his legs. The paralyzing coldness of the water was astounding, and in one moment of fear it seemed that his life was to end miserably in this dark hole. There was no foothold on either side, and unless help came quickly he knew he could no longer keep his senses.

Almost within reach was the lowest of the small apertures, but it did not seem worth while to reach for that. The cord of the lantern served to keep him afloat, the warmth of the burning wick was the only comfort he had.

"Dick!" He heard his name whispered with a fierce intensity. "Dick, take my hand!"

It came out of the lower airhole, and with an effort he reached and found his wrist gripped. And then his senses left him.

When he came to himself he was lying in the open air; the warmth of the sun's rays made him sleepy.

"Where is Leslie?" he asked, struggling up on his elbow.

They looked at him blankly, thinking that he was in a delirium.

"How did I get out?"

"Gilder went down for you when he saw you drop."

"But Leslie caught me by the wrist," he said wildly. "She was there—didn't you see her, Puttler?"

Puttler shook his head.

"I saw you holding on to the side just as the new rope came and Gilder went down for you."

Dick was ghastly.

"You didn't see her? You didn't hear her?"

Struggling to his feet, he passed his hand wearily across his forehead. Had he been dreaming? Was that part of the delirium of the death that nearly overtook him? But he was sure, as positive as of any human experience he had had—Leslie's hand had come out from the wall and caught him by the wrist.

. . . . . .

Leslie had no doubt that the wooden bar would hold. She could afford to sit, covering her ears to shut out the hideous noise above, until his paroxysm had subsided. It must have been in such a mad fury as this, after the killing of Thomas, that he had wreaked destruction upon his room before. In a sudden fit of panic he had got out of the window, and, taking his books from the library (she saw the torn and soiled pillowcase in which he had packed them), had escaped to this lair of his. She took her hand from her ears; he was moaning dreadfully, but somehow she could endure that. Fortunately, she had put on her wrist watch when she dressed, and this marked the passage of the hours. Noon came. There would be people about the estate now, though it was not likely that Dick would come again to the ruins unless he was attracted there.

The plan she had made she now proceeded to put into execution. Standing under the shaft, she fired a round into the air. The third shot struck the iron grille and ricochetted with an angry buzz that sounded like the drone of a bee. No sound came from the room above. If she could only attract Dick to the ruins she could indicate her position. But Harry had a rifle! She went cold at the thought. She may have lured him to his death.

For one mad moment she thought of opening the trap and forcing her way out at the point of the rifle. But it was too late now. And then she heard his voice, sounding hollowly and faintly.

"Leslie!"

She went up one of the steps so that she could hear him better.

"They're coming, Leslie. You will tell them I haven't hurt you, won't you?"

"Yes, yes," she replied eagerly.

He said nothing after that, until there came a shuffling and stamping of feet above her head, and then she heard him say:

"Hullo, Dick, old man! I hope I haven't given you any trouble."

From below she heard a deep rumble of sound which might have been a voice, but in her eagerness she was tugging at the oaken support, and in another second the stone fell behind her and she scrambled up through the trap. She could see nothing; the place was in darkness.

"Dick!" she called.

And then a hand gripped her, and she realized with horror that all the shufflings of feet and the conversation had been so much acting on his part.

She was still holding the rifle, but before she could raise it he had gripped the stock and wrenched it from her hand. She heard it fall with a clatter on the stone floor below.

"We are going below, my sweet," he whispered in her ear. "At last I know the truth! So it was Dick you wanted! Dear Dick!"

HE was chuckling softly to himself as he carried her to the top of the steps.

"Will you walk down or must I throw you?" he asked, in a tone so even and rational that he might have been uttering some commonplace of everyday life.

With trembling knees, she walked down the steps into the lighted room, and he followed, pausing to close the trap and secure it firmly.

"Sit down." He pointed to the settee by the table and immediately she sat down. Her face was ghastly; her last reserves of courage were almost sapped. "You have hurt me beyond forgiveness, Leslie," he said, his solemn eyes fixed on hers. "Do you realize what you have done? You have treated with contempt Harry Alford, Eighteenth Earl of Chelford, Viscount of Carberry, Baron Alford. You have attempted to endanger my life; you have conspired with those who hate me; you have treacherously held communication with and given comfort to my enemies."

There were other charges, that would have sounded ludicrous at other times, would have aroused her to fury, but she listened now, husbanding all her strength for the coming struggle.

"For you," he said, in tones of deepest gravity, "there can be only one punishment—death!"

His voice trembled. She felt that, in his queer, crazy way, he was sorry for her, and regretted the necessity. She tried to rise, but her limbs refused her office. She put out an appealing hand, and then, with a sudden leap, he was on her. His hand closed about her throat, strangling the scream. And then, up above, there was the unmistakable sound of footsteps and a deep voice. It was Dick. She tried to call out, but he held her tight. With one hand he reached over and extinguished the lamp; and now, in a final desperation of fear, she threw him backward and for a second he released his hold.

But before her tortured throat could utter a sound he was at her again; pressing her back against the edge of the table. She tore at his hand, but it was immovable. This was death! A loud ringing in her ears, a fiery light before her eyes; she was losing consciousness . . . and then she felt the table move, at first slowly and then so rapidly that she lost her balance. The big refectory table was sliding lengthways toward the end wall. His grip relaxed and in that instant he dropped away from her, and, reaching out her hand, she could feel nothing. She heard a thud and a groan and stepped forward — into space. She did not see the yawning cavern before her. One desperate effort she made to recover her balance, caught at the hard edge of the floor as she fell and went slipping and sliding down stairs that cracked and broke beneath her until her feet struck something soft and yielding. Overhead there was a deep, rumbling sound, a soft thud, and silence.

Harry was unconscious. She felt his face and her fingers touched something warm and wet.

She could see nothing; the darkness was impenetrable. No sound came from the room from which she had fallen. The floor was thick, the heavy oaken base of the refectory table gliding, she guessed, on rollers that worked as truly as they had when, hundreds of years before, the Black Abbots found this exit so valuable, had slipped back into its place. If she only had some sort of light! It occurred to her to search the unfortunate Harry. Presently she found a silver box containing matches. She struck one and looked around. They were lying at the foot of what had once been a wooden stair. The treads were broken, the heavily carved handrail had rotted, leaving two wide gaps. Half the treads had vanished, the other half were now broken by her fall.

Harry's eyes were closed, his lips bloodless, and through the grime his face was gray. With a gasp of horror she thought he was dead, but when she put her hand under his waistcoat she could feel the faint flutter of his heart. He had an electric torch somewhere in his pocket, he had told her, and she began to search. It necessitated moving him slightly and as she did so he groaned. The lamp was in the tail pocket of his frock coat.

She thought at first that the unconscious man carried two, but found that the second package was a spare battery. Switching on the light, she examined the roof above the broken stairs. She saw it was the underside of a slab of wood. From here she could see the rollers on which the table ran; stout things of wood. Near the head of the stairs two large wooden grips projected downwards, rather like the butts of huge pistols, and she guessed that by this means the table was drawn back from below.

When she looked at Harry again he was staring upward with wondering eyes.

"What happened?" he asked.

"We must have fallen through a trap," she said. "Do you think you could reach those handles?" She pointed to them.

He rose unsteadily to his feet, replaced his spectacles, which had been knocked off in his fall, and looked at the butts. Only two of the treads remained intact. He tried one, but it broke under his feet and the supporting posts were sagging.

"I can't reach that," he said. "It must be twelve feet high."

Then she noticed his wound and made him sit down while she dressed it with a strip of silk torn from her skirt.

"How on earth did we get into this beastly place?" he asked, wondering. "Where are we?"

"We're under the abbey," she said, and his frown ended in a grimace of pain.

"Where is Dick?" he asked.

"He is up there, I think," she said.

And yet why should Dick be there? He would not know his way into the lower chamber, she thought, with a sinking heart.

"Do you think you can walk?"

"I can walk all right, but whither?"

"Let us try the left hand passage first," she suggested, and he was agreeable.

The left hand passage, they found, was a steep ascent which turned continuously to the left.

At the first turn she stopped. She had seen a glimmer of light, and, making an inspection, she found a square hole, cut apparently in the rock; the farther end was covered with hanging weeds, and through these she saw the light distinctly, a faint yellow glow. They continued their climb, and presently came to another small opening. Here, then, was one of the sources of air supply, though little came this way, for when she lit a match before it the flame scarcely wavered.

"How much farther are we going?" asked Harry faintly. "I'm nearly all in."

"We must go on," she said. "This probably brings us to the open air somewhere."

He put his hand on her shoulder, and, walking slowly, they made another complete turn of the winding passage and this time they found an air hole that was not weed covered. The light was stronger now, and, looking through, she thought she saw a swaying cord. And she heard something, too—voices. It was not an illusion; somebody was talking at an immense distance away, it seemed. She looked again. The cord seemed very near, but when she thrust her hand through the opening and tried to grasp it she knew that she had been the victim of an optical illusion. She called out but there was no answer. She must have imagined the voices.

And then she heard a faint shout and the yellow light which had shone through the entrance went out.

"I can't go any farther." Harry collapsed against the wall and slid down into a sitting position, his head on his breast.

"Do you mind if I leave you in the dark?" she asked.

He shook his head wearily, and, leaving him, she continued the climb, and presently found herself in a straight, narrow passage. At some period an attempt had been made to dress the sides with stone slabs. The wall was littered with crumbling fragments of stone and gaps showed where age and the action of the damp had detached the dressing from the walls. As near as she could judge, she was moving away from the abbey in the direction of Fossaway Manor.

This latter was a guess. It was impossible that it could lead towards the cut road to the north of the estate. Then the explanation came to her; she was passing under The Mound, the high bank that fringed the Ravensrill. Right across the passage a wall had been built; a solid barrier of masonry which checked all further movement.

THOUGH she did not know and could not guess, here was the obstacle that the revengeful Lord of Chelford had set up after his assassin had gone forth to slay the man who had dishonored him. No more would the light steps of frail womanhood trip along this secret passage and since Yvonne of Chelford had died of a broken heart no woman's foot had stirred this dust.

Leslie turned back, her courage failing. Approaching the spot where she had left Harry, she heard his soft chuckle and her skin crept.

"Leslie, Leslie!" he whispered eagerly. "You have no idea what a bit of good luck I've had!"

And when he came into the light of her lamp he was his old exalted self.

"What do you think happened?"

She was conscious now of voices. She heard somebody shout and a faint answer, but faint as it was, she recognized the voice. It was Dick's.

"What has happened?" she asked quickly.

He doubled up with silent laughter and could not speak for a minute, and then he showed her a knife.

"With that," he said complacently, "I saw him go down . . . . and then the rope came near . . . I could have touched it. Then I remembered I had my knife and I reached through and before they could pull it away I'd cut it."

She gazed at him in horror.

"Was somebody on the rope?" she gasped.

"The arch-enemy of the human race," he said in a sober tone. "Richard Alford."

Petrified with terror, she put her ear to the hole and heard Dick speaking. Then, without a word, she fled down the slope. Round and round the circular passage she went until she was almost dizzy. Presently she reached the lower air-hole, put through her hand and tore away the veiling weeds.

"Dick, Dick!" she called.

She could see him now, for the air-hole was just above water level. His face was gray and drawn.

"Dick!"

KING'S MATE

by Rosita Forbes

THE famous Englishwoman—traveler, explorer and writer—has done for The Tribune a new serial story the scene of which is laid in Algeria, where she has adventured so much. "King's Mate" is the story of a young English girl who, by a series of queer mishaps, stumbles upon the hidden stronghold of Abd-el-Krim, war-lord of the Riffs. What befell her there in the mountains of Algeria, her love for "The Kaid," a mysterious English soldier-of-fortune serving Krim, and her subsequent escape with him, make this story as fascinating and colorful as any we have ever published.

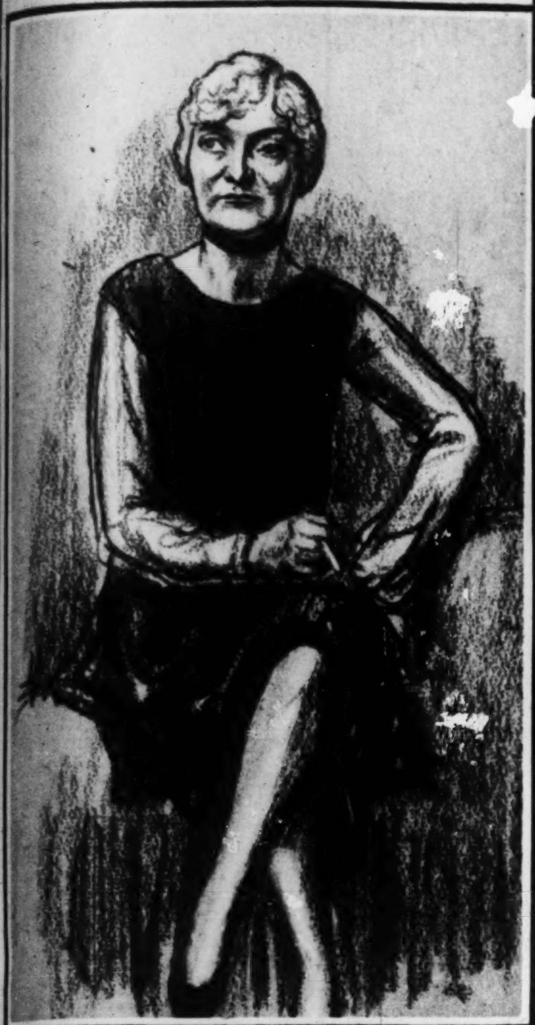
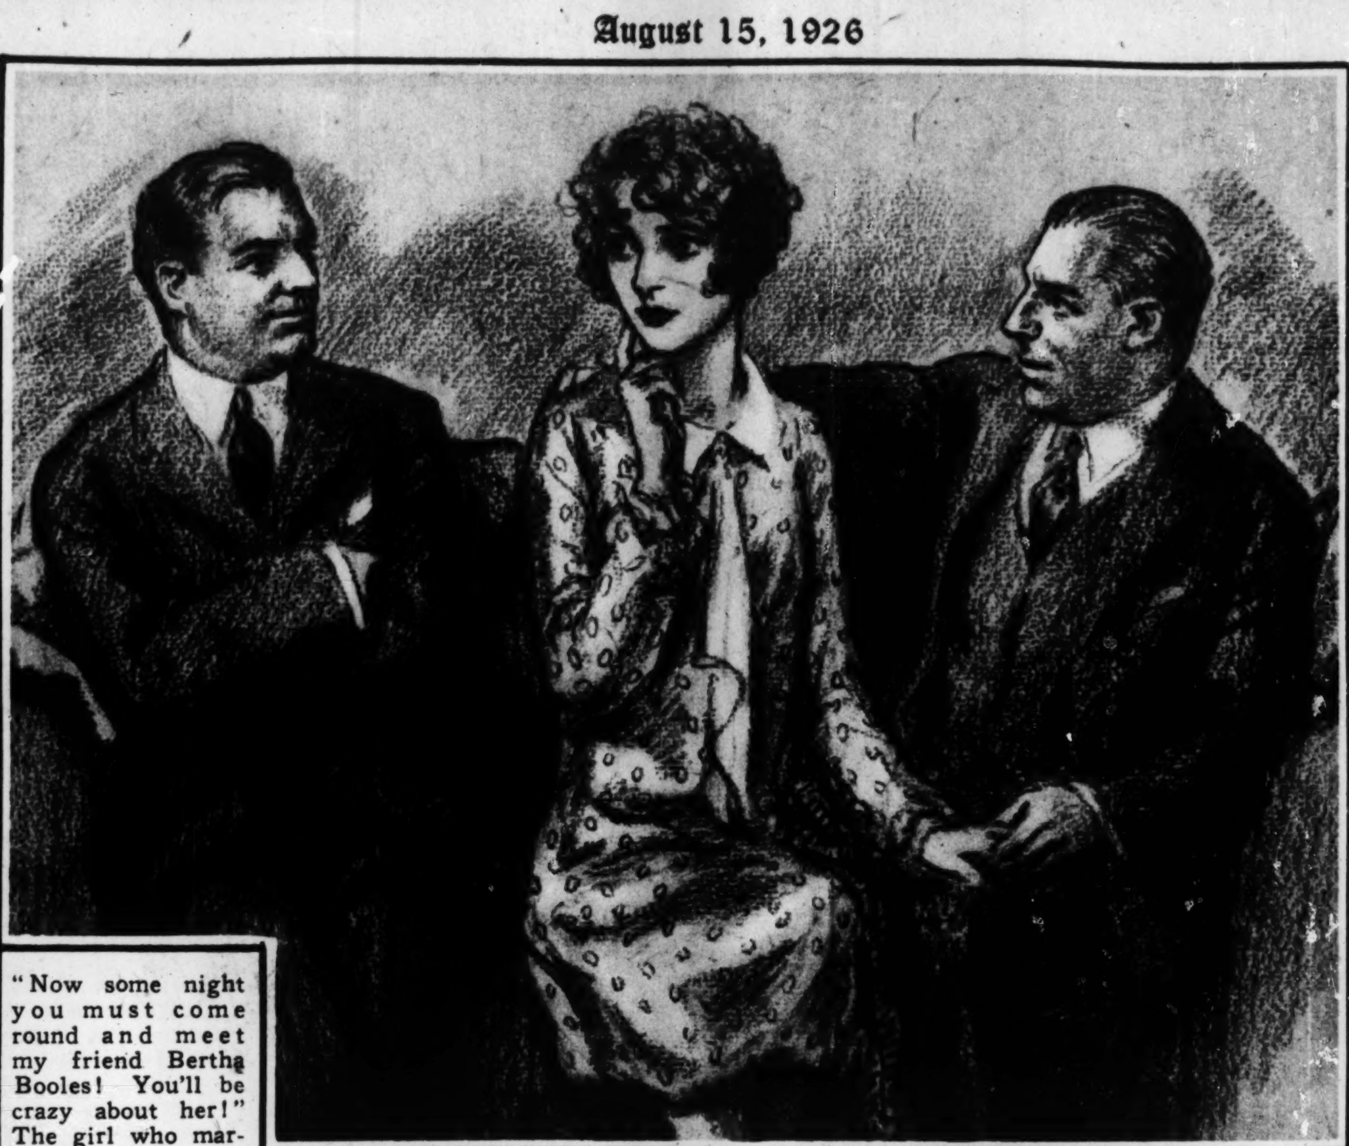
The Second Month

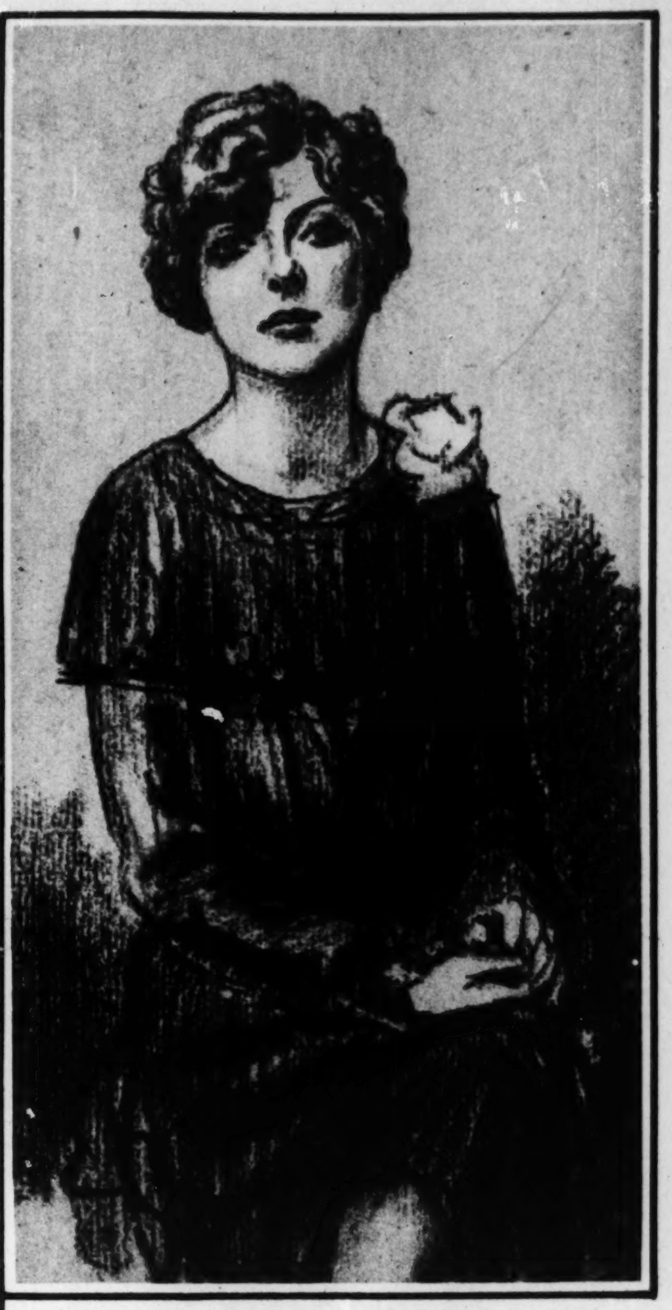
By W. E. Hill



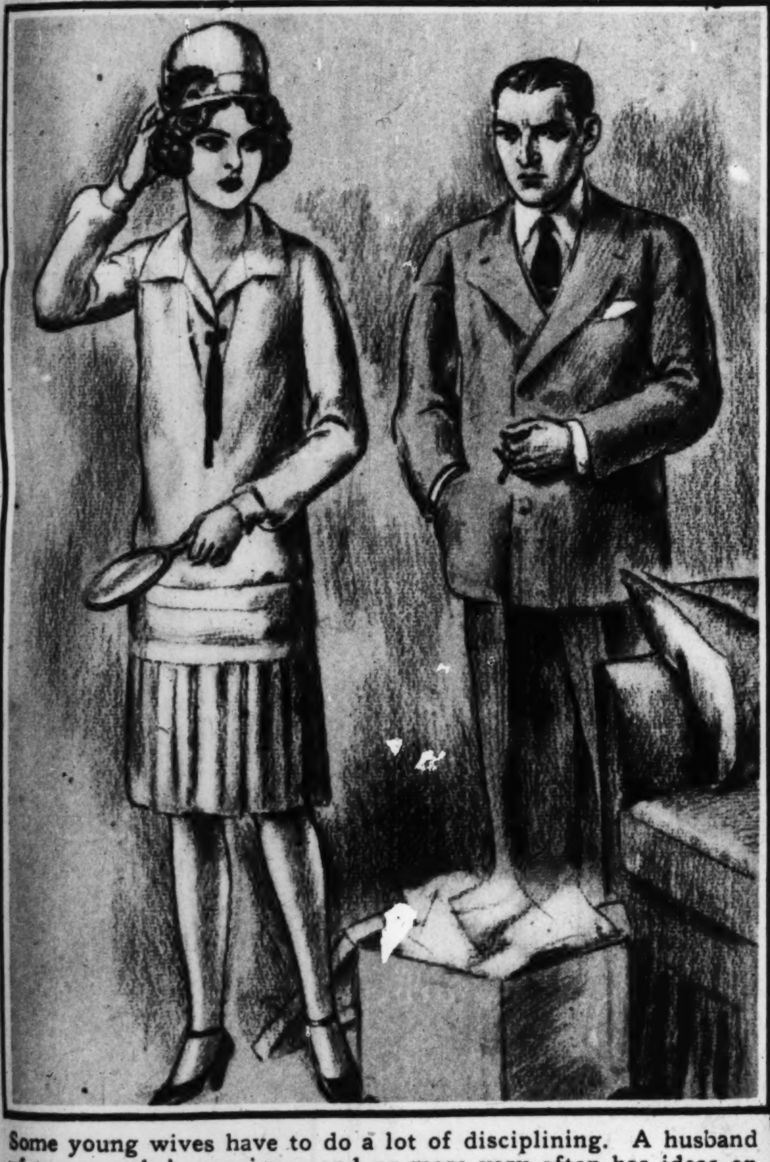
"Well, my dear, I lived with your father for twenty-five years and I never succeeded in changing him one bit." For the first month of their married life, Mr. Newlywed seemed just about perfect. And then about the middle of the second month Mrs. Newlywed decides that maybe there is after all room for improvement here and there. The bride's mother is proving an awful wet blanket.



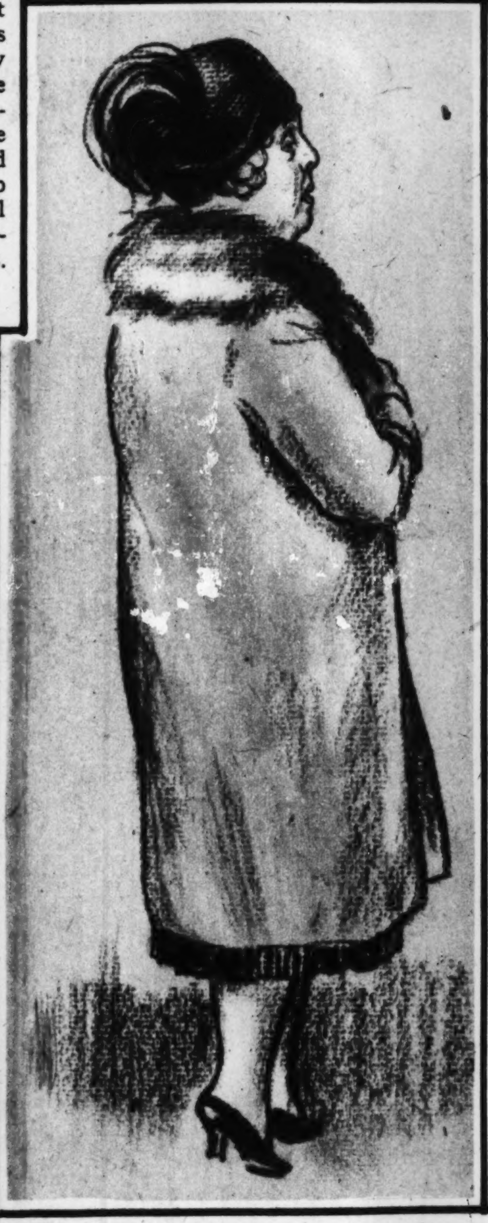
"Now some night you must come round and meet my friend Bertha Booles! You'll be crazy about her!" The girl who marries a bachelor just naturally dislikes her soul mate's boy friends who have dodged the marriage knot. By the end of the second month after the trip to the altar she will be deep in matchmaking possibilities.



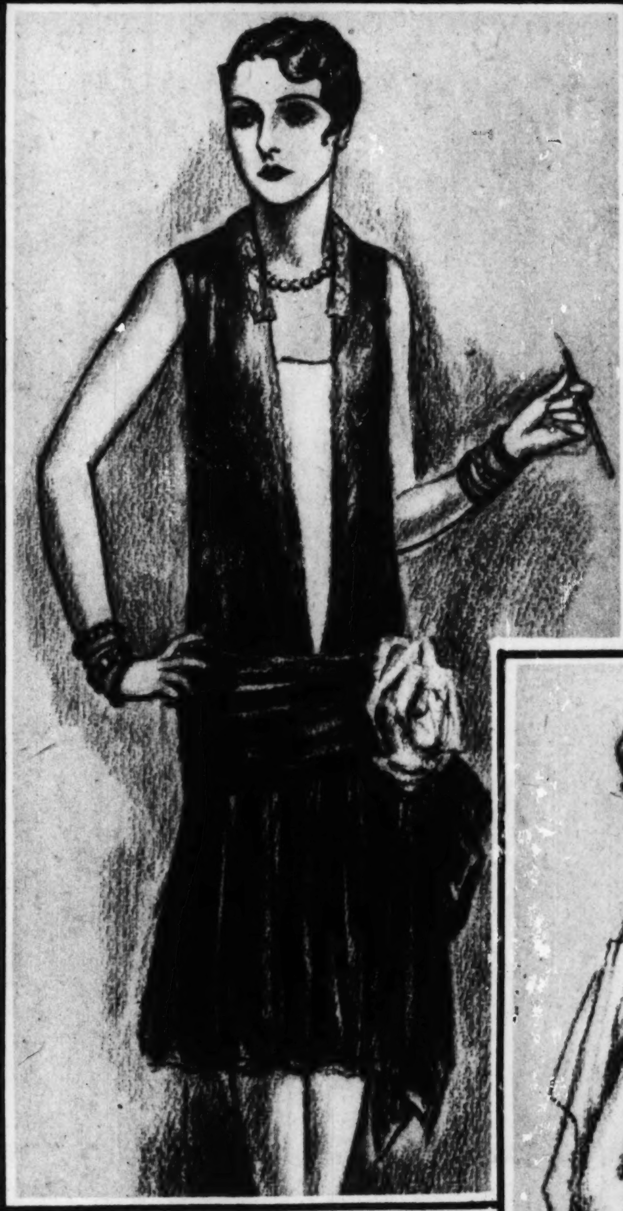
"Harry gets up and puts the coffee to boil and then I get up and cook the eggs; that is, unless we want to sleep late, and then he goes out for his breakfast. Then I get my own lunch, if there is anything in the ice box, and if there isn't, I run out for it if I want any. Then at four, Violetta, our part time maid, comes and tidies up the apartment and cooks dinner for us. We have it at six, except two or three nights a week when she has to leave early, and then if Harry can get home on time we have it at five-thirty, or else we go out. It's really a perfect arrangement and works beautifully." By the middle of the second month the bride has systematized her household wonderfully. She will tell you all about it on the slightest of provocations.



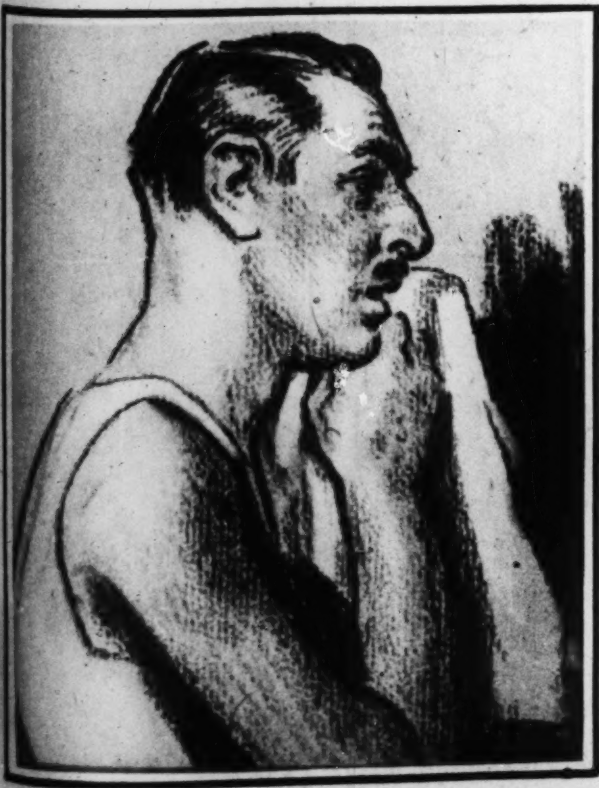
Some young wives have to do a lot of disciplining. A husband of two months' experience and no more very often has ideas on his wife's clothes. Sometimes he brings home a surprise. Drastic measures have to be taken when he buys a hat for her.



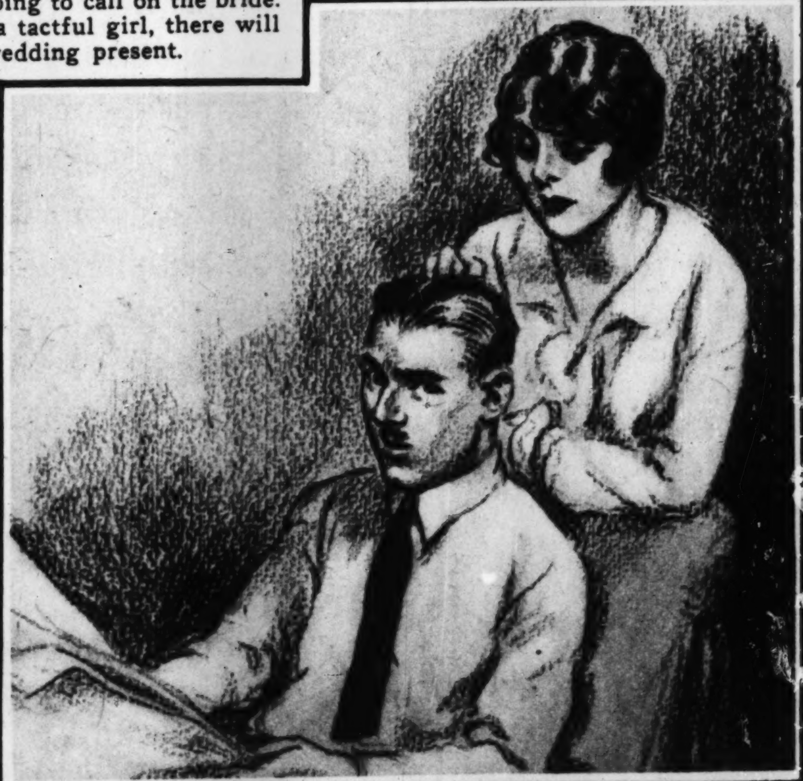
Meet Aunt Edna, who disapproved so strongly of Gracie's marriage that she was never again going to speak to Gracie. After a month and a half curiosity has proved too strong and here she is going to call on the bride. If Gracie is a tactful girl, there will be another wedding present.



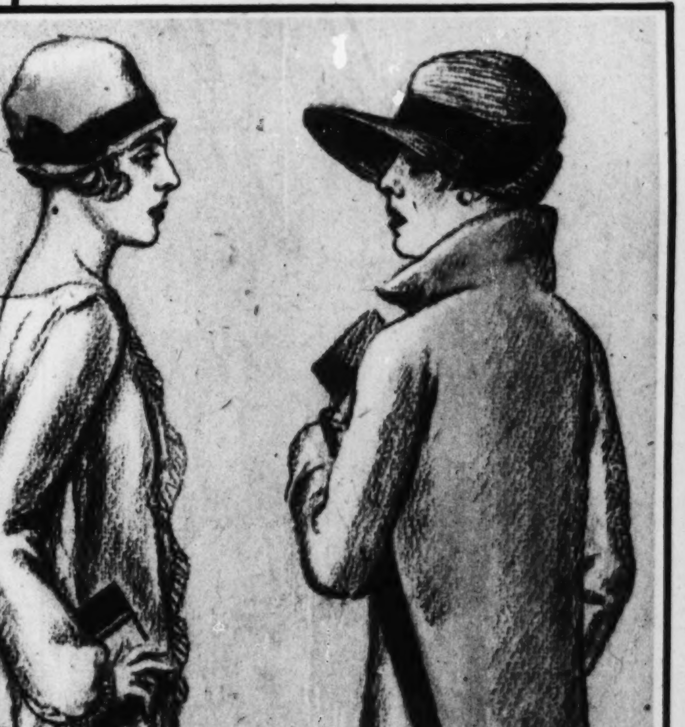
"And the maple highboy of your Aunt Sophie's—who will get that?" A better half of two months' standing beginning to look over the antiques in her husband's family.



"Say, dearie, come here a minute, will you? I've cut my chin again." Long before the end of the second month the little wife who has been united in so-called holy wedlock to a man with a tender skin will discover that she can never get anywhere on time. At the moment of starting she will have to apply first aid to honey's safety razor wound!



"Lucien, dear, you must get some good tonic and massage your scalp." By the second month of wedded bliss, a good deal of the bloom has worn off the husband. Love is love and all that, but the little wife begins to look at him carefully. For the first time she sights the spot on the top where the hair is thin. She will get him to part his hair on the other side.



Two gloomy girl friends, both unwed as yet, talking over the happy married pair. "Did you," asks Ethel, "ever see any one look so badly as she does? Why, she looks perfectly frightful, so thin and wan!" "Well, my dear," asks Edie of Ethel, "have you ever seen any one look worse than he does? A perfect skeleton! And only married two months! I knew they were going to grate on each other and be unhappy."

FERD JOHNSON
JESSIE, STOP THAT CRYING AND TELL ME WHAT IS THE MATTER- WHERE HAS YOUR UNCLE BEDFORD GONE?
I THINK HE'S GONE CRAZY, AUNT PANSY— I INTRODUCED HIM TO TEXAS AND HE LET OUT A TERRIBLE YELL AND HIT TEXAS IN THE NOSE AND THE LAST I SAW OF THEM, UNCLE BEDFORD WAS CHASING MY BOY FRIEND DOWN THE MIDDLE OF THE STREET.
